This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

D. APPLETON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

The Romance of an Empress.

Catharine II. of Russia. By K. WALISZEWSKI. With portrait. 12mo, cloth, $2.00.

"Few stories in history are more romantic than that of Catharine II. of Russia, with its mysterious incidents and thrilling episodes; few characters present more curious problems. . . . This volume, in which the empress is the grand central figure, gives striking pictures of the condition of the contemporary Russia which she did so much to mould as well as to expand. . . . Indeed, with her vices, and with all her faults, as M. Waliszewski has sketched her portrait, we can hardly help liking as well as admiring her."—London Times.

"The author has drawn valuable materials for the elaborate review he has given us from the state papers of the Russian government, from records of distinguished Russian families which have appeared only in recent years, and from the archives of the French Foreign Office; and he has brought together and confronted most of the writers who have left us their reminiscences of the imperial potentate. . . . The industry of the author deserves the highest praise. He has left nothing undone to make his work complete, and from first to last his chapters give proof of diligent research and thorough inquiry."—Edinburgh Review.

Darwiniana.

By THOMAS H. HUXLEY, author of "Physiography," "Manual of the Anatomy of Invertebrated Animals," etc. The second volume of the author's Collected Essays. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

These essays, ten in number, treat of evolution and the criticisms which followed the publication of "The Origin of Species," and endeavor to sum up Mr. Darwin's work and indicate its enduring influence on the course of scientific thought.

Science and Education.

By THOMAS H. HUXLEY. The third volume of the author's Collected Essays. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

The subjects comprised in this volume include: "Technical Education," "Medical Education," "The School Boards," "Science and Culture," "Universities: Actual and Ideal," "Emancipation: Black and White," "A Liberal Education and Where to Find It," and several other allied topics.

A Gray Eye or So.

By FRANK FRANKFORT MOORE, author of "I Forbid the Banns," "Highways and High Seas," etc. No. 131, Town and Country Library. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

"One of the most amusing and taking of contemporary modern novels. . . . The book is packed with vivacious cleverness of speech, sparkle of wit, and shrewdness of observation. It overflows with good things."—London Athenæum.

"A very bright and clever novel, written with unflagging liveliness and a vivacity that never fails."—St. James's Gazette.

"Mr. Frankfort Moore has a pretty wit of his own. He is a quick observer; he has a light touch; his irony is native, and so he has a special charm."—London Academy.

The Rudolph Indexer Book.

(Patented in the United States and all Foreign Countries.)

Method of Indexing is the same as that employed in the Rudolph Continuous Indexer.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER BOOK consists of a number of card-holders of heavy cardboard with one or two columns on both sides. On the back edge of each card-holder are two double hinges by which means other card-holders may be flexibly connected or disconnected.

Independent book-covers are furnished, and a book may thus be formed of one card-holder and later increased as desired. If the book becomes too bulky it may be separated and by adding covers two or more independent books formed.

The Rudolph Indexer Case.

(Patented in the United States and all Foreign Countries.)

Method of Indexing is the same as that employed in the Rudolph Continuous Indexer.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER CASE consists of a series of card-holders placed on their edges in a drawer, and they may be turned as the pages of a book, exhibiting at each view 272 single-line entries.

We furnish the INDEXER CASE in one, two, four, six and eight drawers.

The capacity of each drawer is thirty card-holders. As both sides of the card-holders are used it is equal to 8160 single-line entries.

The Rudolph Card Cutter.

(Patent Pending.)

This invention is for the purpose of cutting the entries or cards for insertion in the card-holders, but can also be used for many other purposes.

It is very important that all the slips to be inserted in the card-holders be cut at perfect right angles, in order that each entry will fit exactly to the others.

An unnecessary margin of only 1-32d of an inch on the top and 1-32d of an inch on the bottom of each entry will amount to 3½th inches of waste space on each card-holder.

The cutter will cut cardboard where spacing between the printed or written lines is 1-64th of an inch.

THE

(FRONT VIEW, SHOWING GLASS LID RAISED.)

THE LIBRARIAN'S DESIDERATUM.
THE MOST PERFECT INDEXER.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER SYSTEM possesses many advantages which recommend it to Publishers and Booksellers—in fact, to any one who has occasion to use lists of books, names or samples of goods, photographs, etc.

It is entirely flexible, allowing any number of entries to be placed in the INDEXER at any point.

It presents to the eye at one time as many entries as six pages of the American Catalogue.

Entries are protected from being soiled by exposure or handling.

Economy of space and economy of expenditure of both time and money.

The INDEXER stands 42 inches high and is 20 inches wide by 30 inches broad.

We shall be pleased to give further information and list of testimonials from leading librarians.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE SCHULTE PUBLISHING CO., 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, will publish in a handsome illustrated volume the papers read before the recent International Congress of Anthropology. The first edition will be limited to 500 copies. The price of the volume will be raised after publication.

GINN & CO. will publish next month in their International Modern Language Series an edition of Molière's "L'Avare" (the miser), edited with introduction, notes, and vocabulary by Théodore Henckels, of Harvard University. A bibliography of Molière, literary appreciations, a fulness of explanatory notes on the same page with the text, and a very complete vocabulary will make this edition most complete and serviceable. They will publish in March an "Examination Manual in Plane Geometry," prepared by G. A. Wentworth and G. A. Hill.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just ready Prof. George B. Adams' work on "Civilization During the Middle Ages, especially in relation to modern civilization," covering the period from 476 to 1520 A.D. They have also just issued the first volume of a "Philosophy of History," by Dr. Robert Flint, professor of divinity in the University of Edinburgh, whose great work contemplates in its entirety a history of the intellectual development of France, Germany, Italy, and England. The first of the three volumes just ready contains an analysis and discussion of historical philosophy in France and French Belgium.

MACMILLAN & CO. have nearly ready Mrs. J. R. Green's "Town Life in the Fifteenth Century," which deals with the times when towns were independent communities and centres of political life; also, a new book on "The Dawn of Astronomy," by J. Norman Lockyer, in which the author tells of the days when wonder and worship formed the prevailing feature in any consideration of the heavenly bodies, and traces in Egypt and Babylonia, in China and India, the beginnings of the scientific treatment of the subject. They have in preparation a biography of Joseph Jefferson, by William Winter, who has long been one of the actor's warm personal friends. It will be published in uniform style with Winter's volume on Booth, which is just entering upon its third edition.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS have just ready a genuine surprise to the book world in an illustrated edition of their "'Oxford' Teachers' Bible." It seemed hardly possible that anything further could be added either to the literary or typographical excellence of these fine editions, but the feat has been accomplished, and that in the consummate manner characteristic of this firm. The illustrations comprise sixty-four full-page plates, reproducing in fac-simile authentic documents, monuments, pictures, and portraits, illustrating the history of the Old and New Testaments. The "Helps," too, including a new series of maps, and frequent references to the Revised Version, are new in this edition, having been revised throughout by the soundest Biblical authorities, in accordance with the most recent investigations.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. have sold their New Review to William Heinemann, of London, who will make changes in its character by the introduction of stories and illustrations. One of the papers soon to appear is Walter Crane's account of his American impressions, to which he will contribute illustrations.

THE various children's magazines published by D. Lothrop Co. have begun the new year with excellent literary material and a wealth of illustrations. Babyland for January shows a frontispiece in eight colors of "The Christ-Child," and is full of stories with pretty pictures tempting to baby brains and eyes; Our Little Men and Women appeals to larger children, and its interesting contributions are of a more instructive order; while The Pansy takes still another step ahead, and for January treats of the Odyssey, the Christian Endeavor movement, and contains an article by Margaret Sidney on the life and work of John B. Gough.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

RETROSPECT AND PROSPECT.

IT is one of the regular duties of the newspaper profession to toll the passing bell for the old year and to ring joy bells for the new, and in accordance with that wholesome custom we bid our readers a Happy New Year. The year which is closed has not been altogether a happy one to the business community at large, but it is to be said that the publishing and bookselling trades have probably suffered less in comparison than most callings. While trade was dull enough, as travellers reported, for the months succeeding the financial crisis of the summer, it seems to be the general report that the holiday season was not unsatisfactory to the book trade, although not as money-making a season as it might well have been. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good," and the book trade has in a measure profited by the general economy that has moved buyers to purchase books in place of more expensive presents—possibly not to the harm of the recipients, for a good book is after all much better than most of the holiday gewgaws which cost vastly more.

There have, to be sure, been a number of failures during the past year, but many of these have been simply the result of reckless, or worse, publishing methods, and the immediate effect of some of them is likely to be to clear the way for more sound morale in the trade in the future. Some of these failures have been at the cost of members of the trade who have put more or less faith in the concerns which have gone under because they have repeated that process and "bobbed up serenely" so many times before. In one or two cases the failure of the past year has been really the third or fourth of the same concern, or the same individual under successive aliases. There was considerable fear at the time of the discussion of the affairs of the United States Book Company that the trade would suffer in case it were not "reorganized" at the expense of its creditors, because of the demoralization that would ensue from putting its great quantities of stock on the market. That evil has come and gone; and while it has had its effect on the trade, the results have probably not been as disastrous as were feared by many. One of the prominent dry-goods houses of New York advertised the stock of this and the affiliated concerns as low as nine cents a volume for cloth-bound (?) stock, and doubtless large sales were made at these low figures. It is unnecessary to remark in these columns that that price, however great a benefaction to the buyer, was an outrage upon the manufacturing community. Nevertheless its results upon the retail bookselling trade were probably felt comparatively little. It is, in fact, a question whether such sales, lamentable as they are in demoralizing production, are not useful in starting the distribution of books among a class of people not generally bookbuyers, and who are led from one class of bookbuying to another. We should not like to see this episode frequently repeated, but it is worth reminding the trade that the results have not been as direful as was feared.

The outlook for 1894 is undoubtedly brighter. The feeling in commercial circles is one of expectancy—not of an immediate "boom," but, on the whole, of increasing prosperity. Many of the unsettled questions in the field of politics and business will be behind us when mid-year comes, and while it is not expected that the spring will show definite revival of trade, there is a belief—apparently with fair justification—that the latter part of the year will witness the beginning of a period of prosperity, perhaps better grounded and more real than the "booms" of past years.

It is to be hoped that the book trade in the year to come will contribute its part toward this happy achievement. The great evil connected with our trade has been the fictitious system of prices, which has invited the "boom" method on the part of houses which have come into the book business from the dry-goods and other sides, and have been regarded as a menace to the regular bookseller. Their advantage has been largely in the system of prices still adopted by publishers. Some of them come into the field for a little time at the holiday season or on special occasions; others have come to stay, and have developed into bookselling establishments of essentially sound methods. It is a pity that the regular trade, so-called, should be put at disadvantage by the system of prices still in operation, and it is to be hoped that one of the results of the general tumbling to pieces of card houses during the crisis of last year may be a sounder basis for the business of bookselling as well as for other businesses.

THE SECOND ANNUAL SCRIBNER DINNER.

THIRTY-FIVE gentlemen sat down to the second annual Scribner dinner at the St. Denis Hotel on the evening of December 27. The firm was represented by Arthur H. Scribner, and the others present were: John H. Dingman, Samuel W. Marvin, Henry L. Smith, W. C. Brownell, Edwin W. Morse, William D. Moffat, John H. Offord, Robert G. Welsh, Josiah N. Wing, Frank Marling, Rudolph C. Stolle, Charles May, Ernest D. North, R. J. Safford, Charles Walton, E. T. S. Lord, Francis Gilman, J. A. Tyson, E. E. Ling, Arthur M. Barnes, Edward L. Burlingame, F. When the coffee had been served and the cigars lighted, the following toasts were responded to, Mr. Marvin, the toastmaster, introducing each speaker with a few felicitous words:

The world is good, and the people are good,
And we're all good fellows together."

Mr. Marvin struck the key-note of the evening in speaking of the spirit of unity and good-fellowship which had brought together so many men from the different departments of a single publishing house. Mr. Dingman gave some interesting reminiscences of the late Charles Scribner, the founder of the house, illustrating his high character both as a man and as a publisher. Mr. Marling made many humorous allusions to his fellow-workers and ended in a serious vein. Mr. Smith, with the aid of an ele-

Twenty-first and Twenty-second Streets. Mr. North told some good stories, and Mr. Wing gave an account of Christmas among the darkies. Mr. Welsh's thoughtful verses were a tribute to the pleasant memories connected with the building which the firm has occupied for nineteen years and which is to be vacated next spring. Mr. Bridges gave a witty description of the magazine "dummy" and its characteristics. Mr. Doubleday availed himself of the art of the caricaturist to give point to his amusing sallies. Finally Mr. Morse gave a song, all joining in the chorus.

Early in the dinner a despatch of compliments and good wishes had been sent to Charles Scribner, who was enjoying a holiday in Washington, and midway in the toasts a reply of thanks and congratulations was received from him and read. Thereupon Arthur Scribner spoke briefly. Mr. Burlingame and Mr. Perry also said a few words, and the evening ended with singing. The enjoyment of the occasion was largely due to the admirable arrangements which had been made for the dinner by the committee, Messrs. Stolle, Moffat, and Safford. The bill of fare was adorned with the reproductions of eight photographs of different interior views of the present building.

BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS.

NINTH ANNUAL BANQUET.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS were favored, as usual, by fine weather on the evening of December 28, when their annual banquet was held at the Marlborough Hotel, Thirty-sixth Street and Broadway, New York.

In point of numbers it was the most successful of any yet held by the Brotherhood, while in other respects the entertainment was fully equal to its predecessors.

Covers were laid for 110 guests, and very few failed to put in an appearance. The Committee of Arrangements, composed of Jonas Langfeld, George Vallerman, A. D. MacMullen, Will Jarchow, John H. Bacon, Dwight Terry, A. E. Turner, and H. S. Ridings had provided amply and in the most satisfactory manner for the members and their friends, and in this they were ably seconded by the Reception Committee, the members of which were Col. John H. Ammon, C. W. Cook, H. M. Caldwell, Desmond Fitz Gerald, Henry J. Epping, and W. S. Craig.

The menu, the sentiments for which were again composed in most happy style by J. C. Harvey, was enclosed in a serviceable sealskin wallet, the gift of Jonas Langfeld. The music was furnished by the Imperial Hungarian Gypsy Band, under the management of Guido Yaulas.

After the cloth had been removed, President John H. Black introduced the comedian J. W. Kelly, who favored the company with a recitation full of fun; Mr. J. C. Harvey read a humorous poem relating the career of a museum freak, in which book and stationery trade terms were used with happy effect; and William A. Powers then sang a couple of dialect songs.

The souvenir committee—W. J. Kelly, Frank O. Evans, and J. Frank Hitchcock—through Mr. Kelly next presented to the president the souvenir of the B. C. T., an ivory gavel suspended from a watered silk ribbon. Mr. Hitchcock presented to the president-elect, John Hovendon, as a recognition of his long and faithful services as secretary, a handsomely, gilt eagle's quill; while to Samuel Eckstein, the treasurer, was presented a huge gilt key. Both key and pen are to be worn as a mark of honor by the recipients at future banquets.

Among the entertainers of the party were Will Carleton, who recited his "Elder Lamb's Donation;" B. Russell Throckmorton read Joaquin Miller's "Columbus," and "Salvator Won the Race;" John L. Shepherd, president of the Jewellers' Association, told some brand-new "lies"; P. Daly, the comedian whose aim it is always to "be a gentleman, let it be ever so painful," was so overcome by his reception that he called upon his manager to speak for him. Letters were received from Mayor Gilroy and others expressing regret. Among the list was one from Lillian Russell, who thanked the Brotherhood cordially for voting her to be the most popular woman on the American stage, and said that she would have been glad to have been at the dinner had not a previous engagement prevented.

SLOPPY EDITIONS.

"MANY second-hand book-shops in New York," says a writer in a recent issue of the New York Sun, "are now selling by hundreds brand-new books made in a style of the art strange to most book-lovers. These books include many standard works. They are bound in cloth and sometimes illustrated. Binding, paper, and printing are all of the meanest and cheapest character, and the illustrations are of a piece with the physical characteristics of the books. Such books are manufactured by wholesale, as other cheap things are, to meet a special demand. They are seldom sold at all outside the second-hand shops save at a few dry-goods stores. They are sold by agents who deal upon commission, and who get what price they can for their wares so long as it is not below the cost of production. That is said to be as low as three and one-half cents per volume. The worst of these books are mean beyond anything that the dealer in cheap books usually has to sell. Some of them are designed to retail in the West at one dollar per volume; others at 50 cents, and others as low as 25 cents. They are sometimes sold in dry-goods stores in New York at eight cents per volume, and the price out West is all the way from that to what is called the publisher's retail price. They wholesale in the West at rates varying from six cents to sixteen or eighteen cents per volume.

"The recent tightness of money has brought many of these books to the shelves of local dealers in second-hand works. One dealer, who displays a great many, paid $35 per 1000 for the meanest of them, part of a lot held by a binder who could get paid for his work in no other way. These books were intended to retail at 25 cents. The second-hand dealer first displayed them at 10 cents per volume, and when the demand at that price slackened he reduced them to 7½ cents, and at length to 5 cents per volume. They are still selling, and the dealer has already begun to realize a profit on his purchase. He is selling with success at 25 cents per volume a lot of new cheap books of a somewhat better character. They are of the kind that country booksellers in the West sell at $1 per volume. Their paper is heavier and their type clearer and larger than those of the cheaper books."

POETS WHO PUBLISH THEIR POEMS.

THE pathos or really tear-starting part of the copyright records, according to the Librarian of Congress, relates to poetry. There are more books of poems in the National Library than the most careful and diligent student of American literature can imagine, and the sad thing about it is that by all odds the greatest number of these books are published by the authors themselves. In every other class of literature the copyrighted publications are mostly by large publishing houses, and the writers appear to have more or less the support of the reading public; but the poor poet, who appears to be the most persistent of all producers, appears to have to feed upon his own fancies and pay his own bills. Be the publishers as discriminating as they may, the copyright law has no favorites, and permits all who produce to claim the right of exclusive publication, and in the Congressional Library the volumes of the poetasters stand proudly by the side of the works of genius. Thousands of volumes of "Poems, published by the author," stand upon the shelves, and it is a revelation how many men and women, who would not attempt to write in prose, think that their wild fancies in a regular rhyme and stilted metre are worth preserving in print for posterity. In this class is found the very poorest example of literary effort. The number of productions of truly good poetry in this country is, however, increasing with considerable rapidity.

OBITUARY NOTES.

HENRY VIZETELLY, the well-known publisher, died in Farnham, Eng., on the 1st inst., at the age of seventy-four. He was born in London. In early life he was a wood-engraver, and was one of the first artists of the Illustrated London News. He became a publisher for the avowed purpose of introducing the works of Edgar Allan Poe and Harriet Beecher Stowe to the English people. He also published "Evangeline" and "Hyperion," with illustrations by Sir John Gilbert and Birket Foster, which have retained their charms and their artistic value. During the Franco-Prussian War he acted as the correspondent at the seat of war for the Illustrated London News. He remained in Paris for some time after the war, becoming intimately acquainted with the literature of France, and in 1880 decided to publish it in England. Then, to quote the New York Times, "came a series of books which were a revelation of the delicate art of the French vignettists of the eighteenth century, in such works as Dorat's 'Les Baisers' and Montesquieu's 'Temple de Guide;' of the luxuriant art of the romanticists, in such works as Théophile Gautier's 'Mademoiselle de Maupin;' of the admirably objective art of the realists, in such works as Gustave Flaubert's 'Salammbo.' His translations were almost perfect. There had never been as faithful transcriptions of stories from one language into another; there had never been as truly artistic renderings of French art into English literary form, and Vizetelly was encouraged by the praise which his work commanded for its technical skill to attempt to anglicize Zola's 'Rougon-Macquart.'" After the publication of "L'Assommoir" he was warned that he would be prosecuted if he continued. But he continued, and in July, 1889, despite the protests of influential people, was condemned, at the instigation of a society for the suppression of obscene literature, to imprisonment for three months. Pinero, Walter Besant, Lynn Lynton, Henry Irving, Edmund Yates, Archibald Forbes, and George Augustus Sala signed in vain a monster petition for Vizetelly's pardon. His books were confiscated, his business was ruined, and since then he was a broken and despondent man, to whom death came as a relief.

WILLIAM D. BANCKER, general superintendent of the American News Company, was found dead in bed at his home, No. 430 Clinton Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., on the morning of December 29. Mr. Bancker's death is attributed to neuralgia of the heart. Although he had been suffering from a pain in the region of the heart on Thursday, he retired that night in apparently good health. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., about 59 years ago, and began business with the publishing firm of Dick & Fitzgerald. He went into business a few years later on his own account, and his business was afterward bought out by the New York News Company, and Mr. Bancker was made manager. This position he held until 1879, when he was made secretary of the American News Company, and in 1885 he was made its general manager. Mr. Bancker was a member of the Montauk, Union League, Oxford, Germania, and Crescent clubs. He leaves a widow, four sons, and one daughter.

SIR SAMUEL W. BAKER, the distinguished African explorer and author, died December 30, aged 72 years. He was a prolific writer. Among his books are: "The Rifle and the Hound in Ceylon," 1854; "Eight Years' Wanderings in Ceylon," 1855; "The Albert Nyanza, Great Basin of the Nile, and Explorations of the Nile Sources," 1866; "The Nile Tributaries of Ayssinia and the Sword-Hunters of the Hamram Arabs," 1867; "Cast Up by the Sea," a story, 1869; "Ismailia: a narrative of the expedition to Central Africa for the suppression of the slave trade; arranged by Ismail, Khedive of Egypt," 1874; "Cyprus as I Saw It in 1879;" "My Tales for My Grandsons," 1883, and "Wild Beasts and Their Ways," 1890.

THE Indian mails that reached London on the 28th ult. announce the death of Charlotte Tucker, known best by the initials of "A. L. O. E." (A Lady of England). For the last eighteen years Mrs. Tucker has been engaged in missionary work in India, where the proceeds of her pen have been used to benefit the missions, and it is understood that all money earned by her works after death is also to be placed at the disposal of the Indian missions.

WILLIAM CHILVER, for a number of years commercial traveller for McLoughlin Brothers, died at his home in Jersey City, on the 2d inst., aged 40 years. Mr. Chilver early in the '80's was connected with Chas. T. Dillingham, whom he left to represent Porter & Coates. About eight years ago he became connected with McLoughlin Brothers. He leaves a wife and four children.

EUSEBIO GUITERAS, a widely known author of Spanish and French works, and for many years a resident of West Philadelphia, Pa., was buried on the 29th of December, from his home, No. 3720 Chestnut Street.

ERNEST LAMBERT, assistant editor of The Forum, died at Southern Pines, N. C., on the 30th ult., aged thirty.

IT is reported that a leading Bostonian and a lover of solid literature has only with difficulty been prevailed upon to omit from his will a clause prohibiting his first heir from inheriting the bulk of his property if the said heir "habitually reads newspapers."

THE man who was said to be the original of Charles Dickens' Barnaby Rudge lately died in Chatham, England. His name was Walter de Brisac, and he was a packman by profession. He was educated far in advance of his class, and was a clever talker. Dickens, while living at Gad's Hill, often strolled into Chatham and held many conversations with the man. One of the things that made De Brisac conspicuous was that he was always dressed in the costume of the Georgian period.

PICK-UPS.

TO LARRY HUTTON.

From The Bookbuyer.

You may write it LAURENCE, all you please,
Your name to Fame to marry;
But you're only whistling down the breeze,
For folks will call you LARRY.
And if the reason you inquire,
I'll tell you all I know:
Why is Joseph Jefferson, Esquire, Called JO?

You may spell your LAURENCE with a U,
Till it's Scotch as a green glengarry,
But other folks are naming too;
And your name they say is LARRY.
And if you're curious in the least
To know what that comes from:
Why was T. Bowling, late deceased,
Called TOM? H. C. BUNNER.

NUTLEY, N. J., Oct. 19, 1893.

WANTED THE EARTH.—Lady Customer: I'd like to get a pen.—Bookseller: Yes, ma'am, here is a nice smooth writing one—Lady Customer: Have yees one with a handle to it? (Paralysis ensued.) Actual occurrence in a Western bookstore. E. M. W.

ITS MAIN DEFECT.—Skriblet: I don't see what is the matter with this story. I have sent it to a dozen magazines and they all refused it.—Wright: Lemme see. You laid the improbable plot of it about a hundred years ahead, didn't you?—Skriblet: Yes.—Wright: Well, that's what's the matter with it. That would be about the time they would wish to print it if it were accepted.—Indianapolis Journal.

NOTES IN SEASON.

HUNT & EATON have just brought out a new illustrated edition of "No!," Rose Terry Cooke's excellent story for young people, first published a number of years ago. They have also issued a new edition of Mrs. S. S. Robbins' Rock Cove Series in six volumes, and "The Gillettes," in six volumes, by the same writer.

ROBERTS BROTHERS will publish at once "Public Libraries in America," by W. I. Fletcher, librarian of Amherst Library and the compiler of "Poole's Index to Periodical Literature," the "A. L. A." and "Annual Literary" indexes. The work, which has been delayed for the addition of considerable statistical and other matter in the form of appendices, will have a number of full-page illustrations, and, of course, an ample index.

MCLOUGHLIN BROTHERS will publish, by arrangement with the Deutsche Verlags-Anstalt, a new illustrated edition of "Grimm's Fairy Tales." The German publishing firm has furnished duplicates of the original 180 wood-cuts, so that the McLoughlin edition will in every respect be equal to the German. McLoughlin Brothers also call attention to their full lines of valentines, which range from the inexpensive ordinary comics to the more expensive souvenirs of the season. Among the latter, their new lace valentines are revelations in the way of dainty elegance and beauty.

D. APPLETON & CO. have just ready "The Romance of an Empress," in which the remarkable career of Catherine II. of Russia is set forth in the light of new historical discoveries, by K. Waliszewski; an important new work on "Germany and the Germans," by W. Harbutt Dawson, who has made a remarkably close and discriminating study of German life and institutions of the present day; also, a new story in their Town and Country Library, entitled "Earlscourt: a story of provincial life," by Alexander Allardyce, one of the rising English writers. They also announce a new novel by Maarten Maartens, entitled "The Greater Glory."

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready the third volume of "The Writings and Correspondence of Thomas Jefferson," edited by Paul Leicester Ford; also, the first volume of "The Writings of Thomas Paine," edited by Moncure D. Conway, and issued uniform in style with Mr. Conway's "Life of Paine." The "Writings" of Paine will be comprised in four volumes and will be also issued in a limited edition of one hundred and fifty copies, uniform with the limited editions of the "Writings" of Washington, Jefferson, etc. They have also published "The Religion of a Literary Man," by Richard Le Gallienne, characterized by the Academy as "probably the sunniest book on religion ever published;" and "The Story of Japan," by David Murray, a new volume in the Story of the Nations Series.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish on the 20th the long-expected "Life and Correspondence of Dean Stanley," the ripe results of the long and careful labor of R. E. Prothero, recently chosen editor of the Quarterly Review; also, a new book by Dr. James McCosh, entitled "The Philosophy of Reality," which will consist of two parts, the first discussing "Reality: what place it should hold in Philosophy;" the second, "The Prevailing Types of Philosophy: can they logically reach Reality?" The Scribners will publish shortly Augustine Birrell's new volume of essays, "Men, Women, and Books," which covers a variety of interesting topics treated in the author's well-known brilliant, original manner; a new work by Prof. George T. Ladd, of Yale University, entitled "Psychology, Descriptive and Explanatory," a treatise on the phenomena and development of human mental life; and a handy "Chess Pocket Manual," by the well-known authority, C. H. D. Gossip, which is not merely a guide to the openings of chess, but directs beginners safely into the labyrinths of the game, with diagrams of exceptional and instructive positions, and a collection of carefully selected illustrated games by acknowledged celebrities.

Addresses delivered before the Sixth Annual Interdenominational Seaside Bible Conference, held at Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 11-21, 1893. Traces in story form an affection between a boy and girl, with its various changes—and their final marriage, after their school days. He enlists the sympathy both of a young girl, the daughter of an African missionary, whose mother was a half-caste, and a learned Cambridge professor. Whether "the quickening of Caliban" comes from love or knowledge is left to the reader to decide.

Ross, Albert, [pseud. for Linn Boyd Porter.] Young Miss Giddy. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1893 [1894.] c. '93. 4+343 p. D. (The Albatross novels.) pap., 50 c. [117

"Young Miss Giddy" gives the author an opportunity to describe a pleasant journey through Florida, New Orleans at Mardi Gras time, Texas, and Mexico. It also enables him to answer a woman writer who, in a Boston newspaper, recently expressed the belief that young girls inclined to misbehave would do so in spite of chaperonage. One of the heroines of the story is the daughter of a millionaire, the other of a carpenter. The story opens in New York City.

Russell, W. Clark. The emigrant ship. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1894.] c. '93. 3+348 p. D. cl., $1. [118

Charles Morgan becomes the mate of a merchant ship sailing from Bristol ostensibly for Cape Town: he discovers that it has no cargo, and that the captain and owner are a pair of scoundrels who intend to scuttle the ship for the insurance; he shows them that he knows their plans and he is quickly put ashore on a desert island. After being rescued and having many adventures, he falls in with a ship which by a series of mishaps has lost its officers and has no one to navigate it, and takes command of it. It is an emigrant ship with one hundred girls aboard bound for Australia, and the crew had decided to land on an uninhabited island and form a colony, having persuaded some of the girls to join them. Here begins again a series of wonderful adventures.

On the eve of his marriage he reads in an English paper of the sudden death of three relatives, which makes him heir to a peerage. The story deals with his wife's advent in London society, the admiration she excites, an estrangement that comes between them, and her method of winning back her husband's love.

This romance is founded strictly on history. Documents published by the Russian Imperial Society and other materials scattered in obscure Russian periodicals are the main foundations for the author's work. The life of Queen Catharine embraced the years from 1729 to 1794, one of the most interesting historical periods of the world. The author is fearless and gives most interesting details of Russian life. The book has been forbidden in Russia.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

GEORG EBERS has nearly ready a new novel entitled "Cleopatra."

GEORGE MOORE has written a study of the life and works of Zola, which appears in the January number of the English Illustrated Magazine. "Esther Waters" is to appear in January. Mr. Moore has largely rewritten that part of "Esther Waters" which has already been given to the public.

"PRINCESS" JOHNSON, of the Mohawk tribe of Canada, has taken Boston by storm with recitals of her poems. "She is," so says the New York Sun, "perhaps the most unique figure in the literary world of this country. She is a Mohawk, the daughter of Owanonsyshon ('the man with a big house'), the well-known chief of the Six Nations. Her father was a cultivated man, and her mother came from an English family.'

FRANCIS PARKMAN, the historian, left in the keeping of the Massachusetts Historical Society a brief autobiography, which will be included in the biography of Parkman which is to be prepared by Dr. Ellis. Mr. Parkman left an estate valued at $195,950. This does not include a summer estate at New Castle, N. H., copyrights, stereotype plates, and contracts, these being of uncertain value. The real estate is valued at $55,000, and the personal property at $140,950.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JANUARY 13, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

A NOTE IN SEASON.

IN reading the reports of the various trades, the closing of mills and factories, the stagnation in new undertakings, and retrenchment generally during the past year, we realize that the book trade has reason to congratulate itself upon its undiminished activity. Amid all the discouraging surroundings and commercial disaster it has accomplished a year's work as a producer, at least, that surpasses all its previous records. The American publishers have issued more books during 1893 than in any previous year, the books recorded by us being over two hundred more than in 1892, and the titles recorded by the Librarian of Congress exceeding the record of the previous year by over 3000. Detailed statistics of the activity of the book trade will be given as usual in our Annual Summary Number, which will be published in the last week of this month.

This issue, by the way, has come to be regarded by the bookseller and librarian as one of the most important published by our office. It contains, as we need not remind those acquainted with the previous issues of the number, not only a complete list of the books recorded by us during the past year, by author, title, and subject, but a comprehensive summary of the leading books in every department as well as statistics of the book production of England and France, and the lists of the leading publishers' A more complete and compact working tool for the book trade we venture to say is not published in any other country. We need therefore hardly point out the advantages to the publishers—especially the lesser known—to be represented by full lists of their books of 1893 in its advertising pages. Every book represented in our lists should also have its place, accompanied if possible by a concise descriptive note, in our advertising pages. Such amplification of the hint given by our list and summary would prove useful to the bookseller in looking up or ordering the book, and must redound to the profit of the publisher concerned. The larger houses do not need this reminder, and the smaller ones will also be able to dispense with it when once they have recognized the force of our suggestion.

To make the measure of misery of the foreign exhibitors at Chicago complete came the disastrous fire on the 8th inst., destroying the Liberal Arts Building, in which were stored, among others, a large part of the French book exhibit, the German University exhibits, and others, nearly all of which are probably ruined, if not by fire, by water. Fortunately the more expensive and valuable books and exhibits had long ago been removed. Yet the loss undoubtedly will still be a serious one, and the disagreeable impression on the minds of the foreign exhibitors will be lasting. It is to be deplored, under the circumstances, that a more liberal policy should not have been adopted by the customs authorities at Chicago, so that our guests from abroad, who so generously contributed to the success of the Exposition, might have packed up or disposed of their exhibits, and returned to their homes within a month after the fair closed. As it was, many of the foreign exhibitors experienced considerably more annoyance in placing the gifts made to a government department or public institution than they should have had in disposing of goods sold during the exhibition.

THE D. LOTHROP CO. FAILURE.

THE D. LOTHROP CO. failed on January 5, with estimated liabilities of about $225,000. The obligations are considerably over $200,000, and may amount to $250,000. The assignment was voluntary, for the benefit of creditors, Louis D. Brandeis being the assignee. While the failure was unexpected, it did not come as a great surprise to the book trade of Boston, as it has for some time been an open secret that the house was having an uphill fight. Soon after Mr. Lothrop's death two years ago the retail business was discontinued and the large store on Washington Street, opposite Bromfield, was sold out. Then Wide Awake, the most popular and successful of their children's magazines, was disposed of to the Century Co., and consolidated with St. Nicholas. Recently the affairs of the company are said to have reached a point where it was necessary either to make an assignment or to borrow money with which to continue the business. Several large notes falling due at this time, and the inability of the company to meet them, was the immediate cause of the failure. Mr. Brandeis, through his law-partner, G. H. Nutter, stated that the assignment was not forced in the slightest respect; probably an extension could have been secured from creditors and the crisis tided over for a time, but the assignment would have had to come ultimately, and it was thought better to make it now than later.

The assignment is attributed to two causes—the death of Daniel Lothrop, the head of the house, in 1892, since which time the affairs of the concern have not had the same efficient management, and the existing business depression, which seriously affected the firm. The liabilities are definitely stated as between $200,000 and $250,000; but no specific estimate has so far been made as to the assets. The stock is large and includes, besides books on hand, plates, presses, etc., but its value is somewhat problematical.

The corporation of the D. Lothrop Company was organized by D. Lothrop & Co., and was controlled by the late Daniel Lothrop and his brothers John and James. Since Mr. Lothrop's death, his widow, who as "Margaret Sidney" is well known as a writer of children's stories, has been practically at the head of affairs. It is understood that D. Lothrop & Co. control the popular "Pansy" books and some other of the more important publications. The house has for about thirty years been prominently identified with American juvenile literature. It had its beginning in 1850, when Mr. Lothrop bought the stock of books held by Elijah Wadleigh at Dover, N. H., enlarged the business, and developed it successfully; but it was not fairly launched in the trade until the close of the war, when Mr. Lothrop established himself in Boston, and gradually built up a large and thriving publishing business. Later he issued Wide Awake, a magazine for young people, which soon attained a very large circulation; then came Babyland, Our Little Men and Women, and The Pansy.

It is probable that the magazines Pansy, Babyland, and the other serials will not be interrupted in their publication, but will be continued under the authority of the assignee. There has as yet been no definite statement as to whether there will ultimately be insolvency proceedings or whether the business will be reorganized and continued, though the latter is more than probable.

EXHIBIT OF AMERICAN WOOD-CUTS IN BERLIN.

Mr. H. C. Joes, president of the Art Department of the Chicago's World's Fair, has co-operated with Regierungs-Rath Lippmann, the director of the Royal Copperplate Museum, to bring about an exhibition of the work of the Society of American Wood-Engravers in the German capital. Mr. J. P. Davis, the president of the society, has undertaken to have the wood-engravings that were on exhibition at the fair, which include some of the finest work of recent years, shipped to Germany, where they will be placed in one of the rooms of the National Gallery at Berlin, and made free to the public. There will also be included some of the reproductions of paintings in other forms of the reproductive arts, which will add to the interest of the exhibit of the wood-engravings, an art in which America has reached almost perfection.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

MAYNARD, MERRILL & CO. VS. WILLIAM BEVERLEY HARISON.

Maynard, Merrill & Co. on Jan. 4 began suit in the U. S. Circuit Court, New York, against William Beverley Harison, of 59 Fifth Avenue, for violation of the copyright law. The violation of copyright charged is as remarkable as it is novel, and the case certainly deserves to be recorded among the curiosities of copyright. Maynard, Merrill & Co. claim that on July 23, 1891, Alonzo Reed copyrighted a work on the elementary study of the English language, the exclusive right to publish and sell the same being vested in Effingham Maynard & Co. The latter firm was soon after succeeded by Maynard, Merrill & Co., to whom the right was transferred. In the spring of 1893 Maynard, Merrill & Co. state that they began the printing of the book and delivered the sheets, covers, etc., to George W. Alexander, of 108 W. 18th Street, for binding. On June 21 Mr. Alexander's bindery was destroyed by fire and its contents badly damaged. It is alleged that the débris was passed upon as worthless by the insurance adjusters, and Mr. Alexander thereupon engaged some Italian junkmen to remove it. The latter, it is claimed by the plaintiffs, collected some of the sheets of Mr. Reed's books and some of the bound copies, the impaired and soiled sheets being bound into volumes much like the originals. In conclusion Maynard, Merrill & Co. say that since June, 1893, W. B. Harison has sold and exposed for sale a number of copies of the book, made up from damaged and soiled sheets, in violation of the original copyright, and they ask that Mr. Harison be required to appear and testify as to how many books he may have sold, or may have on hand; whether he has put the printed leaves in book form; whether he has any of the sheets now on hand; and upon a number of other points.

The defendant denies that he has taken sheets and bound them into volumes much like the original, and claims that he simply took the damaged bound books, that were on the market through the connivance of the plaintiffs, and had them repaired. We understand that the defendant advised the complainants at once, upon receipt of notice that they considered their rights infringed upon, that he was willing to adjust matters satisfactorily if he were in the wrong, and that he was willing to submit the matter to a referee and abide by the latter's decision.

THE LIABILITY OF A PUBLIC LIBRARY FOR CIRCULATING LIBELS.

A rather curious libel action against the authorities of the British Museum Reading-Room will shortly be tried in London, in which very eminent counsel have been engaged. A pamphlet was printed in America which contained an alleged libel upon a well-known American lady, who has taken a very prominent part in political matters and in social reform. The authorities of the British Museum obtained a copy of this pamphlet, and added it, we understand, to the library, so that it was accessible to the public which uses the museum's reading-room. The plaintiff considers that in doing so the authorities have made themselves liable for uttering or circulating the alleged libel, and it is upon these grounds that she is bringing her action.

COMMUNICATIONS.

EXTENSION OF THE SATURDAY HALF HOLIDAY.

NEW YORK, January 8, 1894.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: The extension of the Saturday half holiday is of vital importance to those engaged in the book and stationery trade.

It is the prevailing opinion of the employers and those holding responsible positions in our large houses that the Saturday half holiday might be extended from March to November.

Such houses as Macmillan & Co., and Longmans, Green & Co. extend fully that time, and such houses as Charles Scribner's Sons, Dodd, Mead & Co., and the house I am with, G. P. Putnam's Sons, grant from May and June to September inclusive, and might be easily induced to make the extension provided other houses could be brought into line.

Will you kindly take up the question by securing the views of those in the trade and have granted this great boon for recreation and consumption of literature? P. N. JOHNSTON.

IN RE THE PUBLICATION OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE PARLIAMENT OF RELIGIONS.

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 4, 1893.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: Referring to your notice of the various editions of the Proceedings of the Parliament of Religions in the issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for December 23, 1893, we desire to explain that the work edited by Rev. Dr. John Henry Barrows is the only one officially authorized by the Columbian Exposition. The addresses published in the two volumes are, with only a few exceptions, from the original MSS. and not from stenographic reports. Of the 165 speakers, 149 have declared that no person is authorized to publish their papers except the Parliament Publishing Co. Dr. Barrows gave very nearly three years of his time to the promotion of the Parliament of Religions and is in possession of many facts not known to any one else. Such facts referred to are letters of acceptance, letters of objection to the Parliament of Religions, and other correspondence that came to him personally as chairman of the Religious Congress. Very few of these were made public, and, of course, are published only in Dr. Barrows' work. Therefore we do not think it is far from the truth to say that Dr. Barrows' work is the most reliable, the most authentic, and the authorized edition of the World's Parliament of Religions. We do not claim that no one else has a right to issue an account of the proceedings of the World's Parliament of Religions, but we believe it just to the public that they know the above facts.

It is not our object to do any other publisher an injustice. J. A. HILL & Co.,

Eastern Agents of the Parliament Pub. Co.

OBITUARY.

EDWARD SPENCER MEAD.

EDWARD SPENCER MEAD, of the firm of Dodd, Mead & Co., died on the 10th inst., at his home in Southampton, Long Island. Ten days ago he was seized with the grippe, and that, with Bright's disease, caused his death. Mr. Mead was born in New York City forty-seven years ago. His father died when the son was in his infancy, and he was brought up in the family of his uncle, Robert Hoe, the printing-press manufacturer. After obtaining his early education in New York, he entered Yale University, from which institution he was graduated in the class of '69. Soon afterward he married the daughter of John S. C. Abbott, the historian. In 1870 he and Mr. Frank H. Dodd bought out the publishing business of M. W. Dodd, the latter's father. Mr. Mead had charge of the larger part of the literary department while Mr. Dodd looked after the manufacturing end. In addition to his other duties, Mr. Mead found time to write several books, and also translated some works of French authors. Mr. Mead belonged to the University, Century, and Tuxedo clubs, the Yale Alumni Association, and was a trustee of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Formerly he belonged to the Players' Club. In Southampton he belonged to the Meadow and Golf clubs. He was a member of the Episcopal church at Southampton. His wife survives him. There are no children.

OBITUARY NOTES.

W. W. HUTCHINSON, formerly a bookseller in Appleton, Wis., died at Riverside, Ill., last month.

ANTON WITTER, of the firm of C. Witter, established in St. Louis, Mo., in 1850, and one of the best known among the Western German booksellers, died on the 20th ult.

JOHN PARKER, one of the oldest booksellers of St. Louis, Mo., died recently at St. Luke's Hospital in that city. He was eighty-two years old and went to St. Louis from Cecil County, Maryland, where he was born.

FRANCIS B. MOHUN, for many years a business man in Washington, D. C., died suddenly on the 18th ult. Mr. Mohun with his brother opened a book-store on Brentano's corner in 1879, and continued in business there until 1883. He then organized the Riggs Fire Insurance Co. He was secretary of the company at the time of his death.

FRANÇOIS BOUSSOD.—A few months ago we regretted to announce the death of Goupil, the founder of the celebrated business now known as Boussod & Valadon. M. François Boussod, for forty years M. Goupil's untiring fellow-worker, has now also died, after a long and painful illness, at the age of sixty-seven. One of M. Boussod's sons married a daughter of the painter Gérôme, who himself had married a daughter of Goupil, so that the families were closely related by marriage. M. René Valadon, the surviving member of the firm, is also a son-in-law of M. Boussod. At the time of M. Goupil's death we gave the history of the house.

ELIZABETH P. PEABODY died on the 3d inst., at her home in Jamaica Plain, Mass., in her 94th year. She was one of the advanced educators of the century. Miss Peabody succeeded Margaret Fuller as teacher of history in Mr. Alcott's school in Boston. She was prominent among the agitators for the abolition of slavery and for the higher education of women. At the age of 60 she learned the Polish language because of her interest in the struggles of Poland for liberty. Her literary productions include "Æsthetic Papers," "Crimes of the House of Austria," "The Polish-American System of Chronology," "Reminiscences of Dr. Channing," etc. Elizabeth's sister Sophia married Nathaniel Hawthorne, the novelist, and another sister, Mary, became the wife of Horace Mann, who founded the school for deaf and dumb.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

F. W. FARNELL, 238 Fourth Avenue, N. Y., has published a copyrighted comical song and dance, entitled "We Are Never Young But Once," the words being by Frank Lee Farnell, the music by Virginia R. Coxe.

GINN & CO. will publish in April "The Gate to the Anabasis," by Clarence W. Gleason, of the Roxbury Latin School, Boston, which is intended to do for beginners in Greek what "The Gate to Cæsar" has done for beginners in Latin.

A. D. WELD-FRENCH, of Boston, purposes issuing in an edition of 300 copies his "Notes on the Surnames of Francus, Francels, French, etc., in Scotland," with an account of the Frenchies of Thorndykes and a discussion of the family connection with the Stuart kings.

ROBERTS BROTHERS will publish soon "Memoirs of Two Young Married Women," by Balzac, translated by Miss Wormeley; "The Aim of Life: plain talks to young men and women," by the Rev. Philip Stafford Moxom; and "Allegretto," a volume of poems by Gertrude Hall.

LEE & SHEPARD are about to publish a new book by Henry Wood under the title of "The Political Economy of Natural Law." Its purpose is to outline a political economy which is practical and natural rather than theoretical and artificial, being a study of inherent laws and principles.

JOEL MUNSELL'S SONS, Albany, N. Y., announce "The Pioneers of New France in New England, or the French incitement of the Indians against the English settlements, with documentary French evidence and illustrations," by James Phinney Baxter, president of the Maine Historical Society.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish this week two books of more than ordinary interest, the one being entitled "The Ascent of Faith, or, grounds of certainty in science and religion," by Alexander J. Harrison, who is widely known in this field of thought; the other, the Bishop of Ripon's (Dr. W. Boyd Carpenter) studies on the influence of Christ in character under the title

WM. GEORGE BRUCE, Milwaukee, Wis., will publish presently a unique work entitled "Great Educational Exhibits." The illustrations for the book are from sketches made by a special artist at the Liberal Arts department last summer and will be practically complete. When it is considered that the exhibits represent in reality the labor of ten million children, as well as the present educational status of the United States, it may be said that the volume will prove an interesting one.

THE son of Henry Vizetelly, the engraver, war correspondent, and English translator of French novels, whose death at Farnham, England, was announced last week, now lives in New York and is an editorial assistant on the Standard Dictionary, which Funk & Wagnalls Co. publish. Mr. Frank H. Vizetelly says that his father was abandoned by his counsel, and had no other alternative than to plead guilty at the trial, which resulted in his imprisonment for three months for having translated the works of Zola.

THE UNIVERSITY PRESS at Cambridge has undertaken to publish a complete translation of the Pali Játaka or "Buddha Birth-stories," which are supposed to be the oldest collection of folk-lore stories in existence. The first volume is now in the press, and has been prepared by Mr. R. Chalmers, late of Oriel College, Oxford, a former pupil of Prof. Rhys Davids. It will contain the forty stories given in Prof. Rhys Davids' discontinued translation, but will also give the remainder of the first volume of Prof. Fausböll's edition of the Pali text.

THE general financial depression does not seem to affect materially the sales of new books by popular authors. Mrs. Burnett's late book, "The One I Knew the Best of All," published by the Scribners during November, is already in its 11th thousand. Mrs. Earle's "Customs and Fashions in Old New England," issued by the same firm, has reached its third edition within three months, while Robert Grant's "Opinions of a Philosopher" and Robert Louis Stevenson's "David Balfour," both recently published, have obtained a sale of six and eight thousand copies respectively.

AT the meeting of the trustees of the Stationers' Board of Trade, held on the 9th inst., the following officers were elected: President, Charles T. Dillingham; first vice-president, Henry C. Bainbridge; second vice-president, Charles McLoughlin; treasurer, Alexander Agar; and secretary, Wm. W. Davis. We believe this is the first time in years that a bookseller has been chosen president of the Board, and we therefore congratulate our fellow-tradesman on his unanimous election. It is an honor justly conferred, because few men in the Board have worked more faithfully and disinterestedly in its behalf, in committee and as first vice-president, than Mr. Dillingham. The late president, Mr. Frank Squier, has been honored by an appointment as park commissioner by Mayor Schieren, of Brooklyn.

FUNK & WAGNALLS CO. have just ready in their series of Columbian Historical Novels "Humbled Pride: a story of the Mexican War," by John R. Musick, with illustrations by F. A. Carter. This volume supplies a readable and interesting account of historical events pertaining to the administration of Presidents John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, Martin Van Buren, William H. Harrison, John Tyler, Jas. K. Polk, Zachary Taylor, Millard Fillmore, and Franklin Hymnal, for general use and special services," by Philip Phillips and his son Philip. The hymnal is designed for use in every Christian congregation, and has a concordance index whereby any pastor or leader can find and select, at a glance, the right subject or sentiments needed for any religious occasion.

BUXTON & SKINNER, St. Louis, Mo., issued for the holidays a limited edition of an original, in fact unique book, entitled "The Documents in Evidence." The story was told by Henry M. Blossom, Jr., in a series of clippings from the Harvard Graduate's Magazine, Town Topics, St. Louis Life, and letters from the three characters in the story. The clippings were pasted in the centre of the page marked with red or blue pencil; the letters are excellent fac-similes of those supposed to have been written on office paper with printed letter-heading, club paper with device of flag, and fashionable papeterie with monogram. These were carefully pasted in, and the whole bound in a stiff cover with a design consisting of addressed envelopes in which not even the detail of a bona-fide cancelled stamp was overlooked, bills of florist and confectionery, etc. The whole idea was cleverly and most artistically carried out and reflected great credit on author and printer.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. will publish on the 24th inst. Bret Harte's new volume, entitled "A Protegée of Jack Hamlin's, and other stories;" "The Rousing of Mrs. Potter, and other stories," in which the author, Miss Gertrude Smith, collects several of the bright short stories which she has printed in The Century and other periodicals; "A Symphony of the Spirit," a selection of some three-score poems of faith and uplifting thought from the works of Wordsworth, Tennyson, Emerson, Browning, Longfellow, Lowell, and others, for the consolation of those who have lost dear friends, edited by George S. Merriam; new editions of "Jones on Chattel Mortgages," "Jones on Liens," and "Jones' Forms in Conveyancing;" the second edition of "Lloyd on Building;" and Gov. Bell's work on "The Bench and Bar of New Hampshire," already noted. They have just ready in the Riverside Paper Series Bret Harte's "A Sappho of Green Springs, and other stories."

MACMILLAN & CO. have just ready Prof. H. H. Boyesen's long-promised commentary on Ibsen's plays. They announce for early publication a new work by Lewis Carroll. It will be a continuation of "Sylvie and Bruno"—a book which, although it may never hope to rival his immortal "Alice" in the popular favor, appeals even more, perhaps, to older people, as it rambles along in its own engaging fashion, mingling the most charming of nonsense-verses and the profoundest of metaphysics, without even a pretence at consistency or continuity. Diana Clifford Kimber will soon publish through Macmillan & Co. a text-book on "Anatomy and Physiology for Nurses," in connection with Louise Darche. Miss Kimber's experience as assistant superintendent in both the New York City and the Illinois Training School for Nurses has led her to feel the need of such a manual and to undertake the work. It is designed to fill a middle place between the text-book written for medical students and that for use of children in schools. The subject is presented in a scientific manner, but the technicalities which discourage the aver-

IN PREPARATION:

A New Illustrated Edition

OF

GRIMM'S FAIRY TALES.

This will be the American issue of the edition just published in Germany by the Deutsche Verlags Anstalt. By exclusive arrangement with the German publishers, the illustrations, 180 in number, will be printed from electrotypes taken directly from the original wood-cuts, and will be equal in every respect to those in the German edition. They are by two of the best German artists, and the engraving is of the highest quality. The work is not only the best edition of Grimm, but one of the finest illustrated books published in some time. It will be sold at a popular price.

The Governors of Virginia.

A Brief Review of the Discovery of the Continent of North America, with a History of the Executives of the Colony and of the Commonwealth of Virginia. By MARGARET VOWELL SMITH. 8vo, cloth, illustrated, 457 pages, $2.50, postpaid.

The purpose of this book is to lay before the public, in a convenient form, a review of the Governors of Virginia from the establishment of the Colony to the present day.

Various rare and explanatory State Papers are embodied in this volume, and the personal sketches are gathered from the most authentic sources.

Biography of the English Language.

By ARTHUR MACARTHUR, LL.D., Associate Justice Supreme Court of District of Columbia, retired; author of "Education in Its Relation to Manual Industry," Essays, Addresses, etc. 12mo, cloth, 417 pages, $1.50, postpaid.

The subject of this work is the English Language, and the object is to furnish an account of its rise and progress from the earliest periods of its history. This naturally reaches back to the primeval races from whom the English people sprang, and relates to the manner in which their varied dialects finally merged into our present form of speech.

A Gentleman of France.

Being the Memoirs of Gaston de Bonne, Sieur de Marsac.

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN, author of "The House of the Wolf," etc. With frontispiece and vignette by H. J. Ford. 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.25.

"Even the unenthusiastic may feel enthusiasm over this book. As a historical novel, bold, strong, dashing, and thoroughly clean, it is one of the best we have read for many years. We sat down for a cursory perusal, and ended by reading it delightedly through. . . . We very cordially recommend this book to the jaded novel-reader who cares for manly action more than for morbid introspection."—Churchman, N. Y.

"One of the best novels since 'Lorna Doone.' It will be read and then re-read for the mere pleasure its reading gives. The subtle charm of it is not in merely transporting the nineteenth-century reader to the sixteenth that he may see life as it was then, but in transforming him into a sixteenth-century man, thinking its thoughts and living its life in perfect touch and sympathy . . . it carries the reader out of his present life, giving him a new and totally different existence that rests and refreshes him."—N. Y. World.

"No novelist outside of France has displayed a more definite comprehension of the very essence of mediæval French life, and no one, certainly, has been able to set forth a depiction of it in colors so vivid and so entirely in consonance with the truth. . . . The characters in the tale are admirably drawn, and the narrative is nothing less than fascinating in its fine flavor of adventure."—Boston Beacon.

"We hardly know whether to call this latest work of Stanley J. Weyman a historical romance or a story of adventure. It has all the interesting, fascinating, and thrilling characteristics of both. It is a romance which will rank among the masterpieces of historic fiction."—Boston Advertiser.

"A romance after the style of Dumas the elder, and well worthy of being read by those who can enjoy stirring adventures told in true romantic fashion. . . . The great personages of the time—Henry III. of Valois, Henry IV., Rosny, Rambouillet, Turenne—are brought in skilfully, and the tragic and varied history of the time forms a splendid frame in which to set the picture of Marsac's love and courage . . . the troublous days are well described and the interest is genuine and lasting, for up to the very end the author manages effects which impels the reader to go on with renewed curiosity."—Nation, N. Y.

Life and Correspondence of Dean Stanley

By R. E. PROTHERO

With the co-operation of DEAN BRADLEY. With Portraits. 2 vols., 8vo, $8.00.

The striking personality of Dean Stanley and his pre-eminence in the ecclesiastical, literary, and social history of his time, give to this biography a special value and importance. Based upon Dean Stanley's voluminous correspondence, the work is complete, thorough, and authoritative.

"The book in every way fulfils the anticipations that were aroused by the announcement of it, and is one of the great biographies of the day."—Chicago Tribune.

From the N. Y. Tribune:

"Mr. Prothero has done his part of the work well; with discretion, insight, good taste, and, so far as it is critical, with more fairness and equanimity than the biographer is wont to show. The portrait he gives is adequate and life-like."

From the Philadelphia Telegraph:

"One of the most important of recent books. It is certainly one of the most valuable biographies of late years, and it will not be surprising to see it take rank as a standard book. The interest in it will be deep and sincere."

NOTES IN SEASON.

STONE & KIMBALL, Cambridge, Mass., and Chicago, Ill., have in preparation a volume of poems by Gilbert Parker, entitled "A Lover's Diary;" Maurice Thompson's Harvard's Phi Beta Kappa poem of last year, entitled "Lincoln's Grave;" and books of verse by Grant Allen, Hugh McCulloch, Jr., Arthur O'Shaughnessy—and, by the way, his poems are to be edited by Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton—the "Tom Hall" whom we have so often noted in Life, and other periodicals.

S. C. GRIGGS & Co., Chicago, will publish on [illegible] entitled "The Union Pacific and economics, by John P. Davis. This volume gives the complete history of the Union Pacific Railway, beginning with its inception in 1832—shows how localism and sectionalism defeated Congressional action from 1845 to 1860—the action of Congress from 1861 to 1864, when the charter acts were signed by Lincoln—the building of the road, completed in 1869—the history of the Credit Mobilier—the action of the Treasury Department—the proceedings in the United States Courts, under the Thurman Act—and a discussion of the various plans proposed for the settlement of the question. Maps showing the various routes proposed and their terminals, and official statistics accompany the work. The author has made the subject a special study, and has had unusual facilities for examining the data of the work.

HARPER & BROTHERS will publish early in February the second volume of George William Curtis' works, edited by Prof. Norton; a new volume in the Odd Number Series, "Parisian Points of View," from the French of Ludovic Halévy, by Edith V. B. They have in preparation for publication during the same month "The Jewish Question," "Our English Cousins," by Richard Harding Davis, "Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes," by A. Conan Doyle, and Constance Fenimore Woolson's latest novel, "Horace Chase." They are about to publish in their Franklin Square Library "The Swing of the Pendulum," a novel by Mary Frances Peard, which will delight especially the summer tourist who is familiar with the picturesque coast of Norway.

King, based upon letters and official papers covering the years from 1784 to 1825; the first volume of "A History of Social Life in England," edited by H. D. Traill, which will be completed in about six volumes; "Oliver Cromwell," by Samuel H. Church, and "Studies in Mediæval Life and Literature," by the late Prof. E. T. McLaughlin, of Yale University. The next volumes in The Story of the Nations series will be "The Christian Recovery of Spain," by H. E. Watts; "The Story of the Crusades," by T. A. Archer, and "The Story of Australasia," by Greville Tregarthen; and the contributions to The Heroes of the Nations series will be "Cicero, and the Fall of the Roman Republic," by J. L. Strachan-Davidson; "Henry the Navigator," by C. Raymond Beazley, and a reissue of Noah Brooks' "Life of Abraham Lincoln." The plan of a congress of all the religions of the world during the Exposition, suggested by President Charles C. Bonney, met with an unusual response and excited a warm interest. Representatives were sent to it not only from all Christian denominations, but from the Hebrews and various Oriental religions. They were brought together not only to promote and deepen the spirit of human brotherhood among religious men of diverse faiths, but to set forth, by those most competent to speak, what are deemed the most important distinctive truths held and taught by such religion, thus showing how many beliefs are held and taught in common. Light was also sought from all on the great social problems of the present age. The addresses and papers embraced in these volumes finely illustrate the idea which brought these great and world-renowned men together; they are full of wisdom and instruction upon many timely points. This work will be in two volumes, and is claimed to be the authorized edition, containing a number of letters and correspondence which only the present editor could possess. Finely illustrated with portraits, etc.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

WILL CHEAPENING PAY?

SWEEPING "cuts" in the prices of several well-known and presumably well-established magazines have been among the surprises of the last twelve months. Periodicals of apparently assured prosperity, reaching a wide circle of readers, suddenly reduced their subscription rates one-half or more, and it has been predicted that the new year will see a general collapse in the prices of magazines of even the highest grade. A desire to increase advertising was, probably, the first cause of these reductions; it was no doubt thought a bold financial stroke to be able by this means to show advertisers a mammoth subscription list, and thus secure an enormous amount of advertising, that would more than make up the loss sustained by the reduction. The element of competition must also be considered: A reduces the price of his magazine from twenty-five to fifteen cents; B "goes one better," and cuts his rates from twenty-five cents to ten cents. Yet it is certainly worth while to consider whether in the long run this cheapening of magazines will pay. Naturally, people are thoroughly willing to pay ten, fifteen, or twenty-five cents where they once paid twenty-five, thirty-five, or fifty; and probably many would be tempted by the lower rates; but it is a popular axiom that the cheapest things are the dearest, and the cheapening in the price of a magazine will no doubt in time be accompanied by a depreciation of its value in the minds of its readers, who will regard the reduction as a tacit confession of weakness or unworthiness. The whole business of this wholesale cut in rates smacks too strongly of the "tremendous sacrifices" and "slaughter of prices" in which the big "department stores" delight; and we agree fully with Mr. Chrisholm's opinion as expressed in a recent issue of The Journalist, "that it is a deliberate sacrifice of literature to commercialism, and in the end it will be found as disastrous as it was unnecessary."

A sudden reduction in the price of a really first-class magazine must mean a corresponding decline in its literary quality; it is impossible that a paper or magazine made simply "to sell cheap" can equal one that stands on its own standard of literary worth. The one method by which the cheap magazine can keep up a certain amount of pseudo-literary attraction is found in the eagerness of "prominent" persons to see themselves in print. Articles from the pens of "leading" public men, popular Congressmen, or sensational "reformers" will take the place of the contributions of authors of real standing in literature, and should the ten-cent magazine become the magazine of the future, writers whose work is really worthy will be forced to accept lower prices or to see themselves crowded out by the throng of "notables" eager to swell the ranks of literature. There is little occasion to fear this result, however. The magazines of the highest grade, those that have always maintained an honorable and foremost place in American periodical literature, will hardly succumb to this pernicious cheapening tendency; they have so far pursued unmoved the "even tenor of their way," and unless all signs fail they will continue so to do, while their smaller brethren rush upon an untimely fate.

So far as books are concerned, we think all are agreed that cheapening has not been found profitable. If there has been any doubt on the subject, last year's experience will probably suffice to allay it. It has been estimated that in 1893 over five million books were sold at figures that did not meet the cost of manufacture. Sixteen houses that tried this experiment went down; others are falling now, and more will undoubtedly follow. Half of those who failed will probably never be heard from again; the others will wait for more favorable times to re-enter the field. Cheapening means skimping or loss. If the publisher skimps he may still command a constituency, but it will be an inferior one, and in that case he will be obliged to do a greater amount of work for less return, besides working on a lower plane. For these reasons as well as for many others, cheapening certainly does not pay.

THE restriction upon the free admission of books, engravings, photographs, bound or unbound etchings, maps or charts, that they shall not have been printed or bound within the twenty years next preceding the date of importation, has been stricken out of the Wilson bill, now under discussion. It was also decided to admit hydrographic charts for the use of mariners free of duty. The bill now provides for their admission for the use of the United States government and the Library of Congress only.

EASTER comes quite early in the season this year, and an early Easter is said to be good for spring trade. St. Valentine's Day, Lenten season, and Easter give the booksellers a fairly good opportunity for business. Now is the time

FIRST CENTURY OF GERMAN PRINTING AND BOOKSELLING IN AMERICA.*

SCHAEFER & KORADI, Philadelphia, have published for the German Pionier-Verein, of Philadelphia, a valuable bibliography of early German printing in America, by Professor Oswald Seidensticker, of the University of Pennsylvania. It is entitled "The First Century of German Printing in America," covering the period 1738–1830, and is dedicated to Abraham H. Cassel, the celebrated Pennsylvania German antiquary, of Harleysville, and collector of the Cassel Library, now divided between the Pennsylvania Historical Society and a Dunkard college in Kansas. Professor Seidensticker's bibliography is a surprising revelation of the extent and activity of the German press in Colonial America, and his introduction is a most interesting résumé of the history and tendencies of these early publications. During the period covered, German printing was carried on at thirty-one places in Pennsylvania, three in Maryland, four in Ohio, five in Virginia, one in Massachusetts, one in New York, one in New Jersey, and one in Nova Scotia. It is possible that an arrangement of the publications under places of issue would have demonstrated more forcibly how unexpectedly large was the total publication in any one of these localities; but the chronological arrangement which has been adopted is better and easier for ordinary reference use. The first entry in the bibliography is Conrad Beissel's "Das Büchlein vom Sabbath," published in Philadelphia in 1728, presumably by Andrew Bradford. Although both Bradford and Franklin printed German books in English type, German printing really began with Christopher Sauer, the first to use German type, in 1738. In his earliest publications Sauer varied the spelling of his name, but after 1740, in his German publications, he uniformly printed his name Christoph Sauer, and in his English publications (which are quite numerous) he printed his name Christopher Sower, a form which his descendants have since maintained. The "Weyrauchsbügel," a large hymn-book, printed by Sauer for the Ephrata Brethren in 1739, was the first American book printed in German type. He also published in German three editions of the Bible and Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," before either had been published in America in English; he likewise published the first German newspaper. The early publications were largely religious, written by or published for the many German mystical sects, Inspirationists, Dunkards, Ephrata, etc. The mystical hymns of the "Kleine Davidische Psalterspiel" were favorites among the Mennonites, Dunkards, and other sects, and in Pennsylvania ten editions of this hymn-book were printed up to 1830. The largest book printed in Pennsylvania up to 1817 was the splendid folio edition of the German Bible, printed in that year by Johann Bär, at Lancaster, as Bragh't's "Martyrer-Spiegel," printed at Ephrata in 1748, was the largest book of the Colonial period. Among the later publications the religious tone predominated, but there were also works of a miscellaneous nature. Among these were some of Franklin's political treatises, the writings of Anthony Benezet against slavery, published by the younger Sauer, in 1759; an edition of "The Vicar of Wakefield," published in Philadelphia in 1772; and the first German dictionary published in America, issued by William Rapp, at Lancaster, in 1812. The bibliography is preceded by a list of the printed writings of Franz Daniel Pastorius, embracing six titles and including "Pastorius' Primer," published in Philadelphia in 1700, and supposed to be the first Pennsylvania school-book. A list of the printers and publishers of German books from 1728 to 1830 is also given. Professor Seidensticker has made use of all available sources of information in preparing his work, and has had the assistance of members of most of the chief historical and antiquarian societies of Pennsylvania. In order to give fully the printing record of the older printers, their English publications have been included; but special care has been taken to exclude books published abroad with a false Pennsylvania imprint. In the case of older and rarer books the libraries where they may be found have been indicated. A photographic reproduction of the title of the first German print by Benjamin Franklin is given as a frontispiece to the volume.

* SEIDENSTICKER, Oswald. The first century of German printing in America, 1728–1830, preceded by a notice of the literary work of F. D. Pastorius. (Published by the German Pionier-Verein, of Philadelphia.) Phila., Schaefer & Koradi, 1892. 10+354 p. O. pap. $1.

SOME INTERESTING FIRST EDITIONS.

From the Westminster Gazette.

IN 1751 Thomas Gray published, at the modest price of sixpence per copy, "An Elegy Wrote in a Country Churchyard." One of these original sixpenny pamphlets, uncut, was recently sold by Messrs. Sotheby for £74. A first edition of "The Vicar of Wakefield" fetched £54, and "Grimm's German Stories" £33 10s. A copy of "Tennyson's Poems," issued as the joint production of the laureate and Hallam, which it seems probable belonged to the latter, realized £16 10s; Coverdale's Bible, £31, and another more imperfect copy £20 10s.; "Report of the Challenger Expedition," £48; first edition of Wordsworth's "Descriptive Sketches in Verse," £26; two proofsheets of "St. Ronan's Well," with corrections and additions by the author, £21; and the original autograph of Burns' "Queen Mary's Lament," £35 10s.

TYPOTHETÆ'S CELEBRATION OF FRANKLIN'S BIRTHDAY.

THE TYPOTHETÆ of New York held its annual dinner at the Hotel Brunswick on Wednesday, January 17. Theodore L. De Vinne presided, and made a happy address when the coffee was served. The address of the evening was on Benjamin Franklin, by Rev. Dr. Newland Maynard. Among the special delights of a most delightful evening was a speech by Will Carleton, in which he produced the following astonishing "Facts and Statistics on Poetry," which he claims to have derived from an impartial Englishman:

"I find that there have been written during the poetical year ending December 31, 1893, in the State of Maine, 8557 poems; in Vermont, 5234 poems; in Massachusetts, 8999, exclusive of Suffolk County; inclusive of Suffolk County, 89,682. In New York, 49,837; in Rhode Island, where the poetry area is small, there have been written only 5652 pieces. New Jersey was not estimated by the Englishman whom I employed, some one having been deceiving him as to whether that State came within his scope of investigation, erroneously informing him that it was a somewhat poetical nation of itself. The sum total for the whole country is finally ascertained to have been 2.888,954 poems. The following subjects have been treated and mistreated during the rhythmical year the following number of times: 'Hope,' 864; 'Despair,' 99,371; 'Remorse,' 6; 'Discontent,' 10.864; 'Spring,' 254,321; 'My Soul and I,' 121,321; 'Your Soul and You,' 8; 'Your Duty,' 354; 'My Duty,' 1."

Mr. Paul B. Du Chaillu also spoke, after which, with music and song, the assemblage scattered.

OBITUARY NOTES.

MRS. THACKERAY, the widow of William Makepeace Thackeray, died January 11, at Leigh, Essex Co., England. Mrs. Thackeray's mind became affected during her early married life, and she has passed most of her days in seclusion.

MISS ELLA WEED, who died January 10 in New York City, had devoted her whole life to the advancement of woman's education. She was born in Newburg, N. Y. Barnard College owed to her its systematic organization and high standard of scholarship. She wrote "A Foolish Virgin," he story of a Vassar girl, which was published by the Harpers in 1883.

FRANK BOLLES, secretary of Harvard University, died in Cambridge on January 10, at the age of thirty-seven. Mr. Bolles was an accurate and enthusiastic ornithologist, an observant botanist, and an artist in word-painting. His rare talents as a descriptive writer were shown his "The Land of the Lingering Snow," ng the story of the fields, woods, and waters of New England in the vicinity of Boston, from January to June; and his "At the North of Bearcamp Water," describing the region of country around Mt. Chocome from July to December.

C. WRIGHT KIRBY, a well-known member of the stationery trade, died suddenly at his home in New York City on the morning of January 10. Mr. Kirby started in business with his brother at Broadway and Houston Street, where they built up a fine trade. They afterward moved to larger quarters, near the Broadway Central Hotel, and here they were not successful. Mr. Kirby then went into the employ of J. M. Whittemore & Co., and after the failure of that firm became connected with George B. Hurd & Co., with whom he has been since 1886. Mr. Kirby was in his fifty-eighth year.

ALEXANDER AGAR, one of the best-known stationers and blank-book makers in the United States, committed suicide at his residence in Brooklyn, N. Y., on the 18th inst. He had been worrying considerably over the hard times, and suffered from unnecessary anxiety about his own business. Mr. Agar was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., 64 years ago. He first worked for A. S. Barnes & Co. For nearly twenty years he was in partnership with Owen C. Owens, at 110 William Street, and then started business on his own account in Nassau Street, near Maiden Lane. About ten years ago the firm became Agar & Hamblin, and located at its present stand in Broadway. It did an extensive business, and Mr. Agar's estate is estimated to be worth $225,000. For the past twelve years Mr. Agar had been a trustee and treasurer of the Stationers' Board of Trade.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

JOHN SARTAIN, the venerable Philadelphia engraver, is writing a volume of personal recollections.

JAMES SCHOULER has decided to extend his "History of the United States Under the Constitution" by one more volume, the sixth, embracing the Civil War and Lincoln's administration.

MME. BLANC, who is better known by her pseudonym, Th. Bentzon, has been described by some witty, caustic woman, as a writer of heavy reviews of light novels. Mme Blanc's maiden name was Therese de Solms.

IT is reported in Berlin that in spite of the progress made by the Cottas in preparing Prince Bismarck's memoirs for publication, Count Herbert Bismarck has refused to allow the right of publication to them, and will entrust the whole work to an English firm.

ROBERT BRIDGES, the author of "Humors of the Court, and other poems," published recently by Macmillan & Co., is not the Mr. Bridges of Scribner's Magazine, for whom he seems to be mistaken, but an English poet, and one of decided note on the other side of the water.

IT is quite decided that Mrs. U. S. Grant will not publish her memoirs of her husband. It is her wish now that this book shall not be printed until after her death. Several publishers have had opportunity to look it over, and one, it is reported, offered the enormous price of $50,000 outright for the work.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Calumet Magazine, published, as its title-page says, at the University of Chicago, does not seem to come up to the standard it set for itself in advance announcements. In its first issue only Western writers are represented—Frank Harris, Florence Wilkinson, and Opie Read being among the number.

THE "Winter Number" of Modern Art, issued by J. M. Bowles, of Indianapolis, Ind., is an unusually interesting issue. It contains brief articles on "Contemporary Italian Art," by Helen Zimmern; "Art Study and Liberal Education," by Alfred Vance Churchill; "Impressions of the [Chicago] Fair," by J. M. Bowles, etc. The illustrations in this issue are Bonvin's "Etcher" and Meissonier's "Etcher," the latter after Paul Rajon's etching, and a page from Carl Marr's sketch-book. Modern Art, which is entering upon its second year, may lay claim to the distinction of being the most artistic of the distinctively art periodicals issued in this country.

THE new French review, La Revue de Paris, which was announced some weeks ago, will appear on the 1st of February. Although a fortnightly review, of the external type of the Revue des deux Mondes, in some respects the Revue de Paris will be more akin to the more important English monthlies. There will be no chronicle of art, literature, music, the drama, contributed by an established staff; but on all questions of the hour the Revue de Paris will address itself directly to the writers, French or foreign, most capable of treating them. It will have no definite bias, religious or political; the names of Prince Henri d'Orléans, Prince Roland Bonaparte, and M. Godefroy Cavaignac are a guarantee of its political independence. Historical articles are promised for the forthcoming numbers from the pens of MM. Sorel, Gaston Paris, Jusserand, A. Vandal, etc. M. Sully Prudhomme will write on Pascal's method, M. Pierre Loti on Loyola, Arvède Barine will discuss the ethics of Ibsen, M. Emile Faguet the talent of M. Brunetière, M. Jules Lemaître "La Chanson au XIX. Siècle." M. Jules Simon will contribute his souvenirs of M. Ernest Renan, while the review has secured an unpublished chapter of M. Ernest Renan's on "Philo of Alexandria." It is not less fortunate in fiction. It will open with a novel by M. Anatole France ("Scrupules de Femmes"), to be followed by "Deux Jeunes Filles," by M. Ludovic Halévy, and "Idylle Tragique," by M. Paul Bourget. Gyp will contribute "Le Mariage de Chiffon," and Alphonse Daudet "Quinze Ans de Mariage." The younger novelists, Paul Margueritte, Paul Hervieu, Marcel Prévost, Maurice Barrès, and J. Ricard, will also be represented. The editorship will be shared by MM. Louis Gauderax and James Darmesteter, and Paul Calmann Lévy, who is the principal shareholder, will act as publisher.

BUSINESS NOTES.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Funk & Wagnalls Company will soon remove to more commodious quarters in its new building on Lafayette Place, opposite the Astor Library.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Edward Meeks will remove on the 25th to 1312 Filbert Street, near the new City Hall and Broad Street station of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Thomas G. Merrill, of the D. D. Merrill Co., has offered to buy the stock remaining unsold of the bankrupt firm and fixtures, at the price of forty per cent. of the value of the same as stated in the inventory, on the terms of one-fourth cash and one-fourth in two, three, and four months, the assignee to retain possession of said stock and fixtures until all payments have been made.

ST. PAUL MINN.—The stockholders of the Price-McGill Company, at a meeting held on the 10th inst., amended the Articles of Association of the Price-McGill Company in respect to the name of the corporation, and voted that hereafter the style shall be The Merriam Company. The officers of the new company are: R. H. Merriam, president and treasurer; C. H. McGill, vice-president; Jared Howe, secretary; and W. M. Stitt, Jr., general manager.

SPOKANE, WASH.—John W. Graham & Co., booksellers, request publishers of plays, etc., to send their complete catalogues with lowest price to jobbers.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE suit brought in New York City by Edward B. House to restrain Samuel L. Clemens ("Mark Twain"), Abby Sage Richardson and Daniel Frohman from producing "The Prince and the Pauper" without his consent, has been dismissed by Judge Bischoff, of the Court of Common Pleas.

THE CENTURY CO., New York, have just issued "Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar for 1894," containing humorous extracts from Mark Twain's latest story, "Pudd'nhead Wilson," now appearing in The Century. They offer to send a copy of the calendar free to any one who will enclose them a stamp to pay postage.

BRADLEE WHIDDEN, Boston, will issue shortly an entirely new edition of "Modern American Pistols and Revolvers," by A. C. Gould, a book which has been endorsed by sportsmen the world over, and which is now practically rewritten and is the most comprehensive volume on its subject that has yet been issued. The book is fully illustrated.

MACMILLAN & CO. will shortly publish a new volume by Alfred Austin, entitled "England's Darling, and Other Poems." The name "England's darling" is that by which Alfred the Great was, Mr. Austin thinks, for centuries best known to the English people. "The Garden That I Love," by the same author, which has been appearing in the National Review, will be republished in the course of the year in a volume appropriately illustrated.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE for 1894, published by James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., is, as usual, crowded with information concerning the latest developments in floriculture and agriculture, as well as the old leading varieties of flowers and vegetables. Its 112 octavo pages are printed in eight different colors, and there are also colored plates of chrysanthemums, poppies, and vegetables. On the front cover is a very exquisite bunch of Vick's New White Branching Astor, and on the back is the New Double Anemone.

GINN & CO. will publish during the spring "Studies in the Evolution of English Criticism," by Laura Jonson Wylie, of Yale University. The book first traces the classical spirit from its beginnings to its adequate expression by Dryden, and afterwards Coleridge's criticism is considered as representing the reaction against the philosophy of the preceding school. The influence of France is traced in the work of Dryden, while German romanticism is treated in relation to Coleridge and other English writers of his day.

THE Grolier Club will publish shortly for circulation, among its members only, a reprint in facsimile of the rare and esteemed "Laws and Acts of the General Assembly of their Majesties' Province of New-York, as they were enacted in divers sessions, the first of which began April the 9th, Anno Domini 1691. At New-York, printed and sold by William Bradford, 1694." The reprint, carefully collected from the best three copies of the work extant, will contain a biographical preface by Charles R. Hildeburn. The publications of the club steadily advance in value.

E. F. BENSON, a son of the Archbishop of Canterbury, author of "Dodo," writes from Athens, Greece, to inquire of The Critic what constitutes copyright in America. An authorized edition of his book was issued in New York by the Appletons, and an unauthorized one by a Chicago house; and Mr. Benson wishes to know whether the misprints in the latter entitle the publisher to call it a copyright edition. Another correspondent writes to the same number of The Critic to ask, apropos of a new edition of Rossetti's "House of Life," whether "a dead author has no rights which enterprising publishers are bound to respect."

THE Hazlitt sale, according to the London Bookman, was disappointing in more ways than one. In the first place, the manuscripts were "over-catalogued," the printed descriptions of the various lots arousing expectations which were not realized upon subsequent examination. Interesting many—in fact most—of these papers certainly were, but the best use has already been made of them, and very little remains unpublished that is in any way worth publication. In the second place, the condition of the bulk of the papers was poor, many being worn and much mended, and very few of the pieces being in fine state.

CHARLES S. PEIRCE, Milford, Pa., has in preparation a work in twelve volumes, each distinct, the general title of which is "The Principles of Philosophy, or, logic, physics, and psychics, considered as a unity, in the light of the nineteenth century." The first volume, which is ready for the press, will be "A Review of the Leading Ideas of the Nineteenth Century." Mr. Peirce also issues a prospectus of a limited edition, now in course of printing, in two colors of hand-made paper, at the De Vinne Press, of "The Epistle of Pierre Pelerin de Maricourt to Sygur de Foucaucourt, Soldier, On the Lodestone." The original treatise dates from 1269, and "occupies a unique position in the history of the human mind, being without exception the earliest work of experimental science that has come down to us." The transcript of Peter Peregrinus's text has been made afresh from a contemporary MS. in the Paris Library, and is reproduced in black-letter together with a translation and notes.

THE committee on awards of the World's Columbian Exposition, which since the close of the fair has been established in Washington (Pacific Building, 622 F Street), announces that the medals and diplomas awarded at the exposition will be ready for distribution within about five months. The medal has been designed by Augustus St. Gaudens, and the diploma is the work of Will H. Low; both medal and diploma have been pronounced as far superior in artistic excellence to any presented at previous expositions, and no effort is being spared to make their reproduction as perfect as possible. It is hoped that within three months exhibitors so desiring may receive the wording of the judges' report on which their awards are based. The committee states that the awards granted at the Columbian Exposition, compared to the number of exhibitors, present the smallest number ever granted on the occasion of a world's fair. This result seems to show that unusual care and precautions were taken by the expert judges, probably because of the rule requiring them to declare over their own signature the reasons for their judgment. Exhibitors are requested to deal directly with the committee on all matters relating to their awards.

A MOVEMENT has recently been set on foot for the issue of a cheap edition of the "Book of Common Prayer," revised according to the "new standard" of 1892. The issue is put forth by the "American Prayer-Book Fund," as shown on the title-page of the cheap edition, and is retailed at fifteen cents. Thomas Whittaker, of No. 2 Bible House, is the agent of the "fund." Since the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, when the revised edition of the prayer-book was authorized, a cheap form of the book, bound in muslin, has been retailed at twenty-five cents, the trade receiving a discount of twenty-five per cent. from that price. This price remained unbroken until the new issue was put upon the market at fifteen cents about a week ago. This new edition is printed from the same plates as the twenty-five-cent edition, but on thinner paper; its advent will probably lead to a general reduction of the price of the twenty-five-cent edition; and one house—James Pott & Co.—already advertises the fact. Members of the large prayer-book publishing houses have expressed their opinion that the "American Prayer-Book Fund" will make as good a profit on the fifteen-cent book, held at strictly net prices, as was made on the twenty-five-cent edition with trade discounts. The "fund," which is said to be financially "backed" by J. Pierpont Morgan, proposes the establishment of agencies in the various dioceses and jurisdictions, to effect a wide distribution of their cheap edition.

PICK-UPS.

A SIXTH AVENUE bookseller [Charles S. Pratt], who recently moved into the shop from which a popular shoe-dealer had changed to a larger one, now advertises "Brains clothed where formerly feet were covered."

ONE OF "MILLER'S OWN."—Welsh is a well-known New York bookseller, and famous as a poet who has distinguished himself on sundry occasions. Recently one of his customers assured him that he admired him above Longfellow and Tennyson because he was so very fond of his —rare bits.

TWO STRIKING NOVELS.

What Necessity Knows.

A Novel of Canadian Life and Character. By Miss L. DOUGALL, author of "Beggars All." Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.00.

"Is a curious novel. . . . The drawing of this girl's character is one of the strongest things we have seen in fiction. And Bates is almost as interesting. . . . It is a study of low and medium life socially considered, yet of high life in its truest and finest conception. . . . Eliza is, on the whole, a rare study, she is a haunting presence. The book is powerful."—Post, Chicago.

"Will hold the interest of any reader who once gets fairly into its current to the very end. . . . The working out of the plot is elaborate and full of original ingenuity."—Commercial Advertiser.

"Keen analysis, deep spiritual insight, and a quick sense of beauty in nature and human nature are combined to put before us a drama of human life. . . . The book is not only interesting but stimulating, not only strong but suggestive, and we may say of the writer, in Sidney Lanier's words, 'She shows man what he may be in terms of what he is.'"—Literary World, Boston.

Montezuma's Daughter.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD, author of "She," "Allan Quatermain," "Nada the Lily," etc. With 24 full-page illustrations and vignette by Maurice Greiffenhagen. Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.00.

"Has a good deal of the quality that lent such interest to 'King Solomon's Mines' and 'Allan Quatermain.' . . . England, Spain, and the country which is now Mexico afford the field of the story, and a great number of most romantic and blood-stirring activities occur in each . . . a successful story well constructed, full of devious and exciting action, and we believe that it will find a multitude of appreciative readers."—Sun, N. Y.

"Adventures that stir the reader's blood, and, like magic spells, hold his attention with power so strong that only the completion of the novel can satisfy his interest. . . . In this novel the motive of revenge is treated with a subtle power . . . this latest production of Mr. Haggard blends with the instruction of the historical novel the charm of a splendid romance."—Public Opinion.

"The story is both graphic and exciting. . . . The story is mostly Mexican, and tells of the invasion of Cortes, but there are antecedent passages in England and Spain, for the hero is an English adventurer who finds his way through Spain to Mexico on a vengeful quest. The vengance is certainly satisfactory when it comes, but it is not reached until the hero has had as surprising a series of perils and escapes as even the fertile imagination of the author ever devised."—Dial, Chicago.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX, ...1893...

INCLUDING PERIODICALS, AMERICAN AND ENGLISH, ESSAYS, BOOK-CHAPTERS, ETC., SPECIAL BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND NECROLOGY OF AUTHORS.

EDITED BY W. I. FLETCHER and R. R. BOWKER,

With the co-operation of members of the American Library Association and of the Library Journal staff.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 complements the "Annual American Catalogue" of books published in 1893 by indexing (1) articles in periodicals published in 1892; (2) essays and book-chapters in composite books of 1892; (3) authors of periodical articles and essays; (4) special bibliographies of 1892; (5) authors deceased in 1892. The two volumes together make a complete record of the literary product of the year.

The new volume includes the features of the "Co-operative Index to Periodicals," originally a monthly supplement to the Library Journal, then extended into a quarterly in an enlarged form, and later issued as an annual volume.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 forms the second supplement both to the new five-yearly volume (1887–1891) of Poole's Index to Periodical Literature and to the new A. L. A. Index to essays and book-chapters of Mr. Fletcher.

The new volume will more than fulfil the opinion as to the Co-operative Index expressed in the following extract:

"To the literary worker its value can hardly be over-estimated; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field. to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time."—Providence Press.

By JACOB HARRIS PATTON, A.M., Ph.D., author of "Four Hundred Years of American History," "Political Parties in the United States," etc. Revised, with additions. 8vo, cloth, gilt top, $3.00.

"The intention of this volume is to give the American people a concise narrative of the natural resources of their own country, in all their numerous forms. . . . Attention is occasionally directed to the immense value of the natural resources of the United States when compared with those of other countries. Truth is not a braggart, and it is proper that the fact in this relation should be known, that the American people, especially the younger portion, may appreciate more fully the natural advantages of their own country."—From the Preface.

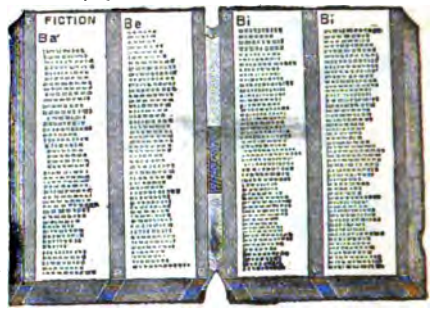
The Rudolph Indexer Book.

(Patented in the United States and all Foreign Countries.)

Method of Indexing is the same as that employed in the Rudolph Continuous Indexer.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER BOOK consists of a number of card-holders of heavy cardboard with one or two columns on both sides. On the back edge of each card-holder are two double hinges by which means other card-holders may be flexibly connected or disconnected.

Independent book-covers are furnished, and a book may thus be formed of one card-holder and later increased as desired. If the book becomes too bulky it may be separated and by adding covers two or more independent books formed.



The Rudolph Indexer Case.

(Patented in the United States and all Foreign Countries.)

Method of Indexing is the same as that employed in the Rudolph Continuous Indexer.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER CASE consists of a series of card-holders placed on their edges in a drawer, and they may be turned as the pages of a book, exhibiting at each view 272 single-line entries.

We furnish the INDEXER CASE in one, two, four, six and eight drawers.

The capacity of each drawer is thirty card-holders. As both sides of the card-holders are used it is equal to 8160 single-line entries.

The Rudolph Card Cutter.

This invention is for the purpose of cutting the entries or cards for insertion in the card-holders, but can also be used for many other purposes.

It is very important that all the slips to be inserted in the card-holders be cut at perfect right angles, in order that each entry will fit exactly to the others.

An unnecessary margin of only 1-32d of an inch on the top and 1-32d of an inch on the bottom of each entry will amount to 3⅛th inches of waste space on each card-holder.

The cutter will cut cardboard where spacing between the printed or written lines is 1-64th of an inch.

(FRONT VIEW, SHOWING GLASS LID RAISED.)

THE MOST PERFECT INDEXER.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER SYSTEM possesses many advantages which recommend it to Publishers and Booksellers—in fact, to any one who has occasion to use lists of books, names or samples of goods, photographs, etc.

It is entirely flexible, allowing any number of entries to be placed in the INDEXER at any point.

It presents to the eye at one time as many entries as six pages of the American Catalogue.

Entries are protected from being soiled by exposure or handling.

Economy of space and economy of expenditure of both time and money.

The INDEXER stands 42 inches high and is 20 inches wide by 30 inches broad.

We shall be pleased to give further information and list of testimonials from leading librarians.

NOTES IN SEASON.

MACMILLAN & Co. have in preparation a work by J. McKeen Cattell, professor of experimental psychology in Columbia College, entitled "A Course in Experimental Psychology." Laboratory instruction in experimental psychology is now given in the leading universities of America, Great Britain, Germany, and France, but, owing to the recent introduction of the subject, there is no text-book. A laboratory handbook on the lines which have been proved useful in physical and biological science will make instruction easier for the teacher and more profitable for the student, and will permit the introduction of the subject in colleges where it could not otherwise be taught. They have in press a work on the "Sources of the Constitution of the United States," by Dr. C. Ellis Stevens.

THOS. BIRCH'S SONS, 1110 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, will sell on Wednesday and Thursday, February 14 and 15, Part 1 of the valuable American historical library of the Hon. Frederick Bourquin, of Camden, N. J. Mr. Bourquin has been a most careful collector for the past sixty-five years, and libraries and collectors may get some special treasures at this sale. The catalogue has been compiled by Stan. V. Henkels, who will also conduct the sale, and attend to orders if so desired. The lot already catalogued contains histories of states, and of cities; church history, revolutionary history; works relating to André and Arnold; genealogies; American Bibles, prayer and hymn books; travels and expeditions in the United States, and Washingtoniana. In the next catalogue will appear books relating to the War of the Rebellion; War of 1812; the Mexican War; Indian history; early American imprints; the Quakers; American biography; general American history, etc.

HARPER & BROTHERS publish this week some notable books. The list includes Professor Charles Wright Dodge's "Introduction to Elementary Practical Biology," a work for the use of students in high-schools and colleges; "The Science of the Earth," by Sir J. William Dawson, a most interesting geological study; the second volume in the firm's series of George William Curtis's complete works, which includes Mr Curtis's "Addresses and Reports on the Reform of the Civil Service of the United States;" and "Parisian Points of View," being a translation by Edith V. B. Matthews of nine French stories by Ludovic Halévy, with an introduction by Brander Matthews. "In Direst Peril," a new novel by David Christie Murray; "The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes," by A. Conan Doyle; a new edition of Mr. Black's "The Penance of John Logan;" and "Horace Chase," by Miss Constance Fenimore Woolson, are additions to the season's list of fiction which will be acceptable. A special interest attaches to "Horace Chase," by-the-by, as Miss Woolson's unexpected death has made it her last novel.

BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION.

THE following is the programme, so far as it has been possible to arrange it, of the authors' readings to be held under the auspices of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association, on the 6th inst., at the Carnegie Music Hall, Fifty-seventh Street and Seventh Avenue, New York:

GEN. LEW WALLACE..Readings from "Ben-Hur" and "The Prince of India."
GEO. W. CABLE......"The School Examination at Grande Pointe."
JOHN KENDRICK BANGS."The Inventions of the Idiot," from the new (unpublished) series of "Coffee and Repartee."
JULIA WARD HOWE....."The Three Giants," "A Fireside Journey," and "After the War."
PAUL DU CHAILLU....."Ivar the Viking."
WALLACE BRUCE....."Ole Bull's Christmas."

Richard Watson Gilder has kindly consented to preside.

The tickets are being rapidly taken up, the programme liberally patronized, and the boxes also are nearly all spoken for, so that from a financial point of view the entertainment will be quite satisfactory. That it will be so in other respects is vouched for, we believe, in the names of the authors who have volunteered their services.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

More than five thousand hymns and poems, and as many tunes, have been examined in making this selection of 638 hymns and 471 tunes. The selection has been based on the belief that the profoundest spiritual experience has found expression in very different schools. All schools have, therefore, been consulted, and all phases of spiritual experience are represented. The selection has been based also on the belief that beauty of form is consistent with depth of feeling, and that the most perfect forms, both in poetry and music, are not too difficult for social and public worship. A psalter for responsive reading, and some brief liturgical "orders of service," are appended to the hymns. There is also a department of spiritual songs for use in social meetings. The indexes are complete and convenient.

Allardyce, Alex. Earlscourt: a novel of provincial life. N. Y., Appleton, 1894. c. '93. 4+357 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., 132.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c. [220

Stephen Brancepeth, the son of a rich banker in the English rural town of Earlscourt, exhausts his father's patience and for a time wanders from his home. He returns a rich man and buys the Dunes House, the handsomest property in the neighborhood, astonishing all his former associates, who cannot imagine where he found his money. This is explained by a complicated plot, showing some of the skeletons in the closets of the large and interesting family at Earlscourt.

He was an officer in the British army, and had just returned from India when the story opens. His character is developed through several circumstances—chiefly a hopeless love for a good woman and his mother's unselfish devotion—his virtues and best traits coming to the surface.

In pursuance of this object, the author has examined all the standard authorities, and presented the gist of the whole subject in the least possible compass and in the most interesting form. It embraces the improved method of American leads and the laws of whist as revised by the recent Whist Congress at Chicago, so that the technical part of the work is in accordance with the latest authorization.

De Peyster, J. Watts, ["Anchor" pseud.] Waterloo: the campaign and battle—Blücher, Wellington, Napoleon. N. Y., Charles H. Ludwig & Co., 1893 [1894.] 32 p. map, O. pap. (printed for private circulation.) [244

The author dissects Napoleon's tactics and character in a dispassionate, scientific and impartial manner, and seems to prove that though the battle of Waterloo was by no means fought by the Napoleon of 1795, or even of 1805, it was lost by Napoleon's own lack of foresight and almost wilful waste of time. Besides a description of the battle the author gives clear-cut estimates of Blücher, Wellington, and Napoleon.

Frapan, Ilse, (pseud.) God's will, and other stories; tr. by Helen A. Macdonnell. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1894.] c. 2+183 p. nar. D. (Unknown lib., no. 28.) cl., 50 c. [250

A quaint story of lowly life among Dutch peasants. The heroine is left motherless at fourteen. She takes hold of the family burdens, but does it in a hard, sad way, until advised by her pastor to see "God's will" in all things. Her father arranges a marriage between herself and a cousin "of the earth, earthy." At the marriage altar she says "no" where "yes" was expected by the reader as fully as by the attending friends, a point giving great literary merit to the romance. The other stories are: "Our journey," "A Christmas story," "The first," and "The scorcher."

Selected from the first volume of Freytag's "Bilder aus der deutschen vergangenheit" for intrinsic value and interest and also because the three essays consist largely of direct and simple narrative, adapted for the second year of the study of German. The editor is instructor in German at Harvard University.

Mr. Wayt is a minister with a great gift of oratory, unbounded self-appreciation, and total lack of consideration for his wife and five children. The wife adores him; his wife's sister keeps the house together during the many changes of parishes. At the time of the story he is settled in a New Jersey country parish. A crippled daughter is made a very interesting character. By chance the family skeleton is seen by the lover of Mr. Wayt's wife's sister. Two other stories are included: "A social success" and "The articles of separation."

They formed "The Fireside Club," in which they discussed matters of the life here and the life hereafter and gave each other hopeful, practical encouragement of all kinds. Van Brunt, who had lost his wife and ten-year-old boy on the same day, was brought from a state bordering on insanity to one of peace and hope. The writer is former pastor of the Church of the Messiah, N. Y. City, and the author of "Hiram Golf's religion," published in 1893 anonymously.

Since it has been found that animals can and do live even at the greatest depths of the ocean, scientists have been continually adding to the valuable literature of that subject; their knowledge given in detail is generally embraced in the reports of the scientific expeditions fitted out by our own and foreign governments, and in memoirs and notes scattered through the English and foreign scientific journals. This little book brings together in a small compass some of the more important facts and considerations that are included in this great mass of literature, and presents them in a form for popular reading.

Teresa Warcop, an English heiress, who is accredited with being rather plain in personal appearance, falls in love with Sidney Wiche, an aspirant for the hand of Lady Mallinger, a very young widow. Just after the latter accepts Wiche as her suitor a quarrel between the two rivals and an interview between Wiche and his betrothed causes some diversion, and brings about the unexpected ending of a decidedly unromantic love-story.

Most of the story has "The Hague" as the stage for its characters. High life means both the upper social circles of the world with their ambitions, false aspirations, tarnished idols, etc., and the upward reachings of true souls for the greatest good they can accomplish. There is strong writing against priests and their methods. The author says: "From the religions of our inheriting, our imbibing, our creating—from all religions but of thine implanting—deliver us, Oh Lord." Worldliness and selfishness, true love of one's neighbor, and self-sacrifice are all represented by strong characters.

Parker, Gay. La Belle Creole. Chic., E. A. Weeks & Co., [1894.] 6–339 p. D. (Melbourne ser., no. 14.) pap., 25 c. [294

Episodes in the past lives of John Ross and Louis de Jarnette, exile them from home; meeting in the Barbadoes, they are astounded by their wonderful personal resemblance to each other, and finally on the strength of an apparent coincidence form a friendship which ends with the death of de Jarnette, when circumstances tempt Ross to personate his dead friend. The consequences of this act are both startling and sensational, especially the scene which he enacts in New Orleans with Lucille de Guarcia (La Belle Creole).

The story describes what a few months did in the lives of certain men and women. Much of this time was spent in Norway by these people of social position and refined artistic tastes. The swing of the pendulum is the fluctuation of opinion and feeling in a young author's heart and mind as to the true character of a girl who has jilted his dearest friend. The narrative ends with "a note of interrogation instead of a full stop."

Christina Chard, a curious, contradictory character, comes into possession of a great sum of money. Her portrait is painted by the artist of the hour in London, which brings her into contact with the crowd of fashionable, gifted people who haunt studios. The story also introduces many schemes in which capitalists employ money. The idea of the story is credited to the artist George H. Boughton, to whom the book is dedicated.

Since Dean Stanley's death in 1881, over twelve years ago, it has been a matter of surprise that no adequate biography had appeared of one who had held so prominent a part in the ecclesiastical literary and social history of more than a generation. The present work explains the delay; out of three literary executors appointed by Mr. Stanley, two died after having done a great deal of work on his papers; the third was too busy to take the matter then in hand. The Dean of Westminster, Stanley's old friend, then offered to sift the material, and begun the work. After some years spent on it, his health broke down, and it became necessary to find another biographer, and Mr. Prothero was chosen, and all the unfinished work of the previous writers was placed in his possession. The material that forms the basis of this work, comes mostly from Stanley himself. He was the most indefatigable of letter-writers, from his early days at Rugby, Oxford, and Cambridge until the end of his life. Next in importance were the letters addressed to him, and communications from his friends, recalling traits and anecdotes, written after his death. The work contains a list of Stanley's publications, covering eight pages, which does not claim to be an exhaustive or a scientific bibliography.

The life of Jeanne Jugan, a holy peasant woman, generally thought to have been the foundress of the "Little Sisters of the Poor," an account of which order serves as a frame to Jeanne's pathetic story. She was the first quêteuse, or collector of alms, and her name is forever connected with the order, as it was her small beginnings which laid its foundations, though she was not its real foundress. She was born in France in 1792. A history of the various houses of the order in many countries is given.

Gathered by Dr. Rand during the forty years he spent as a missionary among the Micmac Indians of Nova Scotia; the stories were related to him in Micmac, by the native Indians, and then translated and written down by him in English. The collection is valuable to the philologist, the authropologist, and the ethnologist. It is believed the legends show traces of the Northmen, as a closer study of the language of the Micmacs may reveal the impress of the early north invaders. Introductory are a sketch of the life of the Rev. Dr. Rand, a list of his works covering eight pages, showing his great industry as a linguist while among the Indians, and a paper on "The manners, customs, language, and literature of the Micmac Indians in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island."

"The one hundred and three sonnets and eleven lyrics with which Dante Gabriel Rossetti chose to build his 'House of life' are here set forth according to their obvious design. Those used in the volume of mdccclxx. are reproduced as they then appeared, not as they have appeared since in the volume of mdccclxxxi. The deplorable circumstance is well known which led to the too sensitive withdrawal of one of the sequence and to the revision of others: a mistaken sacrifice of beauty to a mistakenly imposed ideal. The makers of this edition revert by choice to the poet's original plan of work. As 'The house of life' stood in Rossetti's mind, so it stands, once again, in its innocence and perfection."—Preface. The volume is embellished with three ornamental borders and 114 initial letters designed by B. Superfluous woman (A.) N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1894.] c. 3+336 p. D. cl., $1. [321

A study in heredity, in the form of a novel; thought to be by the author of "The heavenly twins." The heroine is a "professional beauty," who has been taught to think the highest happiness is found in a marriage of wealth and position. She rebels against the attempts of her aunt to marry her to Lord Heriot, the "greatest catch in Europe," a worn-out roué, the last of his line of degenerate ancestors, and suddenly disappears from London society, hiding herself in an isolated spot in the Scotch Highlands. Here she falls in love with a noble type of the Scotch peasant, whom her pride prevents her marrying. After a short struggle she returns to her old life and marries Lord Heriot. This marriage, with its dreadful consequences, is the author's opportunity for many plainly expressed physiological truths. The heroine is a painfully powerful character-study.

FEBRUARY 3, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the news expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

CHARACTERISTICS OF MODERN ENGLISH LITERATURE.

UNDER the title "English Literature of the Victorian Age" Mr. Frederic Harrison contributes to the February Forum an excellent summary of the changes in style, tendency, and aims that have been wrought in English literature during the last fifty-seven years. Using the term Victorian Age as a convenient label for the period 1837–1894, and confining himself to a consideration of the literature produced in Great Britain during those years, he demonstrates with considerable effectiveness the characteristics that so widely differentiate the literature of this period from that of the preceding years. Taking the accession of Victoria in 1837 to be a purely arbitrary point, and, in itself, not a significant one, it is nevertheless interesting to note the remarkable contrast between the literature produced before and after that year. At that time nearly all the great writers of the past century—Scott, Byron, Shelley, Keats, Coleridge, Lamb, Sheridan, Hazlitt, Crabbe, and Cobbett—were dead; there still remained Wordsworth, Southey, Campbell, Moore, Jeffrey Sidney Smith, De Quincey, Miss Edgeworth, Miss Mitford, and Leigh Hunt; but these had produced their best work. Writers belonging equally to the Victorian and Georgian ages were Landor, Bulwer, Disraeli, Hallam, and Milman. Within the period of the reign of Victoria is found, with a few trifling exceptions, the whole work of Tennyson, the Brownings, Thackeray, Dickens, the Brontës, George Eliot, the Kingsleys, Trollope, Spencer, Mill, Darwin, Ruskin, Grote, Macaulay, Freeman, Froude, Lecky, Milman, Green, Matthew Arnold, Symonds, Rossetti, Swinburne, Morris, and some younger writers still in their prime and promise.

A glance over these names and then at the names preceding them emphasizes at once the distinctive characteristic of the literature of the Victorian age. "This is the age of sociology," says Mr. Harrison. "Its central achievement has been the revelation of social law." It is as far removed from the Virgilian and Ciceronian style of the age of Pope and Addison, Gray and Johnson, as it is from the tempestuous tragedy and romance, mystery and legend that marked the days of Byron, Shelley, Scott, and Coleridge. The social earnestness of the time is felt throughout its literature. Carlyle's histories overflow with social and political rhapsody and invective; Dickens waged warfare against social abuses in nearly all his novels; George Eliot brought her genius to the analysis of human nature; Tennyson has woven theological controversy into lyric verse; Ruskin devotes his deepest earnestness to the preaching of social equality and the brotherhood of man; the most popular novels of the day deal with subtle questions of psychology and problems of social ethics. The central note of the literature of the Victorian age may well be described as "the dominant influence of sociology—enthusiasm for social truths as an instrument of social reform." Mr. Harrison sums up its characteristics briefly. It is "scientific, subjective, introspective, historical, archæological; full of vitality, versatility, and diligence; intensely personal, defiant of all law, of standards, of convention; laborious, exact, but often indifferent to grace, symmetry or color; it is learned, critical, cultured; with all its ambition and its fine feeling, it is unsympathetic to the highest forms of the imagination, and quite alien to the drama of action." This change in the tone of literature he traces back to the death of Scott in 1832, the year of the Reform Act, and in this act, heralding the social and legislative revolution of the last sixty years, he finds the political and social cause of the great change.

Another notable point is the diversity of style that now prevails in literature; as a matter of fact there is no "style," no standard, no conventional type or good "model." It is an age of "go-as-you-please," every man speaking what he will in his own words, from the almost perfect prose of Thackeray, the flawless polish of "In Memoriam," to the original genius and extravagance of Carlyle, or the commonplace, ill-digested, nerveless style too frequently characteristic of modern scientific research.

Of later years there has been a rapid increase of the scientific and sociological spirit in literature. Dividing the period from the death of Scott in 1832 into two equal parts, we have two periods of thirty-one years each, and it is a noteworthy fact that the purely literary product of the first period (1832–1863) is superior to the purely literary product of the second period (1863–1894). The former gave us the best work of Tennyson, the Brownings, Carlyle, Thackeray, Dickens, Bulwer, the Brontës, George Eliot, Kingsley, Macaulay, Kinglake, Ruskin; the second gave, in the main, Darwin, Spencer, Huxley, John Morley, Matthew Arnold, Freeman, Bryce, Green, Symonds, Rossetti, Morris, Swinburne. This division of the literature of the age into two periods furnishes a remarkable demonstration of the change wrought during the later years. In the first period poetry, romance, the critical, imaginative, and pictorial power predominate; the second is dominated by philosophy, science, politics, and history.

It is the growth and present predominance of the practical, scientific, and social spirit that in Mr. Harrison's opinion has checked the highest imaginative and dramatic genius. He finds no poetry to place beside the "Prometheus" of Shelley, no drama to equal the "School for Scandal;" romance has been ousted by reality, the "subjective" has displaced the "objective." Especially he cites the "almost entire disappearance of the historical romance in spite of the immense extension of historical study and archæological revival;" and points out "Harold," "Esmond" and "Romola,"—all of them forty years old or more, and none of them unqualified successes—as the highest examples of historical romance produced during the age, and unapproached by later historical fiction. Strangely enough he makes no mention of "The Cloister and the Hearth," which certainly ranks with the three books cited; but that, too, is more than thirty years old and but strengthens his deductions.

The conclusion to which this survey of the literature of the Victorian age leads is not only interesting but seems thoroughly well founded. Briefly it is that "the predominance of sociology, the restless rapidity of modern life, and the omnipresence of material activity fully account for the special character of modern literature. Literature is no longer 'bookish'—but practical, social, propagandist. It is full of life—but it is a dispersive, analytic, erratic form of vitality. It has a most fastidious taste in form—but it often flings the critical spirit aside in its ardor to convince and to inspire. It is industrious, full of learning and research—but it regards its learning as an instrument of research, not as an end of thought. It has no 'standard,' no 'model,' no 'best writer'—and yet it has a curious faculty for reviving every known form and imitating any style. It is intensely historical, but so accurately historical that it is afraid to throw the least color of imagination around its history. It has consummate poetic feeling and copious poetic gifts—but it has now no single poet of the first rank. It has infinite romantic resources, and an army of skilful novelists—and yet it has no single writer living to be named beside the great romancers of the nineteenth century."

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY TO LEAVE ITS OLD QUARTERS.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY, after so long occupying the site at the corner of Nassau and Spruce Streets, New York, will remove up-town some time in April, about which time the work of tearing down their present quarters will be begun.

"If our plans are carried out," said the Rev. Dr. William A. Rice, one of the secretaries of the Society, to a representative of the press, "nothing will be left of the present building on May 1. The cost of the new structure (which will be not less than fifteen stories high, divided into offices, with stores on the ground floor) will be probably between $500,000 and $600,000.

"The Society has felt for a long time that it was not getting the returns that it should from so valuable a property as this. I cannot say where we will move our book-store to. We are looking at property between Twentieth and Twenty-third Streets, in the neighborhood of Broadway. It is yet undetermined where we will have our manufacturing establishment, but it will go further up-town into a less expensive neighborhood. Our managers have been looking at property on the east side near Twentieth Street, I believe. We shall never bring our manufacturing back here again. Its removal will be permanent. But I would not say that our sales-rooms might not be located in our new building when it is finished. The present expectation is that our 'sky-scraper' will be built within a year ready for occupancy. In any case only a small part of the new structure will be used by the American Tract Society. The most of it will be for rent. The new building will occupy the whole of our present site, eighty feet in Nassau Street, and about one hundred and fifty-five feet in Spruce Street."

THE LAW AS TO CANCELLED ORDERS.

So much has been written and said on the cancellation of orders and the return of goods once purchased that the rights of both seller and buyer are becoming more clearly defined under the law. Both parties have certain rights, and the suits growing out of the infringement of these rights are having a good effect, at least in the way of defining precisely what one can or cannot do under the law. Many retail merchants have an idea that they can refuse to accept goods at any time after ordered. Such would not seem to be the case under the decision of the Supreme Court of Georgia, in the case of McCord vs. Laidley, where a firm bought a carload of goods to be shipped and paid for on delivery. The seller shipped the car and forwarded a draft. The draft was presented before the car arrived, and payment refused, and the buying firm notified the seller that he had violated the contract by demanding payment before the delivery of the goods, and that they would not accept the goods when they arrived. When the car arrived it was tendered to the buyers and they refused it. It was then sold for what it would bring, which was much less than the contract price. The buyers were held by the court to be liable for the deficit. The decision is not only good law, but sound common sense, and would undoubtedly be cited as a precedent in all similar cases.

OBITUARY NOTES.

CONSTANCE FENIMORE WOOLSON, author of "The Happy Valley," "Anne," "East Angels," and other sketches, novels, and poems, came to her death in Venice on the 23d ult. by falling out of the window in the house where she was living. Miss Woolson was suffering with the grip, and was delirious when the accident occurred. She was born in Claremont, N. H., in 1848, and her mother was a niece of James Fenimore Cooper. She afterward lived in Cleveland, New York, and Florida. Upon the death of her mother in February, 1879, Miss Woolson went abroad, where she spent the rest of her life, returning to this country but once in the fifteen years, and then only for a short visit. Her life abroad was spent mainly in Venice, Rome, Sorrento, Germany, and Switzerland. She was buried in the Protestant cemetery in Rome, near Shelley's grave.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MISS MARY WAKEFIELD, a friend and neighbor of Mr. Ruskin, is preparing a collection of all of his scattered sayings about the art of music.

JULIAN RALPH, the clever journalist, has been annoyed for more than a year by an impostor who has been using his name in the South and West. So cleverly has his pseudo double managed the deception, that it has taken nearly two years to discover and expose him.

MRS. MARY (Montgomery Lamb) SINGLETON, who was married a couple of weeks ago to Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador at Constantinople, it will be remembered, is the lady who has published a book or two of graceful verses under the pseudonym of "Violet Fane."

F. MARION CRAWFORD has nearly completed a new novel that is to be published by Macmillan & Co. late in the spring. The novel deals with American life, and there is a rumor that Mr. Crawford has introduced an American family whose fortunes he will follow in several novels as he did those of the "Saracinesca" in his Roman series. The novel is to be illustrated by Alfred Brennan.

THE appointment of Miss Louise Imogen Guiney, the literary woman and poet, as postmaster of Auburndale, Mass., came as almost a birthday gift to her, for it came within a few days of an anniversary. Miss Guiney is said to be an excellent musician as well as a charming poet, to be fluent in the French and Italian languages, a good Latin scholar, and highly versed in English literature.

THE late Miss Woolson is said to have left no unpublished manuscripts with the exception of one or two in the possession of Harper's Magazine. Her short stories were in great demand and rarely remained long in the publisher's hands before being printed. "A Transplanted Boy," in the February Harper's, was written two years ago, and is one of a series of sketches of Italian life, of which enough were finished to make a small volume.

SOME of Mr. Theodore Child's personal friends in New York and in Paris have desired to establish in some useful way a memorial to him; and for that purpose a fund now amounting to about 5700 karans, or say $710, has been entrusted to the American Presbyterian Mission in Tabriz, [illegible] cholera, and most kindly cared for. A letter from Dr. Mary E. Bradford, dated at Tabriz on Dec. 11, says: "The suggestion as to a hospital room or bed to be called by Mr. Child's name seems to meet with general approval. We hope the way may be open for us to have a hospital and see this carried out."

THE author of that most extraordinary book, "Keynotes" (published in this country by Roberts Bros.), whose feminine qualities were more than suspected, notwithstanding the masculine pseudonym, "George Egerton," is said to be Mrs. Clairmonte. Says one of her English reviewers: "The stories are full of Norway; the witchery of the north has got into the writer's blood. She has, too, one would say, come considerably under the influence of Norwegian modern writers, notably of Björnsen. One is reminded again and again of 'The Heritage of the Kurts' in reading 'Under Northern Sky.' All the tales are wayward, incalculable, and, whoever may have influenced them, original. But passion in its narrower sense is not the motive of them all. Very charming is 'The Spell of the White Elf,' full of present-day allusions and of the present-day spirit; the tale of how a little child upset all the ways and habits of a modern household, and how the household rejoiced thereat."

"THE news that Mrs. Langtry is writing a novel, which comes over the cable with the regularity of the recurring seasons," says the New York Sun, "has lost something of its novelty, but it is true, nevertheless. The book was begun nearly four years ago, and several writers of distinction in London have tinkered at it in one way or another. At first Mrs. Langtry decided to have a secretary and dictate her memoirs to him, but after several unsuccessful trials she gave this plan up, and when she returned to London she tried the scheme of giving her general ideas to a journalist, and having him clothe them in attractive English, but after he had finished about one-third of the book she became so thoroughly dissatisfied with it that she burned it up. Then she started in on the work of writing it herself. Edmund Yates was called in from time to time in consultation. Sometimes she puts the manuscript away and does not touch it for months. Again she will write industriously for several weeks upon the work. Nearly all the London publishers have attempted to get hold of the book, but without success. Mrs. Langtry will publish, circulate, and advertise the volume herself."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH & CO. will publish some time in March the first number of a quarterly magazine of bibliography. It will consist of a series of papers by writers of authority on various points of book-lore. The publishers will imitate Octave Uzanne's example in fixing beforehand that the magazine is to last for three years only, ending, no matter what its success, with the appearance of the twelfth number in December, 1896. Subscribers will thus know from the first when their set will be complete. The following articles will appear in early numbers: "English Illuminated MSS.," by Maunde Thompson; "The Stationers at the Sign of the Trinity," by Gordon Duff; "The Books of Queen Christina of Sweden," by Charles Elton; [illegible] by William Morris; and "On Some Engravers of English Book-Plates," by W. J. Hardy. Among the other contributors to the magazine will be Austin Dobson, Dr. Copinger, Dr. Garnett, Chancellor Christie, Messrs. Graves, Jenkinson, A. Lang, Madan, Fuller Maitland, Fairfax Murray, Russell Martineau, Pollard, W. B. Squire, Tedder, Uzanne, Warner, H. Wheatley, and Weale.

PROF. W. M. SLOAN, of Princeton College, who has been for several years past gathering material for a complete and exhaustive life of Napoleon Bonaparte, has almost finished the writing of the work. It will be published serially in The Century, beginning with the November number this year. This life of Napoleon will be profusely illustrated, the only difficulty in this regard being the enormous amount of material. Of portraits of the emperor alone there are more than enough to fill the book. Only the most important and most rare will be selected for the purpose.

STEAD'S Daily Paper, the unique plan of which was so much discussed, has been abandoned. The hundred and fifty thousand subscribers did not respond, and Mr. Stead simply says: "Therefore the public does not want it, and I shall not start it."

The Contributors' Magazine, published privately for the members of the Contributors' Club, of Chicago, has reached its third issue.

PERSONAL NOTES.

T. J. BRETT, who has for the past ten years represented A. C. McClurg & Co. on the road, severed his relations with that house at the beginning of the year. C. G. Acret, who has represented C. M. Barnes on the road for several years, has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

E. A. LAWSON, for some time manager of the book and stationery departments of Siegel, Cooper & Co., of Chicago, and before that buyer for C. M. Barnes, has severed his connection with the former firm to become an active partner in the firm of E. A. Weeks & Co.

T. PERCY SIDDALL, late with S. A. Maxwell & Co., and at one time with Claxton, Remsen & Haffelfinger, succeeds Mr. Lawson at Siegel, Cooper & Co's.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

CATALOGUES OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKS.—Andrew Baxendie, 10 St. Giles St., Edinburgh, Miscellaneous. (No. 47, 1307 titles.) —E. F. Bonaventure, 45 W. 31st St., N. Y., Fine books. (New ser., No. 1, 148 titles.)—Wm. R. Hill, 5 E. Monroe St., Chicago, First editions extra illustrated, etc. (No. 2, 382 titles.) —Luzac & Co., 46 Gt. Russell St., London. W. C., Oriental list. (4 p. 8°.)—Bernard Quaritch, 15 Piccadilly, London, Manuscripts, arranged in chronological order and books illustrating the science of palæography. (No. 138, 244 titles); Manucripts may be classed under various headings: as being literary texts before the invention of printing, as being artistically valuable for their illuminations, as documents for palæography, as the crude materials for history, or even as autographs. Of all of these there are examples in this catalogue, though Mr. Quaritch has preferred to arrange his MSS. in strict chronological order, which of course cuts across other divisions. He has, however, prefixed a classified index according to subjects, and called attention in a preface to some of his chief treasures. He no longer owns the famous Talbot Prayer-Book—which has found a home in the United States—but he still has in his possession several early liturgical books of English manufacture, and also MSS. of Wyclyf, Chaucer, Gower, and the unique Towneley mysteries. Italian, French, and German art is magnificently represented; among these we may specially mention a superb vellum of the "Roman de la Rose," dated circa 1475. Greek and Latin classics are less conspicuous; for, to tell the truth, they are less valued by collectors. But the first lot of all is a Greek codex of the Gospels, of the tenth century, which was brought from Cyprus by Major Alessandro Cesnola; and there are several Latin Bibles of the twelfth to the fifteenth century.—Henry Stevens & Son, 39 Gt. Russell St., London, W. C., Second clearance list of Americana. (891 titles.)—D. Van Nostrand Company, 23 Murray St., N. Y., Works on chemistry, chemical technology, and physics. (56 p. 8°.)—Edgar A. Werner, 35 Chestnut St., Albany, N. Y., Miscellaneous. (No. 2, 1066 titles.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

F. W. HELMICK, 265 Sixth Avenue, N. Y., has published a song and chorus by Alberto Himan, entitled "The Girl Across the Way."

DELMONICO's veteran chef, Charles Ranhoefer, will publish by subscription a cook-book, which he promises will contain 1200 octavo pages, embracing 3700 recipes, and embellished with 800 engravings.

THE CHAIN & HARDY COMPANY, Denver, Col., will publish at once "The Right of Appropriation," being the law of water for irrigation in the Western arid region. It will be uniform in size and price with Morrison's "Mining Rights."

THE SCHULTE PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, are reporting a boom on Art Young's clever parody on Dante's immortal work. "Hell Up to Date," notwithstanding its title, is well worth reading, and when once better known is bound to sell well.

GINN & CO. will publish in March a book entitled "Latin at Sight," by Prof. Edwin Post, of De Pauw University. They will publish in April "A Preparatory German Reader," with notes and vocabulary, prepared for beginners by Mr. A. N. Van Daell.

WILBUR B. KETCHAM, N. Y., the publisher of "Sanctified Spice; or, pungent seasonings from the pulpit," by Madison C. Peters, pastor of the Bloomingdale Reformed Church, has just brought out a new edition of this book which has met with such a ready sale that the price has been reduced from $1.50 to $1.

ANDREW D. MELLICK, JR., the author of the interesting and valuable "Story of an Old Farm," has lately grangerized a copy of his work, enlarging it to three handsome volumes. He has used for the purpose a notable collection of Colonial and Revolutionary MSS., together with quantities of portraits and prints, old and new.

D. C. HEATH & CO. will issue at once their long-promised edition of Schiller's "Wilhelm Tell," with introduction and notes by Prof. R. W. Deering, of Western Reserve University. They have in press for immediate issue a "Short French Grammar," by C. H. Grandgent, director of modern language instruction in the public schools of Boston.

COPELAND & DAY, 69 Cornhill, Boston, who have just issued a charming edition of the unexpurgated version of Rossetti's "House of Life," have in preparation an equally handsome edition of "The Imitation of Christ," to be issued in four books, unabridged with page-size and initial letters fac-similed from those in the original MS. preserved in the Royal Library of Brussels.

AT the instance of Dr. William Seward Webb, the correspondence and journals of his grandfather, Samuel Blatchley Webb, an officer and prisoner of the Revolution, have been collected and edited by Worthington C. Ford, in three volumes, royal octavo. The work contains a number of finely engraved portraits. One hundred of the 350 sets printed are offered for sale to the public through Charles H. Burnett, 51 E. 44th St., New York City.

EDW. J. NIEUWLAND, Sr., 1962 Amsterdam Ave., New York City, has published a "Claim-selling Placard," which he commends to storekeepers who wish by "a practical, passive, peaceful, and economical medium to offer for sale, cheap, their just claims to overdue debts against those of their debtors who can pay them, and persist in not meeting their obligations promptly." The placard is 12 x 18½ inches in size, clearly printed, and retails for 25 cents.

MRS. ELIZABETH HILL BISSELL ROBERTS has made an admirable English translation of Victor Cherbuliez's "A Phidian Horse," which combines the essential characteristics of the novel and profound reflections upon art and philosophy, with a felicity possible only to French skill and penetration. Hand in hand go an earnest investigation of the methods and aims of the Greeks in art, and a romance of a beautiful marchioness, devoted to the study of the antique. The book may be had through John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia.

THE advertising poster is fast becoming a work of art. In Paris the colored cartoons of M. Jules Chéret, proclaiming the virtues of hair restoratives and the graces of concert-hall singers, are eagerly sought by collectors, rare sorts bringing prices varying from twenty-five to one hundred francs. The mania for collecting show-bills has reached this country, and Harper & Brothers are said to have received so many requests for the series of monthly colored posters of Harper's Magazine that no more sets are obtainable.

F. HENRY GREER, whose name has been connected with such works as "Men of Progress," "Men of Mark," "American Homes," etc., and with such concerns as The International Press Department of the London and Hartford Publishing Company of Jersey City, sometimes also known as the London, New York and Hartford Publishing Company, of 122 East 26th Street, New York, and elsewhere, is denounced by Senator Palmer, Theodore Havemeyer, and others, for attempting to obtain money under false pretences.

THE papers presented at the International Congress of Charities, Correction, and Philanthropy, held at Chicago, June 12–18, 1893, are now in preparation for publication at the Johns Hopkins Press. These papers, brought together and arranged by the committee on publication appointed by the congress, will appear in five octavo volumes of about five hundred pages each, and the series promises to be the most interesting and complete collection of information on vital questions of charitable, reformatory, and philanthropic work that has so far appeared in this country. The papers were presented by the leading thinkers and workers in these special fields in Europe and America, and embody the latest experiences and conclusions. The subjects covered in the volumes are: Charity organization; Sociology as a special topic in institutions of learning; The insane; Hospitals, dispensaries, and nursing; Neglected, abandoned, and dependent children; Crime and criminals; The treatment of feeble-minded children; The public treatment of pauperism. It is expected that the volumes on Hospital work, Charity organization, Sociological study, and Insanity will be published in January or soon after. Some of the volumes will contain two subjects. The edition is limited and volumes are sold singly or in sets.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD has issued three interesting pamphlets. One is a memorial of the centenary of the birth of Henry C. Carey, the first advocate of the policy of protection in America, and the founder of the present house of Henry Carey Baird & Co. It contains tributes to Carey's life and work by Robert Ellis Thompson, David H. Mason, James M. Swank, and others, reprinted from the periodicals in which they first appeared. The centennial anniversary of Carey's birth was December 15, 1893. He was born in Philadelphia, and succeeded his father, Mathew Carey, as head of the publishing house established by Mathew Carey in 1785, and still continued by his descendants. From 1836 until his death in 1879, Carey devoted himself to the study of political economy, and his writings were among the most important contributions to the literature of protection. The other pamphlets are devoted to the currency question, and are reprints of communications addressed by Henry Carey Baird to various periodicals on "The Silver Purchases of 1878–1893 as a Saving Fund for Labor Power," and "The United States Before the Passage of the Silver Bill of Feb. 28, 1878." This house has also just issued a very complete catalogue of books and pamphlets on social science, noticed elsewhere.

THE case of J. Ward Gamble vs. Hubbard Brothers of Philadelphia was decided in favor of the defendant. The story of the case came out in the defence. Mr. Hubbard alleged that Gamble came to him with what he claimed to be an exceedingly choice collection of matter written or spoken by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, which had been published without being copyrighted. Relying on these representations, Mr. Hubbard alleged, he agreed to publish it, and give Mr. Gamble his note for $1000. After some delay the book was taken up for work, and the true condition of affairs was discovered. Mr. Hubbard asserted that not only had the work been unskilfully prepared, to such a degree that other persons had to be employed to fix it up, entailing a large amount of work, but that it was devoid of the value represented, because it was found that much of the material had been cut out, pages together, from books which had been published and copyrighted. The notes in suit were given for the purchase of the manuscript, together with others, making up the $1000, but the others, it was stated, had been transferred to third persons, and have been paid. Mr. Hubbard alleged that had he continued with the publication he would have become liable to litigation for infringing on copyrights, and as he had, by reason of the falsity of the representations made, been put to expense and loss which exceeded the amount of the notes, he was not indebted to Mr. Gamble.

FOREIGN NOTES.

FROM the sales of the foreign rights of each of their new books it is said that Daudet and Zola receive each about $6000.

THE present London edition of Thomas Hardy's "Tess" is said to have reached a sale of 23,000 copies. A new collection of Hardy's "Wessex Tales" will be issued shortly.

VICTOR SCHOELCHER'S "Life of Toussaint l'Ouverture" is being translated by Mr. Theodore Stanton of the Paris Galignani. Frederick Douglass has written an introduction for the book.

THE niece of Guy de Maupassant has inherited all his MS. and note-books. Last year the copyright royalties on the works of the dead novelist produced $8000. It is estimated that they will yield about $6000 annually.

As a souvenir for their friends, Elkin Mathews & John Lane, London, have printed a dainty little quarto pamphlet, containing an anonymous prose fancy on "Limited Editions," together with a sonnet entitled "Confessio Amantis," by Mr. R. Le Gallienne.

WILLIAM WATSON has entirely recovered from his recent attack of mental aberration, and is writing once more with all his accustomed grace and charm. His new poems, among which are some very powerful sonnets, will soon be published in the London papers, and have been already copyrighted in America.

WITH reference to the supposed new work by Charles Lamb, "Cupid's Revenge," a correspondent writes to the London Literary World, reminding it that a tale with that title, founded on the plot of Beaumont and Fletcher's play bearing the same name, is included in Bell and Daldy's edition of "Lamb's Essays," 1867.

ELLIOT STOCK, London, will publish directly the seventh volume of "Book Prices Current." This year's issue will contain particulars of aution sales that have taken place from December, 1892, to November last. In that time about 50,000 lots were disposed of, realizing a total amount of £66,470, which may be considered a fair average.

BELL & SONS have just issued in their Ex Libris Series a limited edition of Albert Dürer's "Little Passion," printed from stereotypes taken from the original wood-blocks, which are in the British Museum. An attempt has been made to reproduce as nearly as possible the second Nüremburg edition of 1511. Austin Dobson has written an introduction, and the volume is uniform with his edition of Holbein's "Dance of Death" in the same series. A photogravure reproduction of Dürer's portrait of himself forms the frontispiece.

AT the December meeting of the London Bibliographical Society Mr. J. H. Isaacs read a paper "On a New Edition of Lowndes' Bibliographer's Manual." The speaker estimated that with the aid of the society it would be completed in six years, and include American books published before 1780. In the discussion which followed Messrs. Copinger (the president of the society), J. H. Slater, Jenkinson, A. Huth, B. Wheatley, Almack, and Baldock took part. The general opinion was that the work, while well worth doing, would require an even longer time than that estimated by Mr. Isaacs.

PRIOR to his last illness the late Henry Vizetelly had prepared the materials for a further series of his reminiscences. Mr. Vizetelly still had to tell the story of his career from the time of the Franco-German War to his retirement subsequent to the Zola prosecution. By his express desire this task will now be undertaken by his son, Ernest Vizetelly, who was his constant companion, not only in Paris during the siege and Commune, but also in Germany, Austria, Hungary, Spain, Portugal, etc. The new volume will contain a full account of Mr. Vizetelly's prosecution for publishing translations of Zola's novels, and in this connection many curious circumstances will for the first time be made public.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH & CO. will publish at once a work on "Early Editions: a biographical survey of the works of some popular modern authors," by J. H. Slater, editor of "Book Prices Current." The work deals with the writings of Robert Browning, Mrs. Browning, Thackeray, Dickens, Coventry Patmore, Richard Jefferies, R. L. Stevenson, Andrew Lang, A. C. Swinburne, Leigh Hunt, Douglas Jerrold, George Augustus Sala, and others, and regards only such books as, by reason of their scarcity, are now in demand at enhanced prices by the present-day collector. These will be fully described and appraised, with special reference to the protection of the collector from spurious editions and imperfect copies. A large-paper edition, limited to one hundred and fifty numbered and signed copies, is being prepared for subscribers, to be issued before the publication of the ordinary edition.

THE forthcoming volume of Henry Stevens' "Fac-similes of Manuscripts in European Archives Relating to America, 1773–1783," covers but little more than two months of the year 1777, that critical period being productive of much correspondence at the court of France. The letters from Count de Vergennes to the Marquis d'Ossun and the Marquis de Noailles, French ambassadors in Madrid and London respectively, lay bare the policy of his court with an exactitude which no other historical papers afford. One document is a formal and elaborately worded reply from Spain to the memorial of the American deputies for support and assistance, given in the preceding volume of Mr. Stevens' "Facsimiles." Lord Stormont's letters are continued. Amongst others from Beaumarchais is one narrating, over a very shaky signature, the accident which befell him when returning from Passy with M. Grand, the banker, after hearing the news, brought from Congress by Mr. Austin, of the surrender of Burgoyne. There may also be noticed the reproduction of the seal used by Dr. Franklin in Paris (1728), and of one belonging to Arthur Lee (1713); that of the third commissioner, Silas Deane, has been given in previous volumes.

WE have received a pamphlet describing the festivities incident to the three hundredth anniversary in September, 1893, of the founding of the Josef Kösel Publishing House in Kempten, Bavaria. It seems almost incredible that a firm should exist three hundred years without any cessation whatever of its active business interests. The business was founded in 1593 by Erhard Blarer von Wartensee, an abbot-prince of Kempten, and until the beginning of this century was chiefly celebrated as a printing establishment, having its quarters in the royal residence at Kempten, and being run by foremen and overseers who, every year, were obliged to report to the reigning abbot-prince, and submit their accounts, which also covered the administration of a large paper-mill in Hegge, near Kempten. These overseers had a fixed salary, and were considered royal officers. One of them, Josef Kösel, after the secularization of the royal Abbey of Kempten in 1800, came into possession of the business in 1805. One of his heirs, Nikolaus Bail, inherited the business in 1825, and after his death in 1833 it came into the hands of his business manager, Johann Huber, of whom the present head, Ludwig Huber, is a direct descendant. His reign began in 1872, and since then the business has assumed much greater proportions. He has erected a magnificent building, and introduced all the latest improvements in presses and machinery. The specialties of the firm are Roman Catholic books of devotion, which it turns out in incredible quantities at fabulously low prices. The young son of the proprietor made the address of the day. The heads of the various branches of the business all greeted their chief with appropriate speeches. Mr. Frederick Pustet, of Regensburg, a brother-in-law of Mr. Huber, and senior of the house represented in this country, was present at the festival and contributed 1200 marks to a newly created pension fund for the employees of the Kösel establishment. A great dinner, attended by all the important citizens and representatives from many publishing houses, was the chief feature of the day. All the employees were also given a sumptuous repast.

NEARLY READY:

INCLUDING PERIODICALS, AMERICAN AND ENGLISH, ESSAYS, BOOK-CHAPTERS, ETC., SPECIAL BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND NECROLOGY OF AUTHORS.

EDITED BY W. I. FLETCHER and R. R. BOWKER,

With the co-operation of members of the American Library Association and of the Library Journal staff.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 complements the "Annual American Catalogue" of books published in 1893 by indexing (1) articles in periodicals published in 1892; (2) essays and book-chapters in composite books of 1892; (3) authors of periodical articles and essays; (4) special bibliographies of 1892; (5) authors deceased in 1892. The two volumes together make a complete record of the literary product of the year.

The new volume includes the features of the "Co-operative Index to Periodicals," originally a monthly supplement to the Library Journal, then extended into a quarterly in an enlarged form, and later issued as an annual volume.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 forms the second supplement both to the new five-yearly volume (1887–1891) of Poole's Index to Periodical Literature and to the new A. L. A. Index to essays and book-chapters of Mr. Fletcher.

The new volume will more than fulfil the opinion as to the Co-operative Index expressed in the following extract:

"To the literary worker its value can hardly be over-estimated; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field. to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time."—Providence Press.

One vol., cloth, (uniform with "A. L. A. Index,") $3.50.

HON. FREDERICK BOURQUIN,

CAMDEN, N. J.

V. HENKELS at the Book Auction Rooms of THOS. BIRCH'S SONS, 1110 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., Wednesday and Thursday, February 14 and 15, 1894. Afternoons at 2:30 o'clock. Evenings at 8 o'clock.

☞ Catalogues can be had of Francis P. Harper, 17 East 16th Street, New York, J. S. Bradley, Jr., No. 1 Pine Street, New York, or by addressing Stan. V. Henkels, 1110 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Note.—This library was formed by Mr. Bourquin during the last sixty-five years, and he enjoys to-day the distinction of being the last living pioneer collector. He did not devote his attention to collecting early printed books (although in his peregrinations he gathered together not a few early American imprints, some of which appear in this catalogue), but more generally to obtain the histories of the various States, Counties, Towns, etc., of this country, also material connected with the Revolutionary War, Wars of 1812, 1848, and the late Rebellion, American Travels and Explorations, Indian History, Biographies, Genealogies, the best work on Ornithology, etc., and we can truthfully say that this is really the best and most useful American Historical Library that has ever come under our observation, and will afford an opportunity to collectors and librarians to obtain many volumes that will seldom, if ever, be offered in this way again.

☞ Part 2 of the Catalogue is now being prepared, and will include the Books Relating to the War of the Rebellion, War of 1812, Mexican War, Early Indian History, General American History, Ornithology, etc. Those desiring same will send address to Stan. V. Henkels.

Rare Autograph Letters and Historical Papers.

THE WELL-KNOWN COLLECTON OF THE LATE

Will be sold by STAN. V. HENKELS, at the Book Auction Rooms of THOS. BIRCH'S SONS, Philadelphia, about the middle of April.

It was our intention to make this sale in February, but in preparing the material for catalogue we have become so impressed with the importance of the collection that we find we could not do justice to the estate by having the catalogue ready before April. Some idea of the value of the collection can be obtained when we mention a full set of the Signers to the Declaration of Independence, full set of the Members of the Constitutional Convention, nearly a full set of the Presidents and Members of the Continental Congress, full set of the Presidents and Vice-Presidents of the United States, full set of the Rulers and Governors of Georgia, many important letters of the Revolutionary Generals, Early and Revolutionary Broadsides. Many of the above letters are of the utmost historical importance. Also an exceedingly interesting collection of Rare American Portraits, Views, Maps, etc., including several fine Ivory Miniatures of Revolutionary Characters.

☞ Those desiring Catalogue will send name and address to Stan. V. Henkels, Philadelphia, Pa.

Rare Books

AND CHOICE EDITIONS OF THE STANDARD AUTHORS IN FINE BINDINGS,

TWO NOTEWORTHY BOOKS.

Nineteenth Thousand.

Authorized American Edition Reprinted from the 16th English Edition.

SHIPS THAT PASS IN THE NIGHT.

A Novel. By BEATRICE HARRADEN. 16mo, $1.00.

"Ships that pass in the night, and speak each other in passing,
Only a signal shewn, and a distant voice in the darkness;
So, on the ocean of life, we pass and speak one another,
Only a look and a voice, then darkness again and silence."

"Ships that pass in the night has made its success by purely legitimate methods. . . . The author has a story to tell, a theory to work out, a belief to impart, and that is all—except the important item that she is a good writer, keen and wise in observation and style, liberal and sympathetic in temperament. . . . I sat up half the night to finish the book."—JEANNETTE L. GILDER in the World.

Fourth Thousand.

THE RELIGION OF A LITERARY MAN.

By RICHARD LE GALLIENNE. 12mo, $1.00.

"Mr. Le Gallienne has produced a book well worth reading, particularly (so at least we should say) by those who are most disposed to differ with him. . . . The author treats of the hereafter with great courage, and says a good many things well worthy of the utmost attention. . . . The book is certainly a remarkable one, and we urge our readers not to trust to any second-hand account, but to make themselves acquainted with its contents by the ancient method of perusal."—London Speaker.

"Probably the sunniest book on religion ever published."—London Star.

Eight Lectures on the Early History and Origin of the Doctrine of Biblical Inspiration. By the Rev. W. SANDAY, M.A., D.D., LL.D., Dean Ireland's Professor of Exegesis, Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford. 8vo, $4.00.

. . . The present publishing season has at least produced one really remarkable and valuable book in Dr. Sanday's Bampton Lectures. It is in substance an answer to the question, "What is the Bible and what are we to think of it?" . . . A really good book such as this, on such a subject, is sure to be read by theologians and the clergy. We trust it will be pressed upon the attention of students in theological colleges, for its position is one they should at least understand.

NOTES IN SEASON.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. will soon issue a work entitled "Cartier to Frontenac," by Justin Winsor; "A Poet's Portfolio," by W. W. Story; and "In Exile, and other stories," by Mary Hallock Foote.

MACMILLAN & CO. announce a thorough revision and working over of William Winter's older biography, under the title of "The Life and Art of Joseph Jefferson;" also, "Social Evolution," by Benjamin Kidd.

THE BURROWS BROTHERS COMPANY, Cleveland, will publish in March a new edition of the Lincoln and Douglas debates. Only 750 copies will be printed from type on hand-made paper, at a net price of $2.50 to subscribers.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish this month the second volume of the Pasquier memoirs. The period treated of is the most eventful and dramatic in Napoleon's career—from 1812 to 1814, inclusive. They have in press a "Chess Pocket Manual," by G. H. D. Gossip, the English authority on the game. It is written for adepts as well as beginners.

HOWARD LOCKWOOD & CO. will be ready shortly to supply "The American Dictionary of Printing and Bookmaking" in one volume complete. This exhaustive and, typographically also, truly magnificent work, which has consumed years of labor, and required a large investment of capital, consists of six hundred pages, profusely illustrated, and comprises all that is known of the art from the earliest to the present time—technical, historical, and biographical. The price will be $12 a copy, delivered.

ROBERT CLARKE & CO. have published for the Filson Club the eighth of its publications, under the title of "The Centenary of Louisville." This historical essay by the president, Mr. Reuben T. Durrett, was read in 1880 before the Southern Historical Association, but was printed only in an abbreviated form. It is now expanded with notes and appendices, and forms a starting-point for the municipal history. There are portraits of the author, of La Salle, and of Gen. George Rogers Clark, the founder of the city.

THE CENTURY COMPANY will publish in April Oscar S. Straus' "Roger Williams, the Pioneer of Religious Liberty." It has occupied Mr. Straus' attention ever since his return from his post as minister to Turkey. He has collected from all sources, at home and abroad, historical data which would throw additional light on the life of Williams. Mr. Straus' first book, "The Origin of the Republican Form of Government," might be, in a measure, considered as an introduction to the "Roger Williams," since the latter work will not be alone of biographical value, but will show that the liberty of conscience which we enjoy in the United States is in no small measure due to Williams.

J. SELWIN TAIT & SONS will issue on February 21 "Sandow: his system of physical training and professional career," a study in the perfect type of the human form, compiled under the athlete's directions by Captain G. Mercer Adam. The imprint of the publishers is sufficient guarantee that this will not be a sensational volume on the exploits of a "strong man" in his contests for championship, but a scientific treatise on the plan and methods by which Sandow has developed himself from a slender, almost delicate boy into one of the strongest and most proportionately developed men of whom the modern world has heard. The volume deals scientifically though popularly with the physiology of bodily exercise, and describes a system which should be used to advantage in all our schools and colleges. The book will be illustrated with 100 half-tone pictures and 150 marginal line engravings, and will form a sumptuous and practical volume on athletics in general, while incidentally mentioning the most notable incidents in Sandow's life of training for

The Isle of Ely, or Cambridgeshire Fens, the scene of this story, is north of the county of that name, cut off from the rest of England by the river Ouse. The life of this out-of-the-way spot is as peculiar as its men, the "fen-tigers" as they are called. "Zita" had travelled all her short life in a van with her father, a "Cheap Jack," who had sold "bargains" at all the fairs in England. Accident brings them to the fens, where the poor "Cheap Jack" dies. "Cheap Jack Zita," as the natives name the daughter, becomes part of the fen life, witnesses a murder, is loved by two men, and acts in trying emergencies as a brave, unselfish girl.

By a thread of story the characters are transported to Athens; the book is an artistic fantasy upon Greek art and Greek thought, for which the frieze upon the Parthenon furnishes the keynote. It was first published in 1860, and was the foundation-stone of Cherbuliez's reputation as a novelist, who was always remarkable for accurate scholarship and vivid imagination.

Mr. Clark was born in Michigan; this was his first novel; he died before it was published. It is said to embody many of the events of his own short but notable life.

The scene of the novel opens in Chicago and afterwards shifts to a pretty little town about a hundred miles away. Joyce Mable, the heroine, is brought under the influence of a socialistic idealist, and thinks she sees in his work for humanity the object which she requires to fill her own life. She writes an article on "The necessity of organized labor against capital," which has the effect of causing the "hands" of her lover's factory, who are out on a strike, to promptly fire the works and burn them to the ground. Her story after this is entirely connected with that of Paul Rodman, her lover.

General Strong began to live among the Indians of the Pacific coast in 1850, and learned one of their languages, and for six years travelled with and among them, thus becoming thoroughly familiar with their folk-lore, habits, and home-life. The volume opens with a brief account of the relations of the white races with the Indians, which is not flattering to the former's claims to a superior civilization. The writer distinguishes between the various tribes along the northern parts of the continent, giving their history, characteristics, etc., the most attractive being the Mandans, whose traditions and appearance show that they are probably descendants of the Welsh voyager, Prince Madoc. The story of the Indian maiden "Wah-kee nah" is very beautiful and romantic.

These two volumes supplement each other. The first one contains the directions to the pupils for performing his experiments, which are sufficient to prevent that aimless work so common among young experimenters, and yet not so full as to interfere with the inductive method. Each experiment is intended to illustrate some one truth, which is further enforced by the exercises. The second volume, the "Text-book," is quite similar to the ordinary text-book. It tells how the experiments should result. It gives the pupil a correct form of statement for the conclusions and laws which he has learned in a practical way. The two books are to be accompanied by a simple cheap apparatus for each pupil. Author is professor in Teachers' College, New York City.

Asheville, North Carolina, and St. Augustine, Florida, as they were twenty years ago serve as the background to this novel. The motive is the marriage of Ruth Franklin, a young southern girl, to Horace Chase, a rich northerner, much her senior; in spite of his tenderness and care, she awakens one day to the knowledge that she does not love him. Her infatuation for another man is the destroying element in their domestic life. The Franklin family and their friends are cleverly and humorously presented. The power of northern energy and capital is incidentally shown.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

CLARK RUSSELL, JR. (son of the novelist), will shortly publish a novel, which, like his father's work, will deal with adventure at sea.

QUILLER-COUCH has just completed a short serial which will be published at an early date in one of the illustrated monthlies, and to which he has given the title of "The Bishop of Eucalyptus."

A MEMORIAL to Phillips Brooks will soon be placed in Westminster Abbey in the form of a beautiful mosaic representing the charge of the Saviour to Peter, "Feed My Sheep." Underneath will be a small tablet. The memorial will cost about £125, all of which has been subscribed. One of the subscribers was the late George W. Childs, of Philadelphia.

MISS JANOTHA, who was a great favorite of Lord Tennyson, and is no less of a favorite in royal circles, has finished an important work on Chopin, which will be published in London during the spring. The authoress has included some valuable lectures by an eminent Polish professor on the true interpretation of Chopin's works; but of greater importance will be the master's own "Method of Methods" for the piano, which has never before been published.

HENRY SAVAGE LANDOR, the author of the important work on the hairy Ainu recently published by the Murrays, is a grandson of the famous Walter Savage Landor. His father is Mr. Charles Savage Landor, a virtuoso living in Florence, where he has picked up a unique collection of Florentine antiquities and cinque cento pictures. His mother was an Italian. Mr. Landor keeps up the family connection with Florence by having been born there. He was also educated in its university as an engineer. He can speak six or seven languages.

"A TALL, sea-bronzed man, wearing a slouch hat, often tied on with a handkerchief, and wrapped in a big cloak, walking with shuffling gait, hobnobbing with the beachmen, among whom he had his favorites, recipients of his bounty in boats and gear—everybody knew old Fitz by sight, and many called him 'dotty.'" For this portrait of Edward Fitzgerald, the author of the immortal paraphrase of the "Rubaiyát" of Omar Khayyám, we are indebted to Mr. Edward Clodd, who gathered it from the sailor-folk of Woodbridge, Lowestoft, and Aldeburgh, and has inserted it in an interesting sketch of the poet in The English Illustrated Magazine

CONDITION OF THE BOOK TRADE IN FRANCE.

AND now from France, too, where they are supposed to manage things much better than elsewhere, comes the news of an impending book crisis. Publishers and booksellers throughout France are nearly, and in some cases actually quite idle, with very little prospect of an immediate betterment of the condition. Strangely enough the difficulties are said to be mainly due to a collapse of fiction—a "krach du roman." For years French novels were turned out in feverish haste, and in numbers out of all proportion; and now the demand, as was inevitable, has collapsed abruptly and without warning. Mr. Albert Cim and others who have given the situation of authorship and publication in France careful attention claim that there are hardly six novelists who can count on receiving for their works a sum equal to or above 10,000 fr., or $2000. Writers like Zola and Daudet of course still take the lead in the exceptions to this rule, but the fact nevertheless seems to be that the earnings of the average writer of fiction are sinking with appalling rapidity.

M. Cim lately examined the books of a leading French publisher, and found that two-thirds of the accounts opened for works of fiction, verse, travel, domestic economy, and military science showed losses. From the same firm a successful novelist has received during five years for his author's rights about 16,000 fr., or a little over $600 yearly. The publisher has had only 5000 fr. profit for the five years. Here we have another confirmation of the statement, so often questioned by the thoughtless or oratorical author, that publishers do take risks and suffer loss oftener than they get credit for. It is true, notwithstanding contrary argument, that in many respects the publishing business, wherever it may be followed, is still one of speculation. However well his plans may be laid, or however well he may think to secure himself, a trifle sometimes overlooked may upset his carefully deliberated intentions, and may bankrupt that one venture at least. But M. Cim's statement needs no comment—it tells its own tale eloquently enough.

The cause of the crisis in the book trade, according to M. Cim, is three-fold. In the first place, people borrow books from friends, like a rich lady whom M. Cim describes, who finds means to read everything which appears without spending a sou. Secondly, young people often only cursorily peruse the newspapers nowadays, and do not read novels at all, their time being taken up fully by sports. In the third place, the writers themselves are taunted with being their own worst enemies. "Everybody wants to write. Lady scribes are on the increase, and, as Emile de Girardin said long ago: 'Feminine competition with men inevitably lowers profits.'" Finally, it is pointed out that the overproduction and the economical exigencies of publishers have led to the issuing of hastily printed volumes full of errors and inaccuracies.

We fear that, however well grounded these explanations of causes may be, there is very little remedy for them. Borrowers and "the poor" we shall very likely always have with us, and the only consolation there may be is that where there are borrowers there must also be lenders—some of whom must be buyers. As for the second point, it is undoubtedly a fact that the newspapers are supplying many with reading-matter; but then the consolation here is that they are also creating readers, and so bookbuyers. The newspaper, as well as the public and circulating library, is not an enemy of the book trade, but one of its most valuable allies, in that it creates and educates the ultimate constituency of the latter. As for the third point, we doubt whether that could be defended. Ours is a writing age, and "woman's in it" with the man. She has come to fight for recognition in the field of literature, and "man to man" has succeeded fairly well; why then waste hard language over the inevitable! Besides, we are quite content to leave it with the public to winnow the talented from the incompetent writers—in time both will find their proper level, whatever adventitious means may have been called into requisition to temporarily elevate the latter.

IT will be gratifying news to many that owing to the pressure brought to bear on them by representatives of the Commercial Travellers' Club a number of railroad companies are showing a disposition to concede the question of an increased allowance of baggage. Indeed, the prospects are that the question will be speedily and satisfactorily settled.

GEORGE W. CHILDS.

THE death of George W. Childs removes one more of the few remaining men who are able to tell the history of the American book trade as eye-witnesses in the days when Irving, Longfellow, Poe, Hawthorne, and Lowell were creating American literature. Mr. Childs suffered from a stroke of paralysis on January 18, and died on February 3 at his residence in Philadelphia, where his name is a household word and where he has for years been identified with the Public Ledger, of which he became proprietor in 1864.

G. W. CHILDS.
Reprinted with permission from the New York Sun.

George William Childs was born in Baltimore, May 12, 1829. He left school at the early age of twelve and became an errand-boy, then drifted into the United States Navy and spent fifteen months at Norfolk, Va. But the boy's tastes were commercial, and he lost interest in his work and returned to school again for a few months. When about fourteen he went to Philadelphia and entered the employ of P. Thomson, who kept a book-store at the corner of Sixth and Arch Streets, and there began his career as an errand-boy and clerk at $3 a week in the city where at his death he ranked among the wealthiest as well as most respected citizens. Mr. Childs early acquired a knowledge of the value of rare books and made himself invaluable to his employer by his knack at getting bargains at the evening book auctions then held in Philadelphia. When only eighteen he was sent by Mr. Thomson as representative to the book trade sales held every six months in New York and Boston. In this manner Mr. Childs formed his acquaintance with the leading publishers of that day—the Harpers, Appletons, Ticknor & Fields, Little & Brown, G. P. Putnam—many of whom were his life-long friends. About this time Mr. Childs had saved money enough to start a small book-shop (or, to be more correct, he started selling fruit and candies, and then added books and newspapers, the latter gradually absorbing all his attention), which he did in the old Public Ledger building, a location which fired his ambition and shaped his plan to one day be owner of that well-established newspaper. At the age of twenty-one (encouraged and [illegible] friend A. J. Drexel) he a book publisher under the firm-name of R. E. Peterson & Co., which was later changed to Childs & Peterson. The firm hit upon some phenomenally successful books, partly owing to the timely material and in great measure to Mr. Childs' fine art in advertising—a method of pushing sales in which he always had unwavering faith. Dr. Kane, who had just returned from his heroic search for Franklin, had decided to write the story of his undertaking for scientists only, but at Mr. Childs' suggestion he wrote up his "Arctic Explorations" in a popular vein, and the book achieved so great a success that Dr. Kane was paid $70,000 on the copyright. Of "Parson Brownlow's Book," 50,000 were sold in advance of publication, and the sale of "Peterson's Familiar Science" ran up to a quarter of a million copies. Lossing's "History of the Civil War" and Bouvier's "Law Dictionary" also proved mines of wealth to the partners. Childs & Peterson also began the publication of Dr. Allibone's "Dictionary of British and American Authors," in which they invested $60,000. While this was under way Mr. Childs, in 1860, dissolved his partnership with Mr. Peterson and formed a new partnership with the late J. B. Lippincott, which, however, only lasted for a year.

Mr. Childs retired after the first volume of Allibone was issued, and the remaining two were published by J. B. Lippincott, whose firm has since added two supplementary volumes to this most important compilation. Mr. Childs is also identified with educational work for the publishing trade. He bought the American Publishers' Circular and Literary Gazette in 1863, which was incorporated with F. Leypoldt's Weekly Trade Circular in 1872, which in turn was re-christened THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY in 1873.

After his purchase of the Public Ledger in 1864, Mr. Childs devoted his best energies to it for many years with ever-increasing financial reward. Mr. Childs spent his money freely but with excellent judgment and with a strong leaning in his bequests to the interests of authors, publishers, printers, etc. In 1868 he and A. J. Drexel gave $10,000 to the International Typographical Union. From this nucleus grew the fund for the home for aged and invalid printers at Colorado Springs which was finished in 1892. To increase the fund the printers throughout the United States set 1000 ems once a year for its benefit. Those east of the Mississippi did this on Mr. Childs' birthday in May, those west of the great river on Mr. Drexel's birthday in September. Mr. Childs supplied the memorial windows to George Herbert and William Cowper in Westminster Abbey, one to Milton in St. Margaret's, Westminster, a memorial window to Moore in the church at Browham, contributed liberally towards the monument for Leigh Hunt in Kensal Green Cemetery, and erected a fountain to Shakespeare in Stratford-on-Avon. In this country he built a monument to Edgar Allan Poe, and had given orders to build one for Richard A. Proctor, whose body was recently removed to Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Among the latest of his public gifts was the fund for the erection of the "Prayer-Book Cross," near San Francisco, to mark the spot where Sir Francis Drake landed, and where the religious services in the English language were first held on the western shores of America. Mr. Childs was a firm advocate of co-operation between employer and employee, and always [illegible]

ALEXANDER AGAR—IN MEMORIAM.

At a special meeting of the trustees of the Stationers' Board of Trade, held last month, the following resolutions were presented and unanimously adopted:

In the death of Alexander Agar the trade recognizes that one of its most prominent and useful members has been called away. Of alert mind and positive convictions, he was always ready to support his judgment by hard work, and contributed largely to the success of this organization, both in counsel and action.

Mr. Agar's personal record in business was signalized by industry, integrity, and success. No man ever lost a dollar through him. His manners were unusually engaging, attracting many personal friends. All such soon became familiar with the native simplicity of his character. He was almost childlike in his confidences, exhibiting warm affection for those who could sympathize with him.

But this amiable disposition did not in the least impair his strength for affairs. Mr. Agar was an earnest student of the laws of trade, quick to discover the tendencies of the times, and shrewd in his observations and deductions. It may be true that in later life the progress of some insidious disease imparted an unduly melancholy tinge to his predictions; yet it must at least be acknowledged that at the present time we have no occasion to plume ourselves that we were wiser than he. Widespread disaster and suffering reveal a condition of things even worse than he foresaw.

May his apprehensive spirit find rest, and may his friends, who will sadly miss him, be consoled by the thought that no more alarms or forebodings will disturb his soul.

We shall long remember Mr. Agar's handsome and youthful person; his frank, ingenuous address; his views, profound and consistent, often entertaining, and always commanding respect.

THE MS. OF THE BOOK OF THE AUTHORS' CLUB.

The original manuscripts of "Liber Scriptorum: the Book of the Authors' Club," have just come from the bindery, and are on exhibition at Tiffany's, Union Square. Every one of the 109 manuscripts has been inlaid, and the set bound up in three superb volumes, each 15½ inches high and 3 inches thick. The covering is crushed levant morocco, old red, with gilt edges. A glance at the contents is interesting and suggestive. It appears that the committee did not want uniformity, but requested each contributor to use such paper, ink, etc., as he is accustomed to use when writing for the press. The manuscripts are to be sold, in one lot, to the highest bidder.

REMOVAL OF THE ALDINE CLUB.

At a meeting held on the 6th inst. at its clubhouse, at 20 Lafayette Place, the Aldine Club decided to remove to 75 Fifth Avenue. The removal will be made on March 1. The new clubhouse is a brown-stone dwelling two doors north of Fifteenth Street, on the east side of the avenue. Its new club-house, like the old, will be the scene of entertainments, of which "Story-Tellers' Nights" will continue to be the most

BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION.

THE AUTHORS' READING.

The second entertainment for the benefit of the reserve fund of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association, held at the Carnegie Music Hall on the 6th inst., was an unqualified success. The large hall was well filled from parquet to gallery with a fashionable and decidedly appreciative audience.

After an organ prelude by W. A. Corey, Mr. Richard Watson Gilder, who had kindly consented to act as presiding officer, advanced and in a few happy words introduced Gen. Lew Wallace, who read with much expression and clearness of diction that dramatic incident from "The Prince of India," "Sergius to the Lion." Mr. Gilder, when the reader had finished, introduced himself as the only reader of the evening who really needed an introduction and who had none to perform the office for him. He then read the "Reminiscence of the Funeral of Sherman," and followed it up with "A Poem About New York."

When Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, the author of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," came on the stage she was greeted by the strains of the old but ever-inspiring "As We Go Marching On" (played by the organist, Mr. Corey) and thunders of applause from the audience. Mr. Gilder made a few introductory remarks, and then Mrs. Howe read "A Dream on the Hearthstone." Upon its conclusion she said she would read something which she would not call a poem, but which was a thought put into verse. She had been looking at a clothes-line with clothes upon it one day and the thought had come to her that it was like a rosary. She then read, in a peculiarly touching and happy manner, "A Thought for Washing Day," which embodied her idea. "After the War," a war-time poem, was also read.

At this point Mr. Gilder made a pleasing diversion by inviting the audience in the gallery to come down into the lower tiers and orchestra and fill the seats that were unoccupied. After a short intermission George W. Cable read in his inimitable manner a delightfully humorous rendering of his "The School Examination at Grande Pointe," which received well-deserved applause. He was followed by John Kendrick Bangs, who read from unpublished manuscript two "Inventions of the Idiot" (a character well known to the readers of "Coffee and Repartee" in Harper's Bazar), entitled "A Poetry Clearing House" and "Social Expansion," full of "hits" and humor that kept his audience in an unbroken chuckle.

Paul du Chaillu and Wallace Bruce, who were down for readings, were unable to appear, the former because he had attended the funeral of his old friend George W. Childs, and was considerably unnerved, and the latter on account of illness.

The entertainment was closed by the reading of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" by Mrs. Howe.

It is estimated that the entertainment will contribute something like $1000 to the reserve fund. The programme prepared by W. J. Kelly called forth considerable comment and praise on account of its tasteful and artistic get-up. Indeed, the committee of arrangement—C. A. Burckhardt, Jos. F. Vogelius, John A. Holden, and W. I.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

A NEW book trade journal has just been published by C. F. Müller, of Leipzig, under the title of Allgemeine Buchhändlerzeitung. This differs from the Börsenblatt in that it contains critical opinions and comments on literature of all kinds, as well as theatrical and art news. The editor is Emil Thomas.

THE New York Sun will publish in its issue for the 11th an important and interesting article by Herbert Spencer, giving his recollections of the late Professor Tyndall. The article is important, because it is the first that Mr. Spencer has ever contributed to a newspaper. Mr. Spencer was a long-time friend of Professor Tyndall, and his reminiscences of that distinguished man of science cannot fail to be of great interest and value, as well to those who are ignorant of his labors as to those acquainted with them.

Yellow Book is the title of a new literary and artistic quarterly magazine to be issued by Elkin Mathews and John Lane, of London. The first number is promised for April 15. It is to exactly resemble in its outward form a French novel, with a yellow and black cover designed by Aubrey Beardsley, who is to act as the art editor of the review. Its contents are to be made up of 320 pages of fiction, poetry, and criticism, but will differ from all existing reviews in that topics of the hour will be rigidly eschewed, the idea being to make the Yellow Book a volume which shall be as welcome to the book-shelves ten years hence as to-day. With this object in view, the editor, Henry Harland ("Sidney Luska"), will admit only such critical articles as deal with questions of permanent interest, while an attempt will be made to render the fiction the very best of its kind. The illustrations, which will be numerous, will not be an accompaniment to the letter-press, but will be works of art of entirely distinct value, and will stand by themselves as separate contributions to the number. The whole thing will certainly be an entirely original idea, and as such should receive encouragement and welcome.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—Louis D. Brandeis, assignee for D. Lothrop Company, issued the following notice under date of January 30:

"A meeting of the creditors of the D. Lothrop Co. will be held at 364 Washington St., Room 4, Boston, on February 12, at 2 P.M. The committee appointed by the creditors at the last meeting will make its report.

"If this report is accepted by the creditors a dividend of about 20% will be payable on February 15, 1894, to all creditors who shall have assented to the assignment before that date.

"Such creditors shall also be entitled to the benefit of the transfer dated January 26, 1894, by the firm of D. Lothrop Co. to Mortimer B. Mason, chairman of the committee of creditors. By this instrument, James E. Lothrop, John C. Lothrop, and Mrs. Daniel Lothrop, in effect, consent that the payment to themselves of any dividend on their claims against the corporation, for money loaned, aggregating $106,000, shall be postponed until the other creditors who shall assent to the assignment have been paid in full. The instrument also transfers, for the benefit of such assenting creditors, valuable property belonging to the late firm of D. Lothrop Co. which does not form a part of the corporation's assets.

"All creditors who desire to avail themselves of the benefit of the assignment, and have not already done so, are requested to forward their assent thereto immediately, together with a statement of the amount of their claim."

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The stock of the Hawks

CINCINNATI, O.—The Western Methodist Book Concern will erect a $40,000 building on Fourth Street.

DES MOINES, IA.—At the meeting of the creditors of Redhead, Norton & Lathrop Co. held in New York on January 26 H. T. Granger, who appeared for the debtors, made the following statement: Assets, $65,983.06, and liabilities, $97,440.36. Of the former there were in the hands of the bank or Mrs. Redhead: Wholesale accounts, $24,000; old city ledger, $77.10; old wholesale ledger, $258.40; old wall-paper ledger, $1200; Bicycle Company's stock, $1800; Whiting contract notes, $405. Of the latter there were preferred: Mrs. Redhead, $6741.62; Des Moines National Bank, $24,865.72; Taxes, $1500.95; E. P. McElwain, E. W. Carlton, for labor account, $73.55. Mr. Granger said that he was authorized to offer 20 per cent. cash. This caused some discussion, and the meeting finally agreed to accept 25 per cent. cash on secured notes. The meeting then adjourned to the 2d inst., at which time Mr. Granger appeared before the gathering and said that he could not meet the proposition and was only authorized to offer 25 per cent., 20 per cent. cash and 5 per cent. in the company's twelve months' note, unsecured. This the creditors declined to accept, but recommended the acceptance of an offer of 33⅓ per cent., 20 per cent. cash and 13⅓ per cent. in unsecured twelve months' notes, if it should be made.

GALESBURG, MICH. — I. N. Carson has purchased the book-store of E. A. Hawley.

NEW YORK CITY.—The American Book Company has agreed to take the seven lower stories in the new building to be erected by the University of the City of New York, on the site of their old house on East Washington Square, with the understanding that no sign shall appear on the building. The three upper floors will be retained for university purposes. Work on the new building will be begun next May.

NEW YORK CITY.—Croscup & Co., successors to Richmond, Croscup & Co. have removed their publishing business to more commodious quarters at 114 Fifth Avenue.

NEW YORK CITY.—John E. Potter & Co., of Philadelphia, have opened a New York branch at 59 Fifth Avenue (the William Beverley Harison building), and will from that office supply all New York orders.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Saalfield Publishing Co. has been incorpofated to publish books, sheet-music and music-books. Capital, $150,000, and directors: Richard A. Saalfield, Aaron B. Cohn, and Albert R. Pecare, New York City.

ST. PAUL, MINN. — The St. Paul Book and Stationery Company has succeeded to the business of the late D. D. Merrill Co. The active members of the new firm are Daniel D. Merrill, Clarence H. Slocum, and Joseph H. Beek.

TEMPLE, TEX.—J. D. Roberts has purchased the J. W. Lee book and stationery store and will continue the business.

TIFFIN, O.—August Distelherst, bookseller, has assigned to George E. Schroth. Assets

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

C. E. HOPKINS is now with Koch, Sons & Co.

BLISS, SANDS & FOSTER, London, will publish at once Mrs. Macquoid's new novel, "In an Orchard," which has been revised and considerably enlarged since it appeared in serial form.

THE COMMONWEALTH PUBLISHING CO. (Charles P. Somerby), 28 Lafayette Place, have in press a new edition of "Bible Myths, and their parallels in other religions," which has been out of print for some time.

MR. J. FRED CLAUS, who for eighteen years was with Thomas Whittaker, has severed his connection with that house, owing to illness, and goes to Los Angeles, Cal., in search of health. He has the good wishes for recovery of his many friends in the trade.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO. will publish before the end of this month "Glimpses of the French Revolution," by J. G. Alger, a resident in Paris, who has already written more than once about this period of history and the part played by Englishmen in France.

THE autobiographical sketch which Francis Parkman some years ago confided to Dr. George Ellis forms the most important paper in the forthcoming collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society. This sketch gives a graphic description of the difficulties under which Mr. Parkman carried through his historical work, and it has been made complete by the addition of portions of a second and later sketch prepared by the historian and given to Mr. Martin Brimmer.

WHAT we believe is the first authoritative statement about Mrs. Humphry Ward's new book appears in the current issue of the London Literary World: "The current reports about Mrs. Humphry Ward's new novel are unauthorized and incorrect. The book is in no sense a study of Socialism, though the background and atmosphere of the story are largely supplied by some of the social questions of the period which now come so practically home to each one of us. It is the history of a woman, and will be called by her name. It is expected that the new novel will have finally left the author's hands by the middle of February, and that it will be simultaneously published in England and America about the first week in April."

THE GROLIER CLUB will publish this month a fac-simile of "The Laws and Acts of the General Assembly of the Province of New York," as published by William Bradford in 1694. This work will contain an exact fac-simile of the original edition, which is one of the rarest of the books printed in the middle colonies during the 17th century. A carefully written historical introduction, by Robert Ludlow Fowler, supplies much needed information as to the sources from which the colonial law-makers drew their authority, as well as the connection between this early body of law and subsequent legislation. Charles R. Hildeburn has prepared for this edition a bibliographical note of much importance, which fully describes all known copies of the original edition.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & CO. will publish immediately, in their Dilettante Series, a volume on the life and writings of Oliver Wendell Holmes, by Walter Jerrold. The book treats of the many-sided "Autocrat" under no fewer than five aspects. It must be remembered that Dr. Holmes has become famous as something more than poet and essayist. It is now considerably over half a century since he carried off three out of four medals offered at Boston for essays on medical subjects, so that, although the fame of the man of letters has overshadowed the fame of the man of science, the latter cannot properly be ignored in treating of Holmes' work, more especially as we find his scientific training and knowledge influencing his writing on well-nigh every page. Mr. Jerrold treats his subject "as Man" (a biographical sketch), "as Poet," "as Novelist," "as Autocrat," and "as Man of Science."

OBITUARY NOTES.

EDMOND FREMY, the French chemist and author of a number of monographs on chemistry and kindred subjects, died in Paris on the 3d inst., aged eighty years.

FREDERICK M. SOMERS, founder of the San Francisco Argonaut, Current Literature, and Short Stories, died in Southampton, Eng., on the 2d inst., aged forty-three years.

GEORGE CHAMPLIN MASON, author of Newport and Its Environs," "Newport Illustrated," "The Application of Art to Manufactures," "George Ready," "Newport and Its Cottages," "The Old House Altered," "The Life and Works of Gilbert Stuart," and "Reminiscences of Newport," died in Philadelphia on the 1st inst., aged seventy-four years.

REV. HENRY STAFFORD OSBORN, author of "Scientific Metallurgy of Iron and Steel in the United States," "The New Descriptive Geography of Palestine," "Manual of Bible Geography," "The Useful Minerals and Mining Architecture," "Biblical History and Geography," and others, died in New York City on the 2d inst., aged seventy-one years.

DR. THEODOR BILLROTH, one of the most eminent surgeons of this century, died in Abkazia, a well-known Austrian winter resort, on the 6th inst., at the age of 65. Among his best-known treatises are those entitled "Surgical Letters from the Field Hospitals at Weissenburg and Mannheim," "On the Transportation of the Wounded," "On the Learning and Teaching of Medicine at German Universities," "Surgical Clinique," and "Handbook of General and Special Surgery."

JOHN WILKINSON, of the firm of Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, died in the third week of January, at the ripe age of 91. He was born in Yorkshire, the second son of the Rev. J. Wilkinson, of Huggate, and went to London in 1821, where he was eventually taken into the house of Sotheby & Co. as chief accountant, and in 1842 was made a partner. During the next forty years he continued to wield the hammer, and in 1849 he sold the Stowe library and collection of engravings. His active career as an auctioneer may be said to have concluded about the time of the famous Beckford and Hamilton sales in 1882–4, the selling of which he shared with his partner, Mr. Hodge, increasing age compelling him gradually to give up selling. He died at his residence in Harley Gardens, Kensington, and was buried January 20 in the Brompton Cemetery.

By SYDNEY J. HICKSON, M.A., Fellow of Downing College, Cambridge. A new volume in the Modern Science Series, edited by Sir John Lubbock, Bart. With 23 illustrations. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

"Our present-day knowledge of the physical conditions of the bottom of the deep sea and the animals that dwell there is by no means inconsiderable. . . . It is the object of this little book to bring together in a small compass some of the more important facts and considerations, and to present them in such a form that they may be of interest to those who do not possess a specialist's knowledge of genera and species."—From the Preface.

Benefits Forgot.

By WOLCOTT BALESTIER, author of "Reffey," "A Common Story," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

CONTENTS: Prologue.—Scientific and Pseudo-Scientific Realism.—Science and Pseudo-Science.—An Episcopal Trilogy.—The Value of Witness to the Miraculous.—Possibilities and Impossibilities.—Agnosticism.—Agnosticism: A Rejoinder.—Agnosticism and Christianity.—The Keepers of the Herd of Swine.—Illustrations of Mr. Gladstone's Controversial Methods.

NOTES IN SEASON.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish immediately in answer to the increased popular demand for Miss Harraden's clever story, "Ships that Pass in the Night," a railroad edition of the book in paper covers. This will be offered to the trade at exceptionally favorable net prices. They are now printing the 7th thousand of the authorized American edition. Of the English edition over 17,000 copies have been sold.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have just ready "Tales of a Nomad, or, sport and strife," by Charles Montague, containing chapters on A ride for dear life, My five buffaloes, My three sea-cows, Flat game and small game, The storming of Secocoenis, The siege of Marabastadt, A lucky kill, My big tusker, and A tale of three elephants; and an autobiography of Arthur Hill Hassall, M.D., under the title of "The Narrative of a Busy Life."

MACMILLAN & Co. have just issued the second volume of Murray's "New English Dictionary," which finishes the letter C; "The Economic Geology of the United States," with brief mention of foreign mineral products, by R. S. Tarr, of Cornell University; "The Study of the Biology of Ferns by the Collodion Method," by George F. Atkinson, also of Cornell; and "A History of Mathematics," by Florian Cajori, professor of physics in Colorado College. They have in preparation "Social Evolution," by Benjamin Kidd; and Dr. C. Ellis Stevens' "Sources of the Constitution of the United States."

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have prepared their usual supply of pretty souvenirs for the Easter season. Although almost every idea and every style of presenting it would seem to have been exhausted in former years, this year's cards and booklets again show the originality of thought and the delicacy of execution with which the Dutton imprint is identified. From the writings of Phillips Brooks have been prepared "The Easter Flower," "Easter Angels," and "An Easter Carol." The musical verse of Frances Ridley Havergal has furnished the text of "A Joyful Easter-Tide," "An Easter Token," "An Easter Wish," and "An Easter Message." From John Keble has been selected "Sweet Easter-Tide," and from George Herbert "Easter Peace." About two dozen more pretty novelties are ready, and there is also one of the finest collections of Easter cards ever shown by the house. They will also publish at once "The Life Here and Hereafter," an Easter sermon by the late Phillips Brooks.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish on the 24th Dr. Justin Winsor's new work, entitled "Cartier to Frontenac: a study of geographical discovery in the interior of North America in its historical relations, 1534–1700," an important chapter of the geographical history of the age of American explorations, with full cartographical illustrations from contemporary sources; a cheaper edition of "William Lloyd Garrison, 1805–1879, the story of his life told by his children," till recently published by The Century Company; "A Poet's Portfolio—later readings," by William Wetmore Story, a little book like the author's "He and She"—a collection of lyrics strung on the silver thread of an entertaining conversation between a lady and a gentleman; "In Exile, and other stories," by Mary Hallock Foote; "John Larkin Lincoln, 1817–1891," containing a memorial address by Prof. Geo. P. Fisher, and extracts from the diary and letters, and also twenty-one papers chosen from the writings of Prof. Lincoln, who was for nearly fifty years one of the most eminent professors in Brown University; and "The Sir Roger de Coverley Papers," in the Riverside Literature Series. They will also publish immediately in the Salem edition of Hawthorne's works "The Blithedale Romance," with an introduction by George Parsons Lathrop.

Newcomb, Simon. The problem of economic education. Bost., G: H. Ellis, 1893 [1894.] 2-27 p. O. pap., 25 c. [489

Discusses how economic science should be taught to the mass of students in our colleges and schools. The writer believes that the student should be taught not only to think rightly and reach correct conclusions, but to analyze and expose "popular fallacies," as he denominates many of the theories of the day regarding protection in its relation to labor, wages, etc.

The headings of the ten chapters give the scope of this important work: The general state of the church; the orthodox; the "evangelicals;" the "liberals;" church services and church fabrics; church literature; the church and education; church societies; church and state; intercourse with sister churches. "Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

POETS AND PUBLISHERS.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE contributes to The Speaker a witty essay on the relations of poets and publishers, in which, curiously enough, he holds a brief for the latter, who are, he considers, "in the main a very much abused race." Taking Dr. Johnson's definition of booksellers as "the patrons of literature," and Anatole France's characterization of the publisher as "a kind of minister of belles-lettres," Mr. Le Gallienne thinks that, fairly dealt with, the history of publishing would show a much nearer living up to these definitions on the part of publishers than the poets and their sentimental sympathizers are inclined to admit. "We hear a great deal," he says, "of Milton getting £5 for 'Paradise Lost,' and the Tonsons riding in their carriage, but seldom of Cottle adventuring £40 on the 'Lyrical Ballads,' or the Jacksons giving two untried boys £10—or, according to some accounts £20—for 'Poems by Two Brothers.'"

"To open the case for the bookseller or the publisher," Mr. Le Gallienne says, "The poet, to start with, bases his familiar complaints on a wilful disregard of the relation which poetry bears to average humanity. You often hear him express indignant surprise that the sale of butchers' meat should be a more lucrative business than the sale of poetry. But surely to do this is to manifest a most absurd disregard for the facts of life. Wordsworth says that 'we live by admiration, joy, and love.' So doubtless we do; but we live far more by butchers' meat and Burton ales. Poetry is but a preparation of opium distilled by a minority for a minority. The poet may test the case by the relative amounts he pays his butcher and his bookseller. So far as I know, he pays as little for his poetry as possible, and never buys a volume by a brother-sizer till he has vainly tried six different ways to get a presentation copy. The poet seems incapable of mastering the rudimentary truth that ethereals must be based on materials. 'No song, no supper' is the old saw. It is equally true reversed—no supper, no song. The empty-stomach theory of creation is a cruel fallacy, though undoubtedly hunger has sometimes been the spur which the clear soul doth raise.

"The conditions of existence compel the publisher to be a tradesman on the same material basis as any other. Ideally, a poem, like any other beautiful thing, is beyond price; but, practically, its value depends on the number of individuals who can be prevailed upon to purchase it. An unprinted poem is a spiritual thing, but a printed poem is subject to the laws of matter. In the heaven of the poet's imagination there are no printers and paper-makers, no binders, no discounts to the trade and thirteen to the dozen; but on earth, where alone, so far as we know, books exist, these terrestrial beings and conditions are of paramount importance, and cannot be ignored. It may be perfectly true that a certain poem is so fine that, in a properly constituted cosmogony, it ought to support you to the end of your days; but is the publisher to blame that, in spite of its manifest genius, he can sell no more than five hundred copies?"

Mr. Le Gallienne also demonstrates that poets make their money more easily than most of their fellows, as for "a half hour's beggarly work" they receive as much as "many a city clerk receives for six days' hard work, eight hours to the dreary day, with perhaps a family to keep and a contract to pay;" and moreover, they have the option of going about with a feeling of vast superiority to the rest of the world, in virtue of their rhyming gift. He touches also upon the arrogance of the poet: "It is one of the most foolish and distasteful of his faults, and one which unfortunately the world has conspired from time immemorial to confirm. He has been too long the spoiled child; too long allowed to think that anything becomes him; too long allowed to ride rough-shod over the neck of the average man.

"Mrs. Browning, in 'Aurora Leigh,' while celebrating the poet, sneers at 'your common men' who 'lay telegraphs, gauge railroads, reign, reap, dine.' But why? All these—with, perhaps, the exception of reigning—are very proper and necessary things to be done, and any one of them, done in the true spirit of work, is every bit as dignifying as the writing of poetry, and often, I am afraid, a great deal more so. This scorn of the common man is but another instance of the poet's ignorance of the facts of life and the relations of things. The hysterical bitterness with which certain sections of modern people of taste are constantly girding at the bourgeois—which, indeed, as Omar Khayyam says, heeds 'as the sea's self should heed a pebble-cast'—is one of the most melancholy of recent literary phenomena. It was not so the great masters treated the common man—nor any full-blooded age. But the torch of taste has for the moment fallen into the hands of little men, anæmic and atrabilious—men with neither laughter nor pity in their hearts."

His conclusion is rather sweeping. "We live," he says, "in an age of every man his own priest and his own lawyer. At a pinch we can very well be every man his own poet. If the whole supercilious crew of modern men of letters, artists, and critics were wiped off the earth to-morrow, the world would be hardly conscious of the loss. Nay, if even the whole artistic accumulation of the past were to be suddenly swallowed, it would be little worse off. For the world is more beautiful and wonderful than anything that has ever been written about it, and the most glorious picture is not so beautiful as the face of a spring morning."

HISTORY OF THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

Ex-Senator Palmer, of Michigan, president of the World's Fair Commission; Prof. O. V. Tousley, a commissioner from Minnesota, who has been selected as the historian of the commission; John Boyd Thacher, of Albany, chairman of the executive committee on awards, and Benjamin F. Butterworth, of Ohio, who was for a time the secretary of the commission, held a conference at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, last week, and discussed the work to be done in preparing and publishing a history of the fair.

It was decided to prepare an introduction or preface to the history, which will deal with the events which led up to the establishment of the fair and the acts of Congress authorizing it, and will include a review of the industrial and educational advantages resulting from it and the general interest taken in the fair throughout the civilized world.

This is to be followed by the report of President Palmer, which will contain a history of the opening ceremonies, and deal largely with the exhibitions made by the United States and foreign nations. The report of the secretary will include synopses of the legislation of the commission, the work of the board of control and the executive committee, and a full financial statement.

The report of the council of administration will cover the erection of the buildings and the manner in which the fair was conducted in all its details. There will also be separate reports of the board of lady managers, the Chicago directory, the committee on awards and the director-general. The latter will include a report from the heads of each of the thirteen departments into which the exhibition was divided.

The report of the executive committee on awards will be made by John Boyd Thacher, the chairman. The preparation of the reports of the congresses held during the fair has been entrusted to Mr. Butterworth.

Prof. Tousley thinks that nearly a year will be consumed in the preparation of the history. It will probably consist of thirty octavo volumes of five or six hundred pages each. Director-General George R. Davis is now in Florida preparing his report.

There has already been considerable work done in preparing reports and compiling statistical and other matter, and the work will be advanced as rapidly as possible. It is thought that the report of the executive committee on awards will occupy fifteen volumes of the history. Between 26,000 and 27,000 medals will be awarded.

When the history is complete it will be submitted to President Cleveland, and will be printed under the direction of Congress.

THE OFFICIAL HISTORY OF THE WAR OF THE REBELLION.

The most extensive literary work ever undertaken in this country is the military history now being produced by the government of the United States, under the title of "War of the Rebellion, a Compilation of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies." It is probably the largest history ever published in the world. It was begun just twenty years ago, and will be practically finished at the end of the next fiscal year.

The whole work when completed will embrace 120 huge royal octavo volumes of 1000 pages each, and a gigantic atlas, and the ultimate cost will be something like $2,500,000 for the 11,000 copies printed.

Up to this date eighty-nine serial volumes have been published, and about $1,800,000 has been spent in all branches of the work, or about $20,000 per volume. The printing and binding alone cost $10,000 per volume, while the previous preparation of each volume for the printer's hands cost an equal sum of $10,000.

The distribution of the printed volumes as they come out is conducted on an unusual plan, in accordance with a law of the Forty-seventh Congress, passed in 1882. Of the 11,000 copies ordered to be printed, 1000 are set aside for the various executive departments; 1000 are reserved for distribution by the Secretary of War among army officers and contributors to the work; 8300 copies are being sent to such libraries, posts, organizations, and individuals as were designed to receive them by Senators, Representatives, and delegates of the Forty-seventh Congress, and the 700 copies over are for sale at the War Department (with a possible 500 more, owing to the death of original beneficiaries), at 10 per cent. above the bare cost of printing the proceeds to be turned into the Treasury. The books can be had at the Department by purchase at from 50 to 85 cents per volume, if bound in black cloth, and $1 extra per volume if bound in half turkey. None can be had free on application. The 89 serial parts already published can be had for $56.10 in cloth. The atlas, when complete, will cost $12, or 40 cents a part, there being 30 parts.

COMMUNICATIONS.

POSTAL-CARDS FOR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.

32 Gay St., Bath, Eng., Feb. 2, 1894.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

Dear Sir: In reply to advertisements in your journal we have received a number of post-cards which, according to new regulation of your postal authorities, are larger than are allowed for foreign correspondence. They have been surcharged six cents in all cases. These cards are for use in the United States only. A warning note to your readers may save them disappointments. They must use the foreign cards or smaller ones. B. & J. F. Meehan.

[The largest sized United States postal-cards, if sent to countries of the Postal Union, will hereafter be subject to letter postage. If a less amount is prepaid, such cards will be liable to double the amount of the deficiency. It appears that this card is larger than the maximum-sized cards, which are exchangeable between the Postal Union countries. Such cards can, however, still be delivered in Mexico and Canada as heretofore. In those countries our own postal regulations are in force. It would be safer, however, in every case to use the international postal-card.—ED. P. W.]

FOR THE RIGHTS OF THE PUBLISHER OR THE BENEFIT OF THE STUDENT: WHICH SHALL IT BE?

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

SIR: A dissatisfied publisher in this city, a subscriber to your journal, has just called my attention to an editorial paragraph in your columns, December 16, as follows:

"While it may not be within the province of a book trade journal to criticise any of the features of the proposed tariff bill, nevertheless, as one interested in education and the advancement of learning, we cannot help expressing a regret that the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives did not recognize the wisdom of extending more generally the privilege of importing English books published within twenty years from the date of importation. This duty, especially since the passage of the international copyright law, has little or no justification, because English books copyrighted in this country are already protected; and as for the revenue from those not so protected that seems insignificant when compared with the benefit that might be derived by students who are now often deterred from buying such books because of the needless difficulties placed in their way. It is to be hoped that when the section in question comes up for debate our law-makers will consider the matter in favor of a worthy if not abundantly large portion of the community."

Not one word is here found touching the effects upon the American book trade of the free importation of English books, or of the passage of the Wilson Tariff Bill. To me it seems that "the province of a book trade journal" is or ought first to be to look after the interests of the book trade of its own country. THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is, on the contrary, persistently looking after the so-called "rights" of foreign authors, and "the benefit that might be derived by students" from the policy in any copyright or tariff act, without regard to their effects on the book trade of the United States. We hear too much of the rights of authors and the benefits to be had by students from this or that policy. A journal claiming to represent the American book trade should be first, last, and all the time American.

The idea that taxation is necessary to the very existence of society, and that no productive industry in a country can escape it, seems to be wholly overlooked and ignored by those theorists, like yourself, who would benefit students and others while sacrificing the fundamental rights of domestic producers. It being utterly impossible to produce in this country a book, a part of the cost of which is not taxes, the student has no right to the free importation of books from abroad. In a word, the policy which you advocate is highly unjust, because it would discriminate against the American publisher. As for the student himself, and for the state, it may be said with entire truth that many of these foreign books, which you would allow him the privilege of importing free, would teach him doctrines which are utterly antagonistic to the best interests of American society, such free importation, in that case, thus being against public policy. The fact is this country, through the medium of the college, is being honeycombed and our civilization is being threatened with destruction, by reason of the absorbing of foreign ideas, especially English, and of an economic character. Rather would I put a prohibitive tariff on books containing such ideas than admit those books free of duty.

Conceived in the brain of a student, a professor, and a president of a college, the Wilson Tariff Bill stands out as an embodiment of all the bad teachings of the college during the past hundred years! It is a menaçe to every branch of American industry, and is at this moment causing a destructive paralysis of the book trade itself, not by reason of direct legislation on books, but by reason of its threatened destruction of American productive industries generally. Will you not, therefore, cease to ask that the book trade and its products shall be more directly brought under the blighting influences of this infamous act, but will you not rather raise your voice in favor of its defeat, to the end that the trade of which you are the organ may experience a revival, which it cannot while Prof. Wilson threatens new and greater miseries to the American people than those under which they are now being crushed? As such an organ, it seems to me you can do no less.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

THE FALK PHOTOGRAPH-COPYRIGHT SUIT UPHELD.

THE United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Judges Wallace and Lacombe, handed down a decision on the 10th inst. in the case of the Springer Lithographing Company, plaintiff in error, against Benjamin J. Falk, defendant in error, in which the decision of the lower court was affirmed with costs. The action was brought by Mr. Falk, to recover damages from the lithographing company for having lithographed and printed a copyrighted photograph. The jury found for Mr. Falk in the full amount, $3000. The opinion is by Judge Lacombe, and he held that to be an infringement of the photograph, the lithograph need not be an exact copy, as the law holds that a substantial copy of the distinctive ideas and characteristic features of the original photograph constitutes such infringement.

OBITUARY NOTES.

ROBERT M. BALLANTYNE, the prolific and popular writer of books for boys, died in Rome on the 8th inst. Mr. Ballantyne was born in Edinburgh in 1825. His first book, issued in 1848, was a record of personal experiences during a six years' residence (from 1841 to 1847) in the territories of the Hudson Bay Company. In 1856 he took to literature as a profession, making it his aim as far as possible to write from personal experience and introducing interesting facts and descriptions. His first tales were founded on experiences in the backwoods of Rupert's land among the fur-traders and red Indians. The "Lighthouse" was written after a short residence in the Bell Rock Lighthouse; "Erling the Bold," after a visit to Norway; and "The Settler and the Savage," after a visit to the cape. Up to January, 1887, he had written and published seventy-four volumes, of which sixty-seven were distinct tales.

MAXIME DU CAMP, the historian of the Paris Commune and author of a number of works on art, travel, etc., died in Paris on the 9th inst., aged 72 years.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MME. SARAH GRAND's forthcoming book is to be entitled "Our Manifold Lives. It is not a novel but a collection of short stories.

AN enthusiastic German has erected a monument to Heine in the wilds of Central Africa, placing thereon a suitable poetic inscription.

MR. CRAWFORD's new story is to be entitled "Katherine Lauterdale," and will concern itself with the affairs of the Lauterdales, a rich New York family. Three stories, each however complete in itself, will be devoted to the Lauterdales.

ARCHIBALD GUNTER's next novel will be called "A Princess of Paris," and it is to be followed by one entitled "The King's Stockbroker." Both stories have to do with the period of French history when paper money and speculation in organized companies were first introduced.

MME. NAHIDA RENNY, a talented German Jewess, has just published a work entitled "Culture Studies in Judaism." Mme. Renny, who is an accomplished Hebrew scholar, is deeply versed in Jewish history; she is the authoress of "The Jewish Woman," and has lectured on "Woman and the Talmud."

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—An adjourned meeting of the creditors of the D. Lothrop Company was held on the 12th inst. A report of the committee appointed by the creditors at thelast meeting to investigate was handed in and read. The Lothrop family, to whom about $106,000 of the $250,000 liabilities is due for money loaned, have transferred their shares of whatever dividends are declared for the purpose of securing the notes indorsed by them for money advanced by the banks. The effect of this action is to reduce the liabilities, which must be immediately met, from $250,000 to $144,000, and to hasten the settlement of the firm's affairs. It is intended to form a new corporation as soon as practicable, which will assume the family liabilities and carry on the business.

COLUMBIA, MO.—W. E. Harshe has started in the book, stationery, and fancy-goods business here.

LONDON, ONT.—E. A. Taylor, for many years the leading bookseller in London, died in Toronto, Ont., recently. He was widely and favorably known to the trade in Canada and the United States.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Godey Publishing Co. has made an assignment. The company, which is a New Jersey corporation, will be at once reorganized under New York State laws, so that the business will be continued without interruption.

NEW YORK CITY.—Lovell, Coryell & Company have participated in the general up-town move of the New York publishing houses. The local and visiting trade will henceforth find them located in the Cammeyer building, at the corner of Sixth Avenue and 20th Street, in connection with the parent house, the United States Book Co. Here a spacious and well-equipped wareroom will enable Lovell, Coryell & Co. to carry not only samples, but full lines of stock of their whole list of publications, as well as to have the offices of the company and its affiliated houses and the shipping and other departments all under one roof.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Merriam Company, formerly the Price-McGill Co., of St. Louis, has purchased the jobbing business of the firm of Saalfield & Fitch, and will continue the same for the present at the old quarters of the latter at the Bible House. The personnel of the company in New York will consist of R. H. Merriam, the president; Arthur H. Saalfield, who will act as vice-president and general manager of the jobbing business, and Jared How, who officiates as secretary. As already noted, The Merriam Company contemplated establishing an Eastern agency, and this seems to have been accomplished in combining their publishing with the jobbing business already established by Mr. Saalfield. As soon as suitable quarters can be found on Fifth Avenue, or in a street near it, somewhere below Twenty-third Street, The Merriam Company will remove, the present quarters being not only much too small, but too far removed from the centre of the regular trade.

NEW YORK CITY. — Henry Miller, the bookseller, has removed to larger quarters at 122 Nassau Street. Before leaving his old quarters at No. 65 Nassau Street, which had been occupied as a book-store under different owners for more than 75 years and is now making room for a larger building, Mr. Miller gave what might be called a farewell party to some of his friends. Although the clerks were busy putting the books into cases for removal, enough room was cleared to permit of the opening of several cases of wine, and "good-by" was drank to the old place in foaming beakers.

NEW YORK CITY—The New York News Company is now in its new quarters, at No. 26 City Hall Place. The building is a new structure, 25 x 85 feet, and is six stories high, with large basement. In the basement are the machinery, electric motors, etc. The store floor is devoted to books, and on the second story are the offices. The stationery department occupies the third floor, the express and foreign packing departments the fourth floor, the mail department the fifth floor, and the sixth floor is the stock-room.

MARION, IND.—Bailey & Glecker, stationers and booksellers, have failed.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Joel White & Woodruff, booksellers, have associated with them in business Mr. Ed. C. Fowler.

SCRANTON, PA.—Executions amounting to over $25,000 were issued against Claud B. Pratt, bookseller and stationer, on January 20. Five judgments were filed and executions were immediately issued on each and placed in the hands of the sheriff. The largest, according to the American Stationer, is a note to Mary E. Pratt, for $13,514.72; the next to Z. B. Phillips, for $7270; the next to W. W. Phillips, for $3000. There are two to Charles H. Welles, trustee, one for $1028.42 and another for $450.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—The book-store of C. C. Howorth was recently damaged by fire.

TORONTO, ONT.—The Williamson Book Company has arrraged with its creditors, and is now doing business on King Street, near its old stand.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS market in this country an English translation of Arthur Lévy's "Napoleon Intime" under the title of "The Private Life of Napoleon."

HARVEY FISK & SONS, bankers, New York City, have compiled a bond-book, being both a catalogue and a history of all bonds dealt in in this part of the country, which is said to be about as complete as anything of that kind that has ever been published.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY will issue directly a "Comic History of the United States," by Bill Nye; also a new fresh-air book by Dr. C. C. Abbott, entitled "Travels in a Tree Top," also the same author's handbook of American birds —"The Birds About Us."

GINN & Co. have in press in their International Modern Language Series Freytag's "Doktor Luther," four chapters of the author's "Bilder aus der deutschen Vergangenheit," which deal with the life and activity of the great reformer, first issued in a separate volume on the occasion of the Luther celebration in 1883. This has been edited and furnished with an introduction and notes by Frank P. Goodrich, instructor of German in Yale University.

AMBLARD & MEYER BROTHERS will publish at once a new book by Paul Bourget, entitled "Un Saint," which will be followed shortly by a new volume of Marcel Prévost, both additions to the Collection Lemerre. The latter, entitled "Nouvelles Lettres de Femmes," will be followed in June by another of this popular writer's stories, to be called "Les Deux Vièrges." François Coppée's "Henriette;" Daniel Lesueur's "Haine d'Amour," and Daudet's "Soutien de Famille," are also in preparation.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to the Critic from Athens: "I have found at a book-stall here a copy of 'Leaves of Grass.' edition of 1867. It is a presentation copy from Walt Whitman; but the name of the person to whom he gave it has been torn out. Perhaps the book has been lost or stolen. If so I shall be glad to return it to its original owner, asking only that I may be assured that it goes to the person to whom it belongs. I hope that there is only one of him. A letter addressed American Legation, Athens, Greece, will reach me."

WILLIAM BEVERLEY HARISON has just issued eight numbers of "Harison's Vertical Penmanship." The numbers are put up in pads, enabling the teacher to permit a number of copy-sheets for practice before proceeding to the next step. Mr. Harison announces for early publication an "Essay on Physiology of Penmanship," by Dr. Javal (French Academy of Medicine). This essay is based largely upon the report of the commission appointed to examine into the cause of assymetry, near-sightedness, etc., in public schools. This little volume will be published as the second volume of the Pocket Pedagogical Library.

LOVELL, CORYELL & Co. have made arrangements for an active publishing season. They will bring out new editions of many of the most popular books in their long list of novels, and will from time to time add new works to their list. Among the notable writings promised are uniform editions of the works of Conan Doyle and Barrie; several of the works of Manville Fenn and Herman Melville; Cobban's "A Soldier and a Gentleman;" William Norris' "His Grace;" and "Countess Radna," a quite new story from the gifted novelist; and "Flying Visits: the English parliament on wheels," by Harry Furniss, the talented illustrator of Punch.

MACMILLAN & Co. will publish under the title of "Christus Imperator!: the universal empire of Christianity in the light of evolution," a series of sermons delivered by the following: Rev. C. W. Stubbs, rector of Wavertree; the Very Rev. G. W. Kitchen, D.D., dean of Winchester; Rev. R. E. Bartlett, Bampton Lecturer at Oxford, 1888; Rev. J. Llewellyn Davies, D.D., vicar of Kirby Lonsdale, and chaplain to the Queen; Rev. W. H. Freemantle, D.D., canon of Canterbury; Rev. S. A. Barnett, M.A., canon of Bristol, and other well-known divines. A volume entitled "A Corner of Cathay," by Adele M. Fielde, will be issued in September by Macmillan & Co. Miss Fielde has lived in China for twenty years, and was long an inmate of a native household. The book will be illustrated in an interesting manner.

THE second volume of Moncure D. Conway's collected edition of Tom Paine's works, which will probably appear in the spring, will comprise most of Paine's writings in England between the time of his arrival, September 3, 1787, and his departure for France five years later. The "Rights of Man" will be preceded by a document which has never appeared in English, but was translated from the manuscript by Condorcet for the Chronique du Mois (Paris) of May, June, and July, 1792. It was written a year before its translation in reply to questions addressed to Paine concerning some fundamental provisions of the constitution submitted by the National Assembly, and in it the writer states that he is engaged on a work relating to those subjects. This work was part 2 of "Rights of Man" (published February 17, 1792), several passages of which are anticipated in substance in the manuscript written nearly nine months before.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. will publish early in March a work by Edward Porritt, of London, on the various departments of the municipal and national life of England. It bears the comprehensive title of "The Englishman at Home: his responsibilities and privileges," and explains in a simple and popular style every detail of the political system of England: municipal administration, poor-laws, justice, taxes, Parliament, education, the National Church and non-conformity, civil service, the army and navy, labor legislation and the daily press. The book is not only interesting but valuable to every reader who wishes to understand the difference between English and American customs. Mr. Porritt was for a time connected with American journalism, but has been for some years the London editor of a prominent Manchester newspaper, a position which gives peculiar insight into English politics and affairs. He is at present residing in Farmington, Conn.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready a new volume of short stories by Thomas Hardy, entitled "Life's Little Ironies." They include "The Son's Veto," "For Conscience' Sake," "On the Western Circuit," "The Fiddler of the Reels," "The Superstitious Man's Story," "Absent-mindedness in a Parish Choir;" and "Netty Sargent's Copyhold," with which the volume closes. They have also just added to Harper's Young People Series "The Mystery of Abel Forefinger," by William Drysdale, a boys' story of a cruise among the West Indies. Its heroes are two American youths who become lost in a Nassau jungle, fall into the hands of Cuban bandits, have a ride on a runaway car down a Mexican mountain, encounter a St. Kitts hurricane, explore Robinson Crusoe's island, and have other delightfully thrilling adventures on sea and land. Brander Matthews has collected his "Studies of the Stage" into a volume shortly to be published in the Harper's American Essayists Series. Among the nine subjects treated are "The Dramatization of Novels," "The Dramatic Outlook in America," "The Old Comedies," "A Plea for Farce," and "The Players," the club which Edwin Booth founded for followers of art, literature, and the drama.

COPELAND & DAY, 69 Cornhill, Boston, will shortly put their imprint on an edition of Oscar Wilde's one-act tragedy of "Salome," translated by the author from his original French version, with illustrations by Aubrey Beardsley, on a volume of poems by Francis Thompson, the young North-of-England man, who having come down to London first earned a precarious living by doing drudgeries of all kinds until his genius was discovered, and such men as Browning and Coventry Patmore gave him their aid and encouragement; also on a volume of verse by Miss Katherine Tynan, and on the third edition of Le Gallienne's poems. Their first American book will be "Vagabondia," a book of poems by Bliss Carmen and Richard Hovey, in which it will be left to readers to trace the separate verses to their author, for they will not be signed. Messrs. Copeland & Day have an æsthetic little office in Cornhill, and announce that they hope to need very large, not very limited editions of their publications. In fact, the press generally seems to be somewhat confused concerning the intentions of this firm, and so has given the impression that they are planning the publication of limited editions of sumptuous books merely to gratify personal taste in this direction regardless of pecuniary profit. On the contrary, they intend to get out books as they should be manufactured in times when paper, type, and binding have reached almost perfection in as large editions as may be called for, and they firmly believe that their efforts will meet a demand already existing, and sure to grow if good intrinsic matter in good external shape is well supplied.

FOREIGN NOTES.

J. SALISBURY, 48 Fleet Lane, London, has just issued "A Glossary of Words and Phrases Used in Southeast Worcestershire, together with some of the sayings, customs, etc., common in that district," by Jesse Salisbury.

B. F. STEVENS, of London, has just published "Christopher Columbus: his own book of privileges, 1502." It is a fac-simile, in folio, of the famous Codex in the archives of the Paris Foreign Office, with translation and historical introduction by Henry Harrisse, the American authority on Columbus. This introduction, which contains a curious chapter on the plans, partially carried out, of Napoleon I., to concentrate in Paris the archives of the whole of Europe, has also been printed separately in folio, with plates. There are only twenty copies of this rare volume, and these are to be distributed privately.

M. SPIRGATIS, Leipzig, has just issued the sixth instalment of Karl Dziatzko's Sammlung Bibliothekswissenshaftlicher Arbeiten, under the title "Beiträge zur Theorie und Praxis des Buch und Bibliothekswesens" (Contributions to the Theory and Practice of Books and Library Systems). The nine chapters composing the pamphlet treat of the researches in German printing of the 15th century, describe a journey through the larger libraries of Italy, give a description of the Latin books of the 15th century in the library of the University of Göttingen, discuss the libraries of German universities, their means and their needs, and offer various researches on special volumes of early printing.

H. LE SOUDIER has sent us two editions of the "Annual Catalogue of the Newspapers, Reviews, and Periodical Publications Published at Paris" ("Annuaire des journaux, revues et publications périodiques publiés à Paris"), one with only retail, the other with retail and trade prices. This annual gives the complete titles in alphabetical order, the name of editor, the size, number of pages, the date of origin, the price of single numbers, the rate of subscription for Paris, the Departments, the Postal Union and other countries, the address of the subscription agencies and much other practical information. The periodicals also appear in short title under subject headings. The Annual includes a table of postal tariff for France and other countries. M. Le Soudier has also published the seventh annual map, showing the divisions and locations of the troops of the French army, and giving an index to every army corps and a list of the generals and superior officers in command. The French title reads "Carte de la Repartition et de l'Emplacement des Troupes de l'Armée Française pour l'Année 1894."

(4) Publishers' annual lists for 1893.

The edition is limited, and to secure copies orders should be sent at once. The price is $3.50 half leather; $3.00 in sheets.

The Annual Catalogue for 1886 and 1887 is now out of print. But few copies of the Annual Catalogue for 1888, 1889, 1890 and 1891 are on hand.

NEARLY READY:

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX, ...1893...

INCLUDING PERIODICALS, AMERICAN AND ENGLISH, ESSAYS, BOOK-CHAPTERS, ETC., SPECIAL BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND NECROLOGY OF AUTHORS.

EDITED BY W. I. FLETCHER and R. R. BOWKER,

With the co-operation of members of the American Library Association and of the Library Journal staff.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 complements the "Annual American Catalogue" of books published in 1893 by indexing (1) articles in periodicals published in 1892; (2) essays and book-chapters in composite books of 1892; (3) authors of periodical articles and essays; (4) special bibliographies of 1892; (5) authors deceased in 1892. The two volumes together make a complete record of the literary product of the year.

The new volume includes the features of the "Co-operative Index to Periodicals," originally a monthly supplement to the Library Journal, then extended into a quarterly in an enlarged form, and later issued as an annual volume.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 forms the second supplement both to the new five-yearly volume (1887–1891) of Poole's Index to Periodical Literature and to the new A. L. A. Index to essays and book-chapters of Mr. Fletcher.

The new volume will more than fulfil the opinion as to the Co-operative Index expressed in the following extract:

"To the literary worker its value can hardly be over-estimated; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field. to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time."—Providence Press.

One vol., cloth, (uniform with "A. L. A. Index,") $3.50.

Mr. Winsor here gives an important chapter of the geographical history of the age of American explorations. By WILLIAM WETMORE STORY, author of "He and She," "Roba di Roma," "Fiammetta," etc. 18mo, parchment paper, $1.00.

Ships that Pass in the Night.

A NOVEL.

By BEATRICE HARRADEN.

AUTHORIZED AMERICAN EDITION. TWENTY-SECOND THOUSAND.

Cloth, 16mo, $1.00; Popular Edition, Paper, 50 cents.

"There is a wealth of philosophy, humor and pathos in this little tale; and it is told so simply that one feels as if he were a part of it, somehow. So truly are the human heart-strings struck that he must be beyond redemption whose inner self does not vibrate in sympathy, many times, as the pages are turned. There is an abundance of sound sense, and innumerable quotable passages, and not a dull page. Many a more pretentious volume seeks in vain for such an encomium. New thoughts are suggested because old thoughts are so truly phrased; and new motives and higher aims are inspired by this little book because it gets right down to the human entities and reveal the chords of life as they are, some time or other, in every life. 'Ships that Pass in the Night' is one book in ten thousand; you should read it."—Boston Times.

"'Ships that Pass in the Night' has made its success by purely legitimate methods. . . . The author has a story to tell, a theory to work out, a belief to impart, and that is all—except the important item that she is a good writer, keen and wise in observation and style, liberal and sympathetic in temperament. . . . I sat up half the night to finish the book."—JEANNETTE L. GILDER, in the World.

"A most suggestive little volume, which, touching upon many of its historical and literary ideas, ranges widely over the field of Irish patriotic sentiment. No one who desires to realize the Irish question can afford to neglect this little book."—The Speaker.

THREE NOTABLE STORIES.

The Story of Margredel.

By a NEW WRITER. Being the Fireside History of a Fifeshire Family. Copyrighted American edition. Uniform with "Ships that Pass in the Night." 12mo, cloth, $1.00. (Ready March 3.)

It is safe to predict that "The Story of Margrédel" will arouse great interest in regard to the identity of its unknown author, and many discussions will take place on the question whether it is the work of a woman or that of a man.

The story will absorb the attention of the reader until the end, but he will desire to wander back again over its pages for the pleasure of re-reading the many charming bits of philosophy and character sketches. The Baillie is excellently portrayed, and the generous nature of the times is admirably represented by the member of the Crocodile Club, who with the full authority of the club, translated "Dramatis Personæ" as "a dram for each person."

D. APPLETON & CO. will publish at once "Benefits Forgot," the striking novel of American life, by Wolcott Balestier, that has attracted so much attention during its publication in the Century Magazine. They will publish at the same time in their Town and Country Library a new novel by Mrs. Alexander, entitled "A Ward in Chancery."

They have also in preparation two works of Marion Crawford about Constantinople, of which part has already appeared in magazine form.

HARPER & BROTHERS have nearly ready a work on "The Jewish Question and the Mission of the Jews," by an anonymous author, who, it is said, has made a careful and peculiarly complete study of the Jew as a type, an influence, and a "problem" of increasing importance in the history of civilization. "The Wee Ones of Japan," a study of the Japanese child in babyhood and just beyond, by Mae St. John Bramhall, with illustrations by C. D. Weldon; "For Honor and Life," a military tale of the 18th century, by William Weston; and "The Expert Waitress," by Anne Frances Springsteed, a series of papers intended rather as a working model than as a set of arbitrary rules, treating of such subjects as the duties of a waitress at various meals, the care of the dining-room and pantry, the proper ways of caring for silver, lamps, etc., and many other important household details. They will publish at once "Our English Cousins," by Richard Harding Davis. The volume will contain the sketches of London life, and the descriptions of A General Election, Undergraduate Life at Oxford, and Three English Race Meetings, which have appeared in Harper's Magazine during the past year.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

JUDGE PRYOR, of the Court of Common Pleas, on the 20th inst., permitted Nellie Bishop Herrick, the author, to assume her pen-name, "Helen Leavenworth Herrick," instead of her present name.

MISS OLIVE SCHREINER, the author of "The Story of an African Farm," is engaged to be married to Mr. Cron Wright, the son of a well-known South African farmer and member of the Cape Parliament. It is said, by the way, that more than 70,000 copies of "The African Farm" have been sold.

R. L. STEVENSON, according to the New York Tribune, is engaged upon three Scotch stories—so he writes from Samoa to Mr. Barrie. To this statement Mr. Stevenson added another, to the effect that he had been elected "a member of a society, which he called a temperance society, founded with two objects—the first, the inculcation of temperance principles, and the second, to encourage the exportation of Scotch whiskey."

"Variety Patter" relates to a well-known lady of the music-hall; and "The Lease of the Cross Keys" is a humorous tale of mistaken identity, in which a bishop of the English Church and a dissipated journalist are the leading characters.

The author aims to show that Christ was not the son of God, and that the Bible is not the word of God; he believes that the entire Christian system may be swept away, and yet a pure religion and profound veneration for God remain. The New Testament is subjected to a rigorous criticism in the light of contemporary and modern writers. He believes that a false standard of right and wrong has been deducted from the Bible. "We shall best," he says, "win a heaven in the life to come, by making a heaven of the life we are in. The enigmas of this life are all that is given us to solve here."

Lisle, a minister of the Christian faith and a learned archæologist, is commissioned by a western college and representatives of the World's Columbian Exposition to go to Egypt in their interest; while musing near the Temple of Luxor he has an adventure, which leads him with his wife and daughter to explore the Oserian Temple; their startling discoveries and remarkable experiences lead Lisle to attempt a reproduction of the Pagan Temple in Chicago. Notwithstanding the title, David of Juniper Gulch—a sturdy young miner—plays but a small part. It is a story of the life, experiences, and heart-history of a young girl brought up in a little California mining town. Hulda Hardy's sweet and noble nature is admirably developed, and though her great sacrifice, made for the sake of a girl friend, comes near wrecking her life, the clouds clear at last, and the conclusion is eminently satisfactory. The descriptions of California life and Hulda's experiences as "school ma'am" in the mountain regions are fresh and interesting.

Stories both tragic and comic. The opening and longest story which gives title to the volume "The King of the Schnorrers" embodies some of the floating traditions of the Jewish Schnorrer, who is as unique among beggars as Israel among nations. The close of the eighteenth century is the background of this fantastic Anglo-Jewish narrative. The vagaries of this king of the beggars are most laughable. Some of the titles of the other fifteen stories are: The semi-sentimental dragon; A tragic comedy of creeds; An odd life; Cheating the gallows; A rose of the Ghetto; Flutterduck, a Ghetto grotesque, etc., etc.

A PROPOSED "AMERICAN CATALOGUE OF BOOKS, 1800–1876."

WITHIN the last few months plans have been outlined and arrangements made for the compilation of a new volume of the American Catalogue, to include books published prior to 1876, and the work as projected is shortly to be brought to the attention of the book trade and others interested in American bibliography. It is intended to make this volume a precursor of the General American Catalogue, the plan of which was outlined in the preface to "The American Catalogue" volume of 1884–90. The first step towards the preparation of such a general catalogue is necessarily the collation and collocation of the titles of books not included in the existing series of "The American Catalogue" volumes. The first volume of "The American Catalogue" recorded such books as were in print and for sale in 1876; but the materials of American bibliography before that date are scattered through a number of volumes, all of them imperfect even for their respective periods, and many of them rare and practically inaccessible. It is therefore proposed to compile a volume of "The American Catalogue" which shall combine the material found in the several volumes of Roorbach and Kelly, Stevens' "Bibliography of American Books in the British Museum," Trübner's "Bibliographical Guide to American Literature," and in other directions, which would be not only valuable in itself but a most important step toward the preparation of a general catalogue of books published during the nineteenth century Some experimental work has already been done in this direction, and the result has shown that the imperfections n these early bibliographies are much greater than had been supposed, as the number of books in each volume which are not to be found in the corresponding alphabet of the other works is very considerable. If reasonable promise of support for the enterprise can be obtained, the preparation of the catalogue will be put at once into the hands of competent compilers, on a plan already worked out, and the material will be finally edited into an author alphabet, and thereafter—if financial support justifies—into title and subject alphabets. A supplementary part will be appended, giving the publications of societies, of U. S. Government publications, and State publications up to the dates of the supplements in the later volumes of "The American Catalogue," which would, indeed, cover these fields practically from the beginning, as the publications of the years previous to 1800 are so few as to be easily included.

The work will be issued in $2 parts, and it is understood that subscribers are not to be bound to an extent beyond $10, within which limit the completion of the author alphabet at least is guaranteed, and the supplementary part can probably be finished and furnished, if not the title and subject alphabets also. It is desired that only one instalment of $2 per copy should be collected in advance; further instalments will not be asked for earlier than the latter part of this year. Under these circumstances the subscription would hardly prove burdensome to any. It is hoped, therefore, that the proposed publication of a work so important to American bibliography may meet with recognition and encouragement, and that prompt and adequate support may insure the carrying out of the enterprise.

BRITISH SUPPORT OF LITERATURE.

From the London Publishers' Circular.

MR. CHATTO, of the well-known firm of Chatto & Windus, assuming that the annual turnover of publishers is five millions sterling, adds £750,000 as retail booksellers' profits, and £500,000 spent on second-hand books, with the result that he estimates the "nation's book bill" at £6,250,000—"a trifle compared to some of our other national bills." Mr. Sonnenschein, while admitting the very great difficulty of getting at the true figures in such an estimate, is less sanguine than Mr. Chatto. He assumes that we spend £1,800,000 on new literature, a similar amount on "not new literature," and one million overturn in second-hand books—"a total of £4,600,000." It will be noticed that there is a difference of over a million and a half sterling between the two calculations, although Mr. Sonnenschein is careful to explain that his figures are probably below the actual amount. Taking Mr. Chatto's figures, therefore, as approximately correct, will the British nation be surprised at the generous support it gives to literature? One hundred and forty millions on drink—six millions on books!

THE LIGNEROLLES LIBRARY.

From the London Athenæum.

THE sale of the first portion of the library of that zealous and eccentric collector, the Comte de Lignerolles, took place in the first week of February, in Paris. Among the noticeable treasures a copy of the "Imitation" (the 1663 edition of the translation of Beuil; Prior of Saint-Val, bound with the arms and cipher of Henriette de France, and containing an autograph letter of hers to Mazarin) fetched 6000 fr. A copy of the Abbé de Choisy's translation (1692), which had belonged to Madame de Maintenon, and bore her arms, fetched 3110 fr. Phillip de Mornay's famous treatise on the Eucharist, the copy (Rochelle, 1598) given by the author to his daughter Martha, brought 1700 fr. The first edition of the "Horloge de Sapienne," with sixteen miniatures, sold for 4520 fr. A Psalter printed in Officina Simonis Colinæi, in a binding of the seventeenth century, went for 2500 fr. The "Office de la Semaine Sainte," presented to the Princesse de Lamballe by Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, and containing autograph inscriptions by them and the future Duchesse d'Angoulême, brought 30,000 fr. The "Homélies du Bréviaire," Baudoin's translation (1640), went for 10,000 fr. "Les Simulachres et Historiées faces de la Mort," Lyons, 1538, in a splendid binding of Trautz-Bauzonnet, fetched 8500 fr. Charles de Bouvelles's geometry, "Livre singulier et utille," the copy of François I. (1542), brought 5160 fr.; and the original edition of Fontenelle's "Plurality of Worlds," 2110 fr. The "Grande Danse Macabre," published by Estienne Groulleau about 1550, fetched 1120 fr. A vellum manuscript of the fifteenth century, ornamented with twenty-two miniatures, secured 11,000 fr.; a Horæ of the close of the same century, also on vellum, 10,500 fr.; another vellum Horæ of the same century, the binding of which had the arms of Philip V. of Spain, went for 8850 fr. A vellum manuscript of Prayers of 1649, adorned with nine miniatures by Du Guernier, 6920 fr. A vellum MS. of the "Chevalier délibéré," belonging to the end of the fifteenth century and containing several miniatures, 4130 fr. One (on vellum, of the eighteenth century) of the "Cérémonial des Vestures," that had belonged to Elizabeth Armand du Plessis, Prioress at Paris of the Benedictines of the Presentation, 3750 fr. A vellum MS. of the fifteenth century of "Le Débat de la Noire et de la Tannée," 3205 fr. A MS. calendar of the end of the fifteenth century, adorned with miniatures, brought 3000 fr. The total sum realized in six days was 330,575 fr. The sale of the second part will begin at the Hôtel Drouot on March 7.

OBITUARY NOTES.

BERNARD CALLAGHAN, the founder of the well-known law publishing firm of Callaghan & Co. of Chicago, died at his home on the 29th ult., aged 72 years. Mr. Callaghan was born in Roslea, Fermanagh county, Ireland, in 1822. Leaving his father's farm at about twenty-two years of age, a poor young man, he engaged in the lumber business near Halifax, N. S. In the fall of 1848 he removed to St. John, N. B., still engaging in lumber operations. In the same year (1848) he removed to Boston, and for four years engaged in various enterprises, acting as night-watchman and day employee in the same store. Such a strain could only be endured by a man of strong constitution and determined will, both of which he possessed. In 1852 he entered the employ of Little, Brown & Co., law and miscellaneous book publishers, where he served faithfully for thirteen years, leaving their employ in the spring of 1864. In company with a fellow-clerk he went to Chicago, and embarked in a modest law business at 126 Clark Street, under the firm name of Callaghan & Cutler. Later the firm became Callaghan & Cockcroft, and later still Callaghan & Co., moving to 80 Dearborn Street in 1871. The great fire of that year destroyed everything they owned. Starting again with nothing but pluck and determination, in a basement on Washburn Avenue, by honest dealing and close attention to business they earned the facetious name of "Call-again," and every dollar owed at the time of the fire was paid, and the firm were again ahead. In December, 1872, they moved to 161 Clark Street, where they remained until 1883, when they moved to their present location, 114 East Monroe Street. The qualities of character possessed by Mr. Callaghan have placed the house among the largest of its kind in the United States. Mr. Callaghan retired from the firm in 1891, leaving the control to his son and the other members of the firm.

JOSEPH KEPPLER, the cartoonist and founder of Puck, died at his home in New York City on the 19th inst., aged 56 years. His death was due to nervous disorder brought on by overwork, especially during the last summer at Chicago, where he had charge of the World's Fair Puck. Mr. Keppler was born in Vienna on February 1, 1838. He showed artistic talent when young, and was sent to an academy of design. He also attempted a theatrical career with but indifferent success. In 1868 he came to this country, and about 1874 he established a comic weekly, first entitled Die Vehme, but whose name was afterwards changed to Puck in St. Louis. The venture failed. Soon after Mr. Keppler came to New York City and entered the employ of Frank Leslie. In 1877, with Adolph Schwarzmann, he established Puck, which for the first three months was issued only in German. As a cartoonist Mr. Keppler showed great power, and his name has been closely associated with the growth of the art in America. He was one of the first to introduce colored cartoons. He leaves a widow, a son, and two daughters. His son, who is about twenty-three years old, also draws cartoons, which he signs "Keppler, jr."

JOHN G. BROUGHTON died on the 14th inst., at his home in Bloomfield, N. J., of pneumonia, in his 59th year. For many years he was the senior member of the firm of Broughton & Wyman, publishers of Sunday-school books in the Bible House in New York City.

THE death is announced of Madame Blaze de Bury, the widow of A. H. Blaze, and herself a contributor to the Revue de Paris and the Revue des Deux Mondes, and the writer of a volume of travels in Germany and Austria during the revolutionary troubles of 1848-49.

WILLIAM W. WILLIAMS, president and founder of the Williams Pub. Co., the subscription-book publishing house of Cleveland, O., died on the 19th inst., after an illness of several weeks.

We give the report only for what it is worth, having been unable to verify the facts.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

WILLIAM HEINEMANN, London, will publish at once a volume of short stories, by the author of "The Heavenly Twins," to be entitled "Our Manifold Lives."

ELLIOT STOCK will issue at once a new book by R. C. Hope, entitled "Mediæval Music: an historical sketch with musical illustrations," giving an excellent historical and artistic survey.

"DODO," it is said, is going into its thirteenth edition in England. Its author has just finished a new novel, but cannot decide upon its title, having under consideration four remarkably clever ones.

GINN & CO. will publish in May "A Book of Elizabethan Lyrics," selected and edited with introduction, notes, and indices, by F. E. Schelling, professor in the University of Pennsylvania.

THE Deutsche Verlags Anstalt of Stuttgart has issued an illustrated German translation of Wallace's "Ben-Hur." The same illustrations will be used in a Dutch translation, to be issued by D. Bolle, of Rotterdam.

ELKIN MATHEWS & JOHN LANE have just issued a volume of verse by Grant Allen, entitled "The Lower Slopes," with a title-page designed by J. Illingworth Kay. Most of the poems were written a good while ago.

The work will be illustrated by a colored frontispiece and several photogravure plates from drawings by the author.

THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF POLITICAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCE will publish March 1 a translation from the German of Professor Gustav Cohn's "History of Political Economy." The work has been translated by Dr. Jos. A. Hill, and has never before appeared in English. It is prefaced by an introduction by Prof. Edmund J. James, Ph. D.

PROF. G. B. WILDER, of Cornell University Ithaca, N. Y., has published a monograph, entitled "Physiology Practicums," giving "explicit directions for examining portions of the cat, and the heart, eye, and brain of the sheep as an aid in the study of elementary physiology." The work consists of seventy-seven pages of text and twenty-seven plates unbound and enclosed in a portfolio.

THE W. L. RICHARDSON CO., 73 Hanover Street, Boston, desire to call the attention of the trade to the fact that the price of the new and enlarged edition of George W. Hale's "Police and Prison Cyclopædia" is $4, not $2.50 as recorded in the "Annual Catalogue" for 1893. The new edition contains over three times as much matter as the first edition, which easily accounts for the raise in price.

COPELAND & DAY act as the American publishers of the limited edition of "Eight Illustrations to Shakespeare's Tempest," by Walter Crane. Each proof, on thin paper, is mounted and provided with a mat for framing and a fly-leaf with title, and the whole is enclosed in a box simulating a book. The engravings are by Duncan C. Dallas, in what is known as "Dallastype," and are certified to by Mr. Crane as "very faithful and successful."

IT is understood that the "History of the United States Navy," upon which Edgar Stanton Maclay has been engaged for the last nine years, is now nearing completion. It is a curious fact that no complete history of the navy has been published since Fenimore Cooper's time, and Mr. Maclay's elaborate work will meet a demand which has grown stronger since the public became interested in the building up of our new navy. Mr. Maclay's history, which will be published by D. Appleton & Co., comes down to 1893.

THE chief feature in the thirty-first issue of "The Statesman's Year Book," to be published immediately by Macmillan & Co., will be an entirely new treatment of the great navies of the world, contributed by John Leyland. All the sections relating to fleets in the several countries have been re-cast on a uniform plan, so as to permit a comparative view. Statements are given of ships in course of construction, and of those that have only been ordered to be laid down, and also detailed descriptions of the principal types of vessels.

ALMOST five hundred years after Chaucer ceased to write, the first complete edition of his works in prose and verse is to be issued. Prof. Skeat has devoted to it the labor of several years, and his first volume, containing a life of Chaucer, a list of his works, the "Romaunt of the Rose," and the "Minor Poems," with full introductions and notes, will appear before long. The work will be completed in six volumes. The Oxford Chaucer will be published by the Clarendon Press, and will match the standard edition of "Piers the Plowman," by the same editor.

THE French Academy began work upon the first letter of its famous "Dictionnaire Historique de la Langue Française" a little less than fifty years ago. A few weeks since it finished this exacting A. A few years ago M. Renan told his countrymen that the Academy would be completing its great work about twelve hundred years from that time; and M. Bergerat made this comment on Renan's satirical statement: "The real truth is far more cruel. M. Renan talks of only twelve centuries as being enough for the purpose, in order to keep up our spirits." An illustration of the exhaustive work by which the great lexicon has profited is to be seen in the fact that the word "Académie," which occupies fifty lines in the "Dictionnaire de l'Usage" fills ten of the double-column pages of the "Dictionnaire Historique."—N. Y. Tribune.

TIFFANY & CO., of New York City, have recently published an exquisitely printed and bound brochure, containing a biographical description of Charles L. Tiffany in particular, and of the firm of Tiffany & Co. in general, prepared by George Frederic Heydt. The fortunes of the founder and of his firm are traced from the birth of the former in Killingly, Conn., in 1812, and of the latter as Tiffany & Young, in New York, in 1837, down to the World's Columbian Exposition. It is probably little remembered now that the well-known jewellers and gold and silver smiths began as dealers in stationery and fancy-goods solely, pitching their tent one door above A. T. Stewart's modest dry-goods establishment at 259 Broadway, at the corner of Warren Street. Nine views of the different stores occupied, and exhibits made by the firm, and two portraits of Mr. Charles L. Tiffany, one a steel plate, accompany the text.

THE AMERICAN FOLK-LORE SOCIETY is about to undertake an extensive scheme of publication, under the general title of Memoirs of the American Folk-Lore Society. The first volume of this series, to be published in March, will be "Folk-Tales of Angola," by Heli Chatelain, late U. S. Commercial Agent in Loanda, West Africa. The work, which, together with an explanatory introduction, will give in original text and literal translation the oral literature of the West African coast, will be the first published representation of the ideas, emotions, and moral sentiments of races from which has been derived a great part of the negro population of the Southern States, and will therefore have an important bearing on American history. Among other works intended to continue the series are collections of the French Creole tales of Louisiana, and of the current superstitions still found in great mass among the English-speaking population. The publications proposed will constitute an important addition to Americana; but the complete execution of the plan will depend on adequate support from the American public. For this purpose, the number of members of the society should be increased by at least five hundred. Persons interested in the work of the society will be received as members, the annual fee being three dollars, giving the right to a copy of the organ of the society, the Journal of American Folk-Lore (quarterly). A subscription of ten dollars to the Publication Fund will include the membership fee, and entitle the subscriber to all the publications of the society, including the Memoirs, of which it is proposed to issue several numbers annually. Persons wishing to become members, or subscribe to the Publication Fund, may address the Permanent Secretary, W. W. Newell, Cambridge, Mass.

INCLUDING PERIODICALS, AMERICAN AND ENGLISH, ESSAYS, BOOK-CHAPTERS, ETC., SPECIAL BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND NECROLOGY OF AUTHORS.

EDITED BY W. I. FLETCHER and R. R. BOWKER,

With the co-operation of members of the American Library Association and of the Library Journal staff.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 complements the "Annual American Catalogue" of books published in 1893 by indexing (1) articles in periodicals published in 1892; (2) essays and book-chapters in composite books of 1892; (3) authors of periodical articles and essays; (4) special bibliographies of 1892; (5) authors deceased in 1892. The two volumes together make a complete record of the literary product of the year.

The new volume includes the features of the "Co-operative Index to Periodicals," originally a monthly supplement to the Library Journal, then extended into a quarterly in an enlarged form, and later issued as an annual volume.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 forms the second supplement both to the new five-yearly volume (1887–1891) of Poole's Index to Periodical Literature and to the new A. L. A. Index to essays and book-chapters of Mr. Fletcher.

The new volume will more than fulfil the opinion as to the Co-operative Index expressed in the following extract:

"To the literary worker its value can hardly be over-estimated; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field. to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time."—Providence Press.

VOL. XLV., No. 9. NEW YORK, March 3, 1894. WHOLE No. 1153

D. Appleton & Co.'s New Books.

A History of the United States Navy,

From 1775 to 1894. By EDGAR STANTON MACLAY, A.M. With technical revision by Lieut. Roy C. Smith, U. S. N. In two volumes. Vol. I. With numerous maps, diagrams, and illustrations. 8vo, cloth, $3.50.

For nine years the author has devoted himself to the task of supplying the want of a complete history of our navy. His researches in France, with the assistance of Admiral Aube, Minister of the Colonies and the Marine, and in England with the aid of the late Sir Provo Wallis and others, together with the use of private papers and unpublished documents in this country, the aid of descendants of naval heroes and the suggestions of naval officers who have taken part in some of the events described, render the results of his diligent labor complete and authoritative. The appearance of a standard history of the navy is a peculiarly happy accompaniment of the development of our new navy.

(Volume II. will be published in May next.)

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will issue at once "The Story of Margrédel," a fireside history of a Fifeshire family by a new writer, which will be brought out in the same attractive shape as "Ships that Pass in the Night." They have also in press "The Natural Law of Money," by William Brough; and "The Sphere of the State," by Frank Sargent Hoffman, which considers the people as a body politic with special reference to certain problems of the present day.

THE office of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has just ready "The Annual Literary Index, 1893," indexing American and English periodicals of 1893, essays, book-chapters, etc., and including special bibliographies of 1893 and necrology of authors deceased in 1893. Besides usefully complementing the "Annual American Catalogue, 1893," this volume forms the second supplement both to the new five-yearly volume of "Poole's Index" (1887–1891), and to the "A. L. A. Index" to essays and book-chapters, compiled by W. I. Fletcher, and covering the period to 1892.

D. APPLETON & CO. will issue next month an English translation of Baron Claude-François de Ménéval's "Memoires Pour Servir à l'Histoire de Napoléon Ier, 1802–1815," a work written about fifty years ago by one of the most trusted of Napoleon's private secretaries, which has now been wholly remodelled and revised by his grandson, and which will be issued simultaneously in England, France, and America. The book will be in three volumes, and will be hailed with delight by the collectors of Napoleon literature, as it covers much ground wholly unexplored by the great majority of the biographers of Napoleon. Ménéval was constantly about his great chief, and has taken note of many details of his private life and personal habits. This house also has in press "Memoirs of Edward L. Youmans," by John Fiske, who will prove an appreciative biographer of the founder of The Popular Science Monthly, the originator of The International Scientific Series, and the introducer of Spencer, Tyndall, Huxley and others to an American audience; "Symbolic Education," by Susan E. Blow, a book for mothers as well as teachers; and "Aphorisms from the Writings of Herbert Spencer," selected and arranged by Julia Raymond Gingell. The Town and Country Library will also shortly receive what must prove very popular additions in Dorothea Gerard's "Lot 13;" Sarah Grand's "Our Manifold Nature, a collection of short stories;" Rhoda Broughton's "A Beginner;" Maxwell Gray's "A Costly Freak;" and Gilbert Parker's "The Trespasser," said to be better work than any yet shown by this brilliant Canadian writer.

Balestier, Wolcott. Benefits forgot. N. Y., Appleton, 1894. c. 3+460 p. D. cl., $1.50. [594

The picturesque life of a newly settled town in Colorado, with its heterogeneous population of men and women from all states in the Union in search of fortune or health, and its mining element making or losing fortunes every moment almost, is the background. The leading characters are James Deed, a New York lawyer, and his two sons, Jasper and Philip. The elder Deed is a widower, and is about to marry again when the story opens. On the morning of his wedding-day he learns of an unscrupulous and ungrateful act on the part of his eldest son Jasper towards himself, which interrupts the whole current of the narrative, and is the basis of all the after-events. The characters, evidently drawn from life, are rich in western "slang" and eccentricities; the scene-painting is most artistic. Was published in the Century.

Davis, W: Morris. Elementary meteorology. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1894. c. 12+355 p. il. O. cl., $2.70. [610

The plan of this book may be concisely stated. The origin and uses of the atmosphere are first considered, with its extent and arrangement around the earth. Then, as the winds depend on differences of temperature over the world, the control of the temperature of the atmosphere by the sun is discussed, and the actual distribution and variations of temperature are examined. Next follows an account of the motions of the atmosphere in the general and local winds; the moisture of the atmosphere is then studied in regard to its origin, its distribution, and its condensation into dew, frost, and clouds; storms are then discussed, in which are included cyclones, tornadoes, and other disturbances, etc., etc., and closing chapters are given to the succession of atmospheric phenomena that ordinarily follow one another on which our local variations of weather depend, together with some account of weather prediction.

Although these subjects are presented in a popular way, and with an endeavor to surround them with their appropriate historical and literary accompaniments, the real purpose is always a serious purpose, having in view practical ends and results. The discussions are not intended alone for students of the law, but for the practising lawyer as well.

She is also heiress to a great estate, but when the story opens the birth of a half-brother, soon after her father's death, has deprived her of her inheritance. Consequent unhappiness brings on the somnambulistic state, and in this condition she rises at night, takes the sleeping babe from his cradle and casts him into a reservoir about a mile from her home. The child is rescued, adopted by honest cottagers, and recognized by a rascally physician who is heir to the estate after Myra. From this point there is a constant succession of plots and counterplots to prevent the recovery of the child and to keep Myra from marrying.

A young girl, Andrée Nugent, of English and French parentage, is the "ward in chancery;" her parents have been dead for several years, and she has been the barely tolerated inmate of a Bohemian pension, kept by her hard French aunt in Paris, when unexpectedly she finds herself heiress to a large fortune. Her English half-uncle, Mr. Landon, is the executor of the will, and she is obliged to go to London and live under his roof until she reaches her majority. The Landons are commonplace, respectable, well-to-do people, utterly out of harmony with Andrée's nature. The account of her uncongenial life among them, of her own special friends, her love-story, and Richard Landon's attempts to win her for her fortune, make up a quiet, readable story.

The author of "Poetry as a representative art" and "The genesis of art form" is professor of æsthetics in the College of New Jersey at Princeton. He holds that in art, religion, philosophy, and science the greatest exponents have resisted the influences of traditionalism sufficiently to be moved as much from within as from without, as much by their own feeling and thinking as by those of others who have preceded them and whose works surround them, by the psychologic fully as much as by the historic method. When production is at its best it is original instead of imitative.

The story is in the form of a diary. The heroine, a woman of rank and culture, had been married when a very young girl to a rich, scholarly, sceptical man, many years her senior. In their not unhappy life of intellectual companionship, the old orthodox faith of her youth is completely destroyed. Left a widow at thirty, still beautiful, and yearning for an earthly happiness she has never known, she is brought in contact with a man who had professed to love her before her marriage, but who, when they meet again, is engaged to another woman Lady Bellarmine and Victor Dayrolles love each other and determine to seize their happiness regardless of the claims of others. Margaret's "surrender" finally to the right and to her old belief, in which she is strongly influenced by an Anglican priest, is well told.

Although written in 1877 this book still holds its own as the most complete picture thus far given of ancient Carthage and her two greatest men—Hamilcar Barca and his son Hannibal. The author first gives a general sketch of Carthaginian influence and civilization; then points out the main differences between Carthage and Rome, followed by the account of the great Punic Wars. He has devoted most space to the first war generally treated more briefly by historical writers. At the time of writing Mr. Smith was assistant master at Harrow.

Story, W: Wetmore. A poet's portfolio: later readings. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1894. c. 4+293 p. S. cl., $1. [686

"He and She; or, a poet's portfolio," first appeared in 1883. "She" has now become the poet's wife, and they again engage in conversations on art, literature, and theories of life and death interspersed with many lyrical poems. The little volume ends with a very touching duet, in which "She" clearly shows that "He" is all in all to her regardless of his learning and his talents, and that she is jealous of his thoughts and occupations. Includes discussions on paradise, the creation, Faust, the Arabian Nights, etc.

Dr. Winsor gives an important chapter of the geographical history of the age of American explorations. He narrates the story of the attempts of the French to go into the interior of North America, and shows how by degrees they approximated to an accurate understanding of the problem to be solved. It is the first book devoted to this topic, and Dr. Winsor's profound historical researches, and investigations of the maps depicting the St. Lawrence and vicinity three centuries ago, give very great value and interest to this book.

PICK-UPS.

A DEFINITION OF HALF CALF.—Fresh Young Lady: Don't you love books bound with the leather corners and back? Second ditto: Oh! My! Yes! You mean the kind with "the scrambled-egg sides."

"DOES LITERATURE PAY?" asked the idler. "I should say so," replied the country editor. "Every time we print a poem the author comes in and buys at least twenty copies of the paper to send away."—Washington Star.

THE BEST OF THE BOOK.—He: Which did you like best of my verses? She: Why, the one on the first page! He: Let me see. Which one was that? She: Don't you remember? The one in quotation marks."—Brooklyn Life.

BOOKSELLERS of the far West have not yet become accustomed to uncut leaves. One well-known Boston publisher has just received a letter from a customer to whom he sent a consignment of books, which read very much in this wise: "Your books have been received, but are not, on the whole, satisfactory. The covers and binding are first-class, and the lettering on the backs is very good. But, do you know, while the top edges are gilded, the bottom edges and the front are left without any gilt whatever, besides being very rough, and hardly any of the leaves are cut."—Boston Herald.

A LETTER was recently delivered at the Bible House, New York, which bore the following direction: "Mir Giovanni Diodati, Societa Biblica Americana. Italian. Nonp. 32mo. New York City." The name was not recognized as belonging to any person employed in the building, but could readily be identified as that of an eminent Italian divine who lived three hundred years ago, and whose translation of the Holy Bible into his native tongue was printed in 1607. His name happens to appear on the title-page of an Italian Testament published by the society, and the writer of the letter, who had a copy of that book and desired to obtain the entire Bible, sought to accomplish the purpose by writing to the translator and affixing the society's imprint to make sure of its reaching its destination.—Bible Society Record.

AD ASTRA PER OTIUM.

As I read over old John Dryden's verse,
The rhymes of men like William Blake, and Gay,
The stuff that helped fill Edmund Waller's purse,
And that which placed on Marvell's brow the bay,

It doth appear to me that in those times
The muses quaffed not sparkling wine, but grog,
And that to grow immortal through one's rhymes
Was 'bout as hard as falling off a log.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MARCH 3, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

COPYRIGHT IN MUSIC.

WHILE the public generally has learned to recognize and respect the rights of authors in their literary work, considerable educational work seems still to be needed to impress upon its conscience the same sense respecting the rights of composers to their musical productions. Concerning the latter there seems to be a woful lack of the sense of justice in the minds even of those who might reasonably be expected to know better. So we learn from the Philadelphia Press that the Sunday-School Times, of all authorities, recently advised a clergyman that he had a right to reprint copyright music for the use of his congregation without permission or payment. A music publisher promptly and properly protested. As a matter of course, the minister should have known that he had no more right to appropriate a man's property-right in the music he has composed than the coat on the composer's back.

With regard to music, however, the minds of such as this minister and his adviser seem to operate differently. Time and again Sunday-school superintendents, amateur concert managers and musical societies, in preparing their programmes, wish to reprint certain music; and without compunction they proceed to do it, very often regardless of the fact that the matter they appropriate is copyrighted. And this is done almost daily with impunity, because the occasions have been rare, we might say unknown, on which the offenders have been brought to book.

In England, and on the Continent generally, such offences occur with lesser frequency, no perhaps that there is a much keener recognition in public opinion than here of the rights of brain property, but because publisher and author both are more zealous for their rights. In England, where the performance of popular songs is subject to a stricter royalty than elsewhere, it happens often that repetition is interdicted altogether; and the Press mentions the fact that Tennyson's publishers in England are always quick to interfere with the republication of those of his poems still protected by copyright in school programmes and the like.

The musical public thus far has had little or no cause to complain of lack of courtesy or generosity on the part of either publisher or composer in this country. Whenever permission has been asked the privilege of reprinting or repetition has been freely granted, excepting in rare cases, and then only for good reasons. Such a course has been of little profit to the consenting parties, and seems to have misled those who have benefited by it into the belief that it needed only the wish to possess the composer's property to justify its appropriation without further formality or compensation. It seems therefore not unreasonable that the sufferers are beginning to insist that the public shall recognize the clear principle of copyright law, that not only may the reprint of a musical composition be prevented by law, but that under certain conditions its performance or repetition in public may be protected, and that those who disregard this principle shall be brought to account.

VALUE OF THE GROLIER CLUB PUBLICATIONS.

MEMBERS of the Grolier Club, and the favored few who are able to obtain its publications at first hand, have every reason to be gratified over the evidence of the estimation in which the issues of the club are held. THE CHRISTIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION.

A MOVEMENT has been begun in the Catholic Church which is to be conducted on lines somewhat similar to those under which the Methodist Book Concern is carried on. It has been started by the Rev. James L. Meagher, of Cazenovia, N. Y., who has founded the Christian Press Association, which is composed of priests and lay persons, governed by a constitution approved by Mgr. Satolli, the Apostolic Delegate. The association is recommended by more than forty Catholic prelates.

In the Christian Press, which is the organ of the new association, Father Meagher tells how the work is to be carried on.

"The object of the association," he says, "is to teach truth, to enlighten men, to clear up difficulties, to remove errors, to bring about the spirit of Christian unity, to break down prejudices, to draw churches nearer, to educate our people and to spread the knowledge and the love of Jesus Christ among men. We wish to uphold the Constitution of the United States, to foster the liberties we enjoy, to teach our people to obey law, to love the American Commonwealth, to be good citizens in peace and brave soldiers in war—in a word, the association will teach men how to be contented in this world and how to gain heaven in the next.

"To do this the Christian Press Association proposes to establish a publishing house, write books, translate from other languages, publish the fathers of the Church in English, get priests to write for us, do in this country what the Abbé Migne did in France, and perhaps more, use the modern improvements for the printing and the scattering of Christian literature all over the world."

IN HONOR OF GEORGE W. CHILDS.

IMPRESSIVE services in memory of George William Childs will be held at 2 P.M. on Sunday, March 11, under the auspices of Typographical Union No. 6, in the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, the use of which for the occasion has been given by Henry C. Miner, the manager. Frank Damrosch, leader of the People's Singing Classes, has volunteered to furnish and conduct a chorus of 200 singers gratuitously. A large orchestra is also to be engaged.

John W. Keller, president of the New York Press Club, has accepted an invitation to give an address on the relations of Mr. Childs to the writers of the press, and Congressman Amos J. Cummings, who is a member of "Big Six," is expected to deliver a eulogy. The Rev. Dr. Joseph N. Blanchard, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of St. James, Philadelphia, of which church Mr. Childs was a member, has also been invited to speak.

MRS. JOHN BIDDULPH MARTIN (VICTORIA WOODHULL) VS. THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

THE trial of the case of Mrs. John Biddulph Martin (Victoria Woodhull) against the trustees of the British Museum, the plaintiff charging the trustees with exposing upon the shelves of their library books containing statements libelling her character, was concluded February 27. The jury brought in a verdict awarding Mrs. Martin £1 damages, but the court reserved judgment pending argument by counsel upon points arising from the jury's answers.

OBITUARY NOTES.

NORMAN L. MUNRO, the publisher of the New York Family Story Paper, etc., died on the evening of February 24, at the Hoffman House, New York City, from the effects of an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Munro was born in 1844, in the small town of Millbrook, Pictou County, Nova Scotia. At the age of twenty-five he left his father's farm and came to New York. For two years he was employed in a very subordinate position in the printing and publishing office of his brother, George Munro. By rigid economy and the strictest self-denial he accumulated a sum of money which in 1873 he invested in the New York Family Story Paper. The first issue of that paper was sent out on the fateful black Friday, September 18, 1873, from a dingy little office at 163 William Street. The paper was an unpretentious sheet, but it was not long before it began to attract attention, and in less than two years the business grew so that it was moved to 28 and 30 Beekman Street. This building was burned in 1876, and it was on this occasion that the energy which brought Mr. Munro from poverty to prosperity was called into play. Several other publications—Munro's Library, and Munro's Pocket Magazine—had been started by Mr. Munro, and at the time of the fire the editions were ready for distribution by the news companies. The papers were nearly all destroyed. Mr. Munro at once went to work to get out a second edition. Some of the papers had been saved, and, with the aid of any compositors he could find at the time, he had a new edition ready for the news companies on time. After the fire the business was moved to the building in Vandewater Street which was erected by Mr. Munro. In 1893 the upper part of this building was destroyed by fire, the damage being about $60,000. Mr. Munro's business grew steadily until it was one of the largest publishing houses in the city. The circulation of the Family Story Paper, it is estimated, is about 300,000 a week.

DR. W: F: POOLE, one of the best-known librarians in the country and head of the Newberry Library, Chicago, died at his home in Evanston, Ill., on the 1st inst., aged 72 years. Dr. Poole was born in Salem, Mass., December 24, 1821. In 1851 he became assistant librarian of the Boston Athenæum and in the next year librarian of the Boston Mercantile. From 1856 to 1869 he was librarian of the Boston Athenæum. On leaving the Athenæum he was occupied as library expert in the organization of a number of libraries including the Cincinnati and Chicago Public Libraries. In 1887 he was elected librarian of the Newberry Library in the organization of which he overtaxed his strength. Dr. Poole was a frequent contributor to the leading magazines on library matters and historical subjects In 1853 he published the first edition of his admirable "Index to Periodical Literature," which under the editorship of W. I. Fletcher was brought down to 1883 in a third edition, and has been continued since that time in five yearly supplements to 1892 and in the "Annual Literary Index" to the end of 1893.

PROF. CARL WILHELM KNUDSEN, a well-known educator, died in South Norwalk, Conn., February 27, aged 76 years. Prof. Knudsen was deeply interested in all educational matters, and he was widely known as an advocate of reformed spelling. The system of amended spelling which he devised was simpler and less revolutionary than other proposed systems of phonetic spelling. He published a pronouncing dictionary in 1886, and also other educational books and pamphlets in the interest of spelling reform.

ALEXANDER ISAAC COTHEAL, author of "A Sketch of the Language of the Musquito Indian," etc., died in New York City February 25, aged 90 years.

STEELE MACKAYE, the author of "Haze Kirke" and other plays, and disciple of Delsarte, died suddenly in California, aged fifty years.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

QUILLER-COUCH is about to publish a short novel, entitled "The Bishop of Eucalyptus."

ZOLA has been again defeated in his endeavors to become an Academician—the successful candidate being José Maria de Heredia.

"SORROW AND SONG" is to be the title of a new book of essays by Mr. Coulson Kernahan, of "Dead Man's Diary" and "Strange Sins" fame.

WILLIAM HENRY BISHOP has been writing a novelette dealing with the passion for gambling. Under the title of "A Pound of Cure, a story of Monte Carlo," it is to be published in Scribner's Magazine.

IT is understood that the real name of "Iota," the authoress of the much-talked-of "Yellow Aster," recently issued in London by Hutchinson & Co., is Mrs. Caffyn, the Irish wife of a returned Australian doctor.

JOSEPH PENNELL is preparing for Macmillan & Co. a volume on "Modern Book Illustrations." It is to be included in the ex-Libris Series. Walter Crane's volume, "The Decorative Illustration of Books," is also in press.

OWEN WISTER, the author of "How Lin McLean Went East," and other stories, has been spending the late autumn and early winter in Arizona collecting material for a new series of Western tales, which will appear during the year in Harper's.

GEORGE A. HENTY has written for boys a serial story of adventure with blacks and bushrangers in New Zealand, entitled "A Hut in the Bush." The hero is a friendless boy who, nevertheless, does some remarkable things for himself and others.

W. E. HENLEY has retired from the editorship of The National Observer in favor of Frank Harris, the editor of The Fortnightly, a well-known and successful journalist. The new editor of Black and White is Mr. Pinker, who has long been in the office.

ANDREW LANG is about to publish a new volume of poems under the title of "Ban aud Arrière Ban: a rally of fugitive rhymes." He has also in preparation a book of studies in psychical phenomena and human credulity. This is to be called "The Cock Lane Ghost and Common Sense."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

LORENZ & Co., Dayton, Ohio, have begun to issue a new monthly called The Choir Leader, edited by E. S. Lorenz, which will be given up entirely to music for the choir, anthems, quartets, trios, solos, and other concerted sacred music with occasional pieces for male or ladies' chorus. Every effort will be made to secure the widest range of successful authors." The music will never go beyond the bounds of moderate difficulty. Every number will give sixteen pages of music.

THE first number of a newspaper for the makers of newspapers has appeared. Its name, The Fourth Estate, is borrowed from the words of Edmund Burke, who described the great profession of journalism as "the fourth estate more powerful than any of the other three." The new journal will be both original and eclectic, will avoid long articles, and endeavor to extract from the innumerable papers it will naturally command the meat of what is being written and said about things that concern the newspaper world. Descriptions of new methods, new processes, new machinery, and new buildings will be given with illustrations, and portraits of newspaper men are to be a prominent feature. A specialty will be made of tables presenting in a thoroughly systemitized manner the advertising rates of hundreds of the daily and weekly papers and magazines. The first issue contains the history of The Evening Post. Published at 206 Broadway.

BUSINESS NOTES.

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.—C. H. Weaver & Co. have purchased the stock of books and stationery of E. A. Douglass, and will continue the business.

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.—E. A. Douglass, bookseller, has sold out.

HUDSON, MICH.—D. H. Patterson has bought the Wood book-store.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—T. O. Cramer opened a book and stationery store on February 1 at No. 1006 Main Street. Mr. Cramer occupies the whole building, which is 21 feet front by 130 feet deep, and has four floors. Mr. Cramer started in business at 1321 Grand Avenue in November, 1884, his stock being almost entirely news and periodicals. He gradually drifted into books, new and second-hand, then into school supplies of all kinds. He was the first to get the trade in second-hand school-books started. He yet owns the Grand Avenue store, which has been placed in charge of his brother, E. E. Cramer. T. I. Humble, formerly of the Hyde & Humble Stationery Company, of Wichita, Kan., will look after the stationery department of the Main Street store.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—The firm of Haygood & Fowler has been dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. W. W. Haygood, of the old firm, succeeds, and will conduct a regular book and stationery business.

NEW YORK CITY.—The corporation Brentano's, publishers, booksellers, and stationers, has been succeeded by a copartnership under the same style, composed of Messrs. August, Arthur, and Simon Brentano.

OGDEN, UTAH.—W. S. Stone succeeds F. L. Horspool, bookseller.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

PROF. A. C. TRUE, of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, is compiling an "Index of Experiment Station Literature." His task is well under way, some three thousand cards having been printed, covering the publications of 1890 and 1891. The earlier publications are now in hand; when these are finished the index will be brought up to date. The titles are being arranged on a decimal system. The classification will comprise: 1, General sciences—physics, chemistry, mineralogy, geology, botany, fermentation, bacteriology, animal physiology, zoölogy, meteorology, and climatology. 2, Air and water. 3, Soils. 4, Fertilizers. 5, Plants. 6, Foods. 7, Animals. 8, Entomology. 9, Dairying. 10, Technology. 11, Agricultural engineering. 12, Statistics. 13. Miscellaneous.

C. F. LIBBIE & Co., Boston, have issued an index to the five parts of the Brinley Library auction catalogue, prepared by W. I. Fletcher, librarian of the Amherst College Library. It comprises eighty pages and is sold for $5. The several parts of the library were sold originally for $1 each, but a complete set, with priced lists of each part and this index, is now valued by dealers at $25.

HAIGHT & Co., Toronto, Canada, will publish shortly the first part of "The Canadian Catalogue of Books." The catalogue will be published in parts at intervals, it is hoped, of about four months from the date of the first issue.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

W. & R. CHAMBERS announce that they have in the press a "Gazetteer of the World, Topographical, Statistical, and Historical."

ELLIOT STOCK will publish immediately, uniform with the Book Lover's Library, "First Editions of American Authors: a manual for book-lovers," edited by H. Stuart Stone.

CHAPMAN & HALL, London, have in press an edition in two volumes of Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor's novel, "An American Peeress." The American publishers, A. C. McClurg & Co., have already in press a second edition of the book.

WILLIAM HEINEMANN will publish shortly a second novel by Miss Laurence Alma Tadema, whose first book, "Love's Martyr," enjoyed a considerable success six or seven years ago, and who has published nothing since. It is entitled "The Wings of Icarus."

THE German-Austrian booksellers have combined to protest against the concession granted by the government to the Viennese Lehrerhausverein for the establishment of a bookselling business, to include the publication of educational books and works on art, and the retail sale of new and second-hand books and of educational appliances.

T. FISHER UNWIN will publish immediately, in connection with the Irish Literary Society, a volume of addresses under the title of "The Revival of Irish Literature." These will include two lectures by Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, delivered within the last two years; one by Mr. George Sigerson, on "Irish Literature: its origin and environment;" and one by Dr. Douglas Hyde, on "The Necessity for de-Anglicizing Ireland."

THE market for the more expensive editions of Mr. Ruskin's books, according to the London Literary World, has not been brisk of late, the reason being, collectors say, too frequent reissues But that the public buy Ruskins—other than the costly editions—is clear from his publisher's statement to the Ruskin Society. "Unto this Last" sells at the rate of about 1700 copies a year, and just now there is a great run on "Munera Pulveris."

WHITTAKER & Co., London, have just issued a new work by Mr. Leland, bearing upon his favorite subject, "Practical Education." It is a manual of elementary metal-work, including bent iron, repoussé, cut metal, and easy silver-work, written primarily for manual training classes in elementary and preparatory schools, but which will probably be found interesting to any one who has a mechanical bent. Mr. Karl Krall, of Messrs. Barkentin & Krall, of Regent Street, London, has revised the work while passing through the press.

THE A. J. JOHNSON Co., of 11 Great Jones Street, New York, is the name of a new corporation which has assumed the business of the late firm of A. J. Johnson & Co. D. Appleton & Co. have a controlling interest in the new concern, and in that have the supervision of the new edition of "Johnson's Universal Cyclopædia," under the general editorship of Dr. Charles K. Adams, of the University of Wisconsin, of which three volumes are already printed, and the fourth may be expected next month. The work will be completed in eight octavo volumes during the

The Rudolph Indexer Book.

(Patented in the United States and all Foreign Countries.)

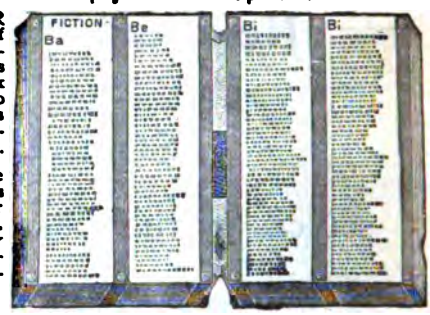
Method of Indexing is the same as that employed in the Rudolph Continuous Indexer.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER BOOK consists of a number of card-holders of heavy card-board with one or two columns on both sides. On the back edge of each card-holder are two double hinges by which means other card-holders may be flexibly connected or disconnected.

Independent book-covers are furnished, and a book may thus be formed of one card-holder and later increased as desired. If the book becomes too bulky it may be separated and by adding covers two or more independent books formed.



The Rudolph Indexer Case.

(Patented in the United States and all Foreign Countries.)

Method of Indexing is the same as that employed in the Rudolph Continuous Indexer.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER CASE consists of a series of card-holders placed on their edges in a drawer, and they may be turned as the pages of a book, exhibiting at each view 272 single-line entries.

We furnish the INDEXER CASE in one, two, four, six and eight drawers.

The capacity of each drawer is thirty card-holders. As both sides of the card-holders are used it is equal to 8160 single-line entries.

The Rudolph Card Cutter.

(Patent Pending.)

This invention is for the purpose of cutting the entries or cards for insertion in the card-holders, but can also be used for many other purposes.

It is very important that all the slips to be inserted in the card-holders be cut at perfect right angles, in order that each entry will fit exactly to the others.

An unnecessary margin of only 1-32d of an inch on the top and 1-32d of an inch on the bottom of each entry will amount to 3⅛th inches of waste space on each card-holder.

The cutter will cut cardboard where spacing between the printed or written lines is 1-64th of an inch.

THE

(FRONT VIEW, SHOWING GLASS LID RAISED.)

THE MOST PERFECT INDEXER.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER SYSTEM possesses many advantages which recommend it to Publishers and Booksellers—in fact, to any one who has occasion to use lists of books, names or samples of goods, photographs, etc.

It is entirely flexible, allowing any number of entries to be placed in the INDEXER at any point.

It presents to the eye at one time as many entries as six pages of the American Catalogue.

Entries are protected from being soiled by exposure or handling.

Economy of space and economy of expenditure of both time and money.

The INDEXER stands 42 inches high and is 20 inches wide by 30 inches broad.

We shall be pleased to give further information and list of testimonials from leading librarians.

HAVE JUST ISSUED:

Bill Nye's History of the United States.

With 150 Illustrations by F. Opper. 12mo, cloth, extra, $2.00.

Though Mr. Nye has printed and sold many books compiled from his letters published in newspapers, this volume is entirely new and original, none of its contents having previously appeared. Mr. Nye has followed the actual history of the discovery and growth of the Republic, with his gentle, satirical commentaries thrown in without extra charge. He has taken out all the dry and undesirable husks of history and told in his own language the story of a nation's birth and growth. The artist has also followed the spirit of the author, and illuminated the text with the lightness of touch and humorous grace peculiar to the work of Mr. Opper. The book is the most careful and meritorious piece of literary work ever done by this popular author. It is a rare combination of information and entertainment.

History of the Consulate and the Empire of France.

VOLUME VII.

By L. A. THIERS, Ex-Prime Minister of France. Translated from the French, with the sanction of the author, by D. Forbes Campbell. An entirely new edition, printed from new type, and illustrated with steel plates printed from the French originals. To be completed in twelve octavo volumes. Cloth, $3.00 per volume.

A GENTLEMAN OF FRANCE.

Being the Memoirs of Gaston de Bonne, Sieur de Marsac.

BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN, author of "The House of the Wolf," etc.

With Frontispiece and Vignette by H. J. Ford. 12mo, cloth ornamental, $1.25.

"A romance after the style of Dumas the elder, and well worthy of being read by those who can enjoy stirring adventures told in true romantic fashion. . . . The great personages of the time—Henry III. of Valois, Henry IV., Rosny, Rambouillet, Turenne—are brought in skilfully, and the tragic and varied history of the time forms a splendid frame in which to set the picture of Marsac's love and courage . . . the troublous days are well described and the interest is genuine and lasting, for up to the very end the author manages effects which impel the reader to go on with renewed curiosity."—The Nation.

"A genuine and admirable piece of work. . . . The reader will not turn many pages before he finds himself in the grasp of a writer who holds his attention to the very last moment of the story. The spirit of adventure pervades the whole from beginning to end. . . . It may be said that the narration is a delightful love-story. The interest of the reader is constantly excited by the development of unexpected turns in the relation of the principal lovers. The romance lies against a background of history truly painted. . . . The descriptions of the court life of the period and of the factional strifes, divisions, hatreds of the age, are fine. . . . This story of those times is worthy of a very high place among historical novels of recent years."—Public Opinion.

"Bold, strong, dashing, it is one of the best we have read for many years. We sat down for a cursory perusal, and ended by reading it delightedly through. . . . Mr. Weyman has much of the vigor and rush of incident of Dr. Conan Doyle, and this book ranks worthily beside 'The White Company.' . . . We very cordially recommend this book to the jaded novel-reader who cares for manly actions more than for morbid introspection."—The Churchman.

"The book is not only good literature, it is a 'rattling good story,' instinct with the spirit of true adventure and stirring emotion. Of love and peril, intrigue and fighting, there is plenty, and many scenes could not have been bettered. In all his adventures, and they are many, Marsac acts as befits his epoch and his own modest yet gallant personality. Well-known historical figures emerge in telling fashion under Mr. Weyman's discriminating and fascinating touch."—Athenæum.

"I cannot fancy any reader, old or young, not sharing with doughty Crillon his admiration for M. de Marsac, who, though no swashbuckler, has a sword that leaps from its scabbard at the breath of insult. . . . There are several historical personages in the novel; there is, of course, a heroine, of great beauty and enterprise; but that true 'Gentleman of France,' M. de Marsac, with his perseverance and valor, dominates them all."—Mr. JAMES PAYN in the Illustrated London News.

(3) Author-, title-, and subject-index to same in one alphabet.
(4) Publishers' annual lists for 1893.

The edition is limited, and to secure copies orders should be sent at once. The price is $3.50 half leather; $3.00 in sheets.

The Annual Catalogue for 1886 and 1887 is now out of print. But few copies of the Annual Catalogue for 1888, 1889, 1890 and 1891 are on hand.

We also supply the English Catalogue for 1893, price $1.50, paper; the Annual American and English Catalogues, 1892, can be had in one volume, half leather, $5.00.

...1893...

INCLUDING PERIODICALS, AMERICAN AND ENGLISH, ESSAYS, BOOK-CHAPTERS, ETC., SPECIAL BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND NECROLOGY OF AUTHORS.

EDITED BY W. I. FLETCHER and R. R. BOWKER,

With the co-operation of members of the American Library Association and of the Library Journal staff.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 complements the "Annual American Catalogue" of books published in 1893 by indexing (1) articles in periodicals published in 1893; (2) essays and book-chapters in composite books of 1893; (3) authors of periodical articles and essays; (4) special bibliographies of 1893; (5) authors deceased in 1893. The two volumes together make a complete record of the literary product of the year.

The new volume includes the features of the "Co-operative Index to Periodicals," originally a monthly supplement to the Library Journal, then extended into a quarterly in an enlarged form, and later issued as an annual volume.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 forms the second supplement both to the new five-yearly volume (1887–1891) of Poole's Index to Periodical Literature and to the new A. L. A. Index to essays and book-chapters of Mr. Fletcher.

The new volume will more than fulfil the opinion as to the Co-operative Index expressed in the following extract:

"To the literary worker its value can hardly be over-estimated; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field. to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time."—Providence Press.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING CO. have just ready the much-discussed series of articles on "The Experimental Novel," by Émile Zola, translated by Belle M. Sherman, who has also added a number of other essays by the author of the "Rougon Macquart" series; Tolstoi's latest book, "'The Kingdom of God is Within You,' Christianity not as a mystic religion but as a new theory of life," translated from the Russian by Constance Garnett; and "'Lisbeth," a new novel by Leslie Keith, author of "The Chilcotes," etc.

T. Y. CROWELL & CO. announce for immediate "The Evidence of Salvation, or, the direct witness of the spirit," by the Rev. Dr. Everett S. Stackpole. Dr. Stackpole was first led to think of the importance of this subject while he was teaching in a theological school in Italy, and he embodied his views in a tract, written in Italian. The aim of this little manual is "to show how, through knowledge of the truth, souls may be saved from presumption, credulity, despondency, unsatisfied longing, despair, and unbelief."

STONE & KIMBALL, of Chicago and Cambridge, have in preparation a definitive edition of the writings of Edgar Allan Poe, edited by Edmund Clarence Stedman and George Edward Woodberry. It will be complete in ten volumes, illustrated with portraits, fac-similes, and other illustrations, printed on specially made paper. Hugh McCulloch, Jr., a member of the English department of Harvard University, is about to publish with Messrs. Stone & Kimball a collection of his poems, under the title of "The Quest of Heracles." The book will have a title-page from a design by Pierre la Rose, another Harvard man.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO. will shortly issue "Travels in a Tree-Top," by Rev. Charles C. Abbott, the success of whose "Recent Rambles" is a guarantee of many readers for any new work; "Bill Nye's History of the United States," with illustrations by Opper; and two medical works, one the 17th edition of the "New United States Dispensatory;" the other a new volume entitled "Pain," by J. Leonard Corning. They also announce "A Man of To-Day," a new copyright novel by Helen Mathers; "The Mystery of the Patrician Club," by Albert D. Vandam, the author of that clever book, "An Englishman in Paris;" and "The Queen of Love," by S. Baring-Gould.

LAIRD & LEE have almost ready the book William T. Stead, editor of the Review of Reviews, has written for America, under the rather sensational title—"If Christ Came to Chicago." Mr. Stead came to the World's Fair intending to stay three weeks, but stayed four months, and made a careful study of the great city at one of the most interesting periods of its history. Mr. Stead thinks Chicago interests England more than New York, Boston, or Washington, therefore he lays his scene there, although the facts and problems he describes are of universal interest in large cities. The book has been a labor of love to Mr. Stead, and will no doubt find a large reading public awaiting its scathing criticisms on modern "money-changers."

D. APPLETON & CO. have in active preparation the fourth volume of McMaster's "History of the People of the United States." It opens with the War of 1812 and ends with the inauguration of Jackson, covering the history of finance after 1814, the rise of manufacturing industries, Mormonism, the movement of population westward, and many other questions raised by the mental fermentation of the time. Another important historical work in preparation is entitled "The United States of America," which will be made up of careful studies on the natural resources, industries, commerce, education, literature, and the arts, written by distinguished specialists, and brought together under the careful editorship of Prof. N. S. Shaler. The work

Cobban, J. Maclaren. A soldier and a gentleman. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1894.] c. '91. 2-211 p. D. cl., $1. [705

The basis of the plot is the attempt to substitute one man for another in order to fulfil the conditions of a will. George Ferrers, an ex-guardsman and a bankrupt in pocket, is tempted, through his poverty, to personate another man for a few weeks, in what is represented to him to be an innocent scheme. This scheme is quite ingenious, and promises to succeed, but Ferrers falls in love with the heroine, learns the true condition of things, and revolts. Scenes and characters are English. Norris, W. E. The Countess Radna: a novel. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1894.] c. '93. 405 p. D. (Belmore ser., no. 27.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c. [736

The story of an unhappy marriage. Douglas Colborne, a young Englishman of some means and of good social position, meets the Countess Radna in Paris, and loses his heart to her. The countess is an Austrian, of almost royal rank; is young, beautiful, enormously wealthy, and quite independent; she is spoilt and capricious, and after agreeing to marry Douglas finds the quiet English home life he asks her to lead for part of the year monotonous and unbearable. In a short time they are separated; the countess returning to Paris, Douglas remaining at his home. Douglas' life is the principal theme, although the countess' strange household and odd friends are carefully described.

The heroine is a not very young woman, devoted to art, who believes in theosophy and hates housekeeping; the hero is her brother-in-law, a widower with one child, who is the pastor of a fashionable orthodox church. They love each other, but the woman refuses to marry, on the plea that she will lose her independence, and that she is unsuited to be a minister's wife. The various chapters give their many conversations on the subject, her final consent and how it is obtained, the history of their marriage and its results.

The little Scotch fishing town of Kirkcaldy is the home of the Oliphants, the family whose sombre history is recorded. The hereditary curse of their house is that the sons shall be libertines, bringing sorrow and early death to their womenkind; it has been unbroken for generations, is fulfilled in the life of Douglas Oliphant, the eldest son, and ceases only with the end of the family line. Margrédel is the illegitimate daughter of Douglas Oliphant, whose existence is unknown to her father and who is brought up in Kirkcaldy by her French uncle in ignorance of her birth. Her affection for pretty Jean Oliphant, subsequent intimacy with the family, and the discovery of her relationship, are steps to the final tragedy of the Oliphants. The description of Scotch village life in the early days of the century is graphic, and the Kirkcaldy folk are pictured with humor and realism.

Tolstoi's former volume, published in this country under the title "What I believe," and also as "My religion," evoked many essays containing much information and a series of criticisms on the principles laid down in the book. This material and his growing conviction that the "Sermon on the Mount" contains all the religion needed to reform the world the author ex-pounds in the light of the historical events of recent years. The doctrine of non-resistance is the keynote. Standing armies kept by Christian nations Tolstoi claims stamp the Christianity of the hour as a farcical hypocrisy.

Gustave Sandow, a German journalist, plays the part of lover to an American heiress, in order to gain a foothold for his unknown niece in her own father's house. His way of encompassing his purpose brings about some interesting scenes, a romantic love-story, and an unexpected conclusion. There are two other stories included—one is a sensational love-story; the other is a tale of one of the many early American discoverers.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will be the American agents of Bibliographica, the new London quarterly magazine of book-lore, recently noticed in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. After the first issue, only a limited edition of the periodical will be published.

The Literary Era, the monthly journal published by Porter & Coates, of Philadelphia, has begun to print a list of American genealogies that have been issued in book form. In the number for March nearly three pages are taken up with the letter A. The list will be continued in each succeeding number.

THE GROLIER CLUB, New York, has issued a "Chronological Hand-List of Various Editions of the Complete Angler," by Izaak Walton and Charles Cotton, with a supplement embracing other writings of Walton and Cotton, etc., 1593–1893. The list is a souvenir of the exhibition, designed to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the birth of Walton, held at the Grolier Club December 9, 1893. The exhibition included examples of every important edition of "The Complete Angler" from the first, published in 1653, to the last, which is scarcely dry from the press. (26 p. 16°, pap.)

THE CHANNING CLUB, of Boston, through their secretary, W. M. McInnes, 53 State Street, Boston, has issued a second catalogue of "Books for Boys." It is divided into three classes—one of interesting stories; one of works of history, biography, travel, science, etc.; and one of books which, through the moral principles taught, are especially suited for Sunday-schools. No book has been rejected because of doctrinal teaching, as the list is intended for all denominations; but wherever such teaching is prominent the fact is noted. Besides the necessary items of publisher and price, each title is followed by a summary of the story, or a description of the scope of the work if in the second class, thereby enabling the reader to choose intelligently. (26 p. 24°, pap., to be had on application by enclosing postage.)

Repertoire des Ventes is the title of a new journal published from No. 24 Boulevard Poissonnière, Paris. It is edited by Pierre Dauze, and divided into three sections, which may be subscribed for separately or together. Part 1 is entitled Gazette des Ventes, and will contain news of the week regarding auction sales of books, autographs, pictures, and plates, at home and abroad, with prices for the more important works. Part 2, Les Pris d'Adjudication, will be a complete price-list of Parisian auction sales, and will appear as often as part 1. Part 3, Table Alphabétique des noms d'auteurs (ou d'ouvrages anonymes) de livres, autographes, gravures, estampes et tableaux, will give for books short titles, with name of publisher or printer, size, binding, and value of all bids above 10 fr.; for autographs the name of the purchaser if possible, and all bids over 5 fr.; for engravings and etchings the names of artists and engravers, and all bids over 15 fr.; for pictures, drawings, and water-colors, the subject, size, and price for all above 50 fr. All prices will be given in part 2, so that the value of sales not reaching the figures demanded for part 3 may be looked up elsewhere. Parts 1 and 2 will appear weekly from November to May, fortnightly in June and October, and once a month during July, August, and September. Part 3 will appear in monthly instalments during July, August, and September. When ordered separately, part 1 costs 10 fr.; part 2, 25 fr.; part 3, 28 fr. per year. Together, 36 fr., 60 fr., or 80 fr., according to the paper on which it is printed.

THE PROFESSION OF BOOKSELLING.

THE CIRCULATING LIBRARY.—I.

THE bookseller's circulating library has not inaptly been dubbed the "step-child of the book trade." Too often is this auxiliary treated as such, and entrusted to the tender mercies of an apprentice, or errand-boy, who is not fitted to meet the requirements made by the borrower of the one in charge of this department. Either the circulating library throws off a profit to the bookseller, or it does not. If the latter, it has no reason to exist; if the former, it must be looked after by the owner himself, or by an assistant competent in every respect. But upon whomsoever this duty devolves he must be alive to the demands made upon his stock; be acquainted with the tastes of his borrowers; have a system by which he may wait upon the subscribers without loss of time; know when books are out, who has them, and when they are due; where books in good editions are to be had cheap; when to rebind books; what to discard; how to keep his accounts straight, and a number of other things needful to make the most out of even the smallest stock of books kept for such a purpose.

While we do not pretend to be able to prescribe set rules and directions to guide the librarian in these matters, we will attempt to give a few hints which, together with such experience as he will in time accumulate, will help him over the rough places.

In the first place we will consider the location of the library. Concerning this there seems to be a reasonable difference of opinion. Most booksellers locate their circulating departments in the front of the store. This we consider a mistake for two important reasons: first, because the library in such a position takes up room which the bookseller should be able to utilize to better advantage in displaying his stock; secondly, because it is apt to keep the borrowers from coming directly into the store, and the bookseller therefore loses the opportunity for which he really keeps his circulating department—namely, to tempt his customers to buy what he may have displayed. We think, therefore, that the plan of keeping the library in the rear portion of the store decidedly the better, and more profitable from every point of view. Good light is necessary. If it cannot be had naturally, gas or electric light must be liberally provided.

The selection of books of course depends much upon the particular locality in which the bookseller resides. But wherever the library may be established it will be found necessary to begin with a large proportion of fiction. Probably five hundred books in all would be enough to serve as a foundation. The choice of this must be catholic in the largest sense of the word. Mrs. Southworth and George Eliot, Mrs. Ann S. Stephens and Mrs. Humphry Ward, Mary J. Holmes and Margaret Deland, Mayne Reid and W. D. Howells, E. P. Roe and Marion Crawford—the most commonplace, as well as the more refined authors, will probably be obliged to rest "cheek by jowl" on the shelves. As we have said at the beginning, much will depend upon the character of the community. If the library be started in a manufacturing community, and the borrowers be largely factory hands, the girls will very likely call for the old stand-bys, such as Bertha M. Clay, May Agnes Fleming, and writers of their class, while the boys will clamor for detective stories of the Pinkerton stripe, and works in that class. Even here the better books should not be overlooked. History and biography as well as books of a scientific nature should be considered, and put on the shelves when ever so slight a demand for them occurs. Indeed, if the librarian is alive to his opportunities he will soon find that he is in a position to color and direct the reading of his patrons to a not inconsiderable extent. A borrower will often present himself who is unable to decide what book to take next. Here is the librarian's opportunity. Let the book be a shade better than those that have been drawn by this borrower before. Let a word of recommendation, or a hint that will excite the interest or curiosity of the reader, go with it, and the chances are the new lead will be followed and a still higher grade be demanded in time. If the reader be a boy or young man who has gorged himself with trash, direct his reading to something better—a historical novel perhaps, or, better still, to a book affecting his trade. Rebuffs will occur, advice will be resented, but with tact good can be done, in fact has been accomplished by the librarian of an insignificant circulating library.

BOOK-LOVERS OF NEW YORK.

Octave Uzanne in the "Book-Lover's Almanac" for 1894.

OCTAVE UZANNE, one of the best authorities that book-lovers know on subjects specially interesting to book-lovers, a pupil of Paul Lacroix in bibliography, editor of the most beautiful books of contemporary France, author of several valuable manuals, and president of the Société des Bibliophiles Contemporains, gives the following opinion on the book-lovers of New York in an essay entitled "Bibliophiles et Biblioscopes," which appears in French in the "Book-Lover's Almanac" for 1894, published by Duprat & Co., of New York. The following is a synopsis of his essay:

"If something could abate the passion for books it would be philosophic observation of bibliomania, of the vanity which lurks in this religion which has, like all religions, its false priests.

"It is curious to observe that the book-lover has been entirely transformed in twenty years. The ancient type of enlightened, judicious amateur is now disappearing. At Paris his species is almost lost, and those who remain live solitary, unknown, forgotten, among the treasures which they have accumulated.

"The modern book-lover has none of the sedentary features of fifty years ago. He was then represented as a very old man, thin, dry as a mummy, living in his book-shop like a wolf in in his den.

"This book-lover of other times was a comedy type, unsympathetic with the masses. Molière or Beaumarchais might have created, under the title of 'The Book-Lover,' a painting of manners not less complete than the 'Barbier de Seville.'

"He became human only at the end of the Empire. Asselineau contributed enormously to the improvement of bibliography. He dared to have regard for the present. What do you say of Bourdin, Curmer, Hetzel, and Perrotin? These editors worked for the public. They published books with a large circulation; they thought nothing of book-lovers, for these collected in their libraries only ancient books, caring nothing for the productions of their time. The new book-lover did not appear until 1872 or 1873.

"The contemporaneous book-lover who made the wealth of Morgand and Fatout, Rouquette, Conquet, and others, the terrible buyer of the editions of Jouaust, Lemerre, Ruveyre—is he to be really regarded as a serious book-lover, and not as a book-viewer?

"The second term pleases me better. The book-viewer is the false priest in the religion of books. He buys a beautiful edition, has it bound by a fashionable maker, and preserves it intact and untouched in his library, like an art object in a show-case.

"At the present hour, among one hundred Parisian book-lovers one must count about ninety book-viewers. Among those who compose the cream of bibliomania are literary men of the first rank, amateurs of curiosity, dilettante, but this world is extremely restricted. The Duc d'Aumale, Lignerolles, and Spoelberch de Lovenjoul are exceptions.

"The book-viewers are legion; they are victims of fashion, of opinion, and their taste is easily guided. The booksellers play with it easily.

"Most Parisians have books for show. In the provinces it is different. The provincial book-lovers know prints, are experts in beautiful typography; they are truly traditional French book-lovers. In England, in Germany, and in Switzerland book-viewing is exceptional. In my numerous travels I have always been impressed by the fact that French writers are more and better read in foreign cities than in their own. At London, at Munich, at Geneva, at Brussels, or at Berlin, I have spent many happy evenings in the enveloping intimacy of distinguished book-lovers. I have asked myself if our intellectual life was not more brilliant at a distance than at home. At New York, at Philadelphia, at Boston, during my recent and too hasty trip in America, these ideas were only made more intense. It is not that I expected unsophisticated people in this new world, which our old civilization persists in judging with a protective air, but I must own that despite my lack of prejudice I expected to find only indifference where I have discovered perfection in taste and judgment.

"They are not book-viewers, these intelligent amateurs, who have done me the honors of their splendid collections. These grand colleagues of the Bibliophiles Contemporains may flatter themselves that they have dazzled their president. I found there not only old acquaintances, but the best works of the present time, in extraordinary states, and bindings conceived in accordance with the exact principles which I had once enunciated.

"Whereas it takes twenty years for an idea to make its way in our country, there it is acclaimed at once. These dear trans-Atlantic colleagues are not partisans of the unbound books; they know that bibliomania exacts binding, that the taste for books must be complete.

"At Paris the bookseller does not preach the art of bookbinding. He rather turns his client away from it in the hope of selling more books to him. He thinks, as a bookseller, that all the money which goes to the bookbinder is taken from his cash-box. His energy would ruin the French art of bookbinding if it were not for the Americans.

"It is not in Paris that one may find at present the richest collections of books. It is at Chantilly, at London, and at New York. I have seen them as a book-viewer. I hope to see them again as a book-lover."

INFLUENCE OF PUBLISHERS ON LITERATURE.

"THE Influence of Publishers on Literature and Literary Productions" was the subject of an address delivered recently by the Commercienrath Eugen Marx at a meeting of the Lower Austrian Technical Union.

"The publisher is a manufacturer," he said, "in so far as he receives the work of an author's pen and makes a book of it; but he also takes the initiative when he feels that there is some want in the book world which needs satisfying. There it is that the publisher shows his skill in having his eyes and ears always open to the requirements and tendencies of the time. We all know that there are fashions in literature as well as in dress, and that not only in belles-lettres but also in the domain of science. Tales of chivalry and ghost stories have had their day, and family romance is no longer acceptable; and now we have romances of natural history as well as history, and lastly those novels which deal with contemporary, social, and political questions and events. Change reigns in all things. A new discovery is made, the public craves for information; and sensational medical pamphlets alarm the world. . . . The relations between author and publisher are sometimes strained. But genuine writers always find capable publishers and receive good pay. . . . But a book is, after all, a peculiar commodity; for it has no value until it is sold. The value of the raw material of which a book is composed sinks the more in the process of making it. The unprinted sheets may be used as waste paper for the mill; but in proportion as it becomes a book, and however handsomely it be produced, so it lessens in material value if it be not salable as a literary production. Then the only person who can make use of it is the butterman."

This sad end of so many literary offspring is often ascribed to the cruelty of the publisher or neglect of the reading public.

OBITUARY NOTES.

LOUIS ETIENNE DUSSIEUX, historian and geographer, died in Paris February 24, aged 79 years.

JOHN HENRY CORNELL, author of a "Primer of Modern Musical Tonality" and other works on music, died in New York City on the 1st inst., aged 66 years.

ALFRED DUMESNIL, a well-known French writer, died in Paris on the 2d inst., aged 73 years. His best-known work is "La Foi Nouvelle Cherchée dans l'Art."

CHARLES FAUVETY, the philosopher who, in collaboration with Proudhon, founded in 1848 the revolutionary journals Le Peuple and La Voix du Peuple, died in Asnières, France, February 24, aged 81 years.

DR. WILLIAM H. BURK, for a number of years an associate editor of The Philadelphia Public Ledger, died suddenly at his home in Philadelphia on the 3d inst., aged 36 years. Dr. Burk was engaged in writing a work on "The Life of George W. Childs."

JAMES MONTGOMERY BAILEY, widely known as the "Danbury Newsman," died in Danbury, Conn., on the 4th inst., aged 53 years. After the close of the war he purchased the Danbury Times, which he conducted until he acquired the Danbury Jeffersonian in 1870. The two papers he consolidated under the name of the Danbury News. His quaint and original humor soon made him and his paper famous. He published several humorous books—"Life in Danbury," "England from a Back Window," etc.—which were well received, and delivered humorous lectures. In recent years he had done no literary work. In September, 1883, he started the Evening News.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

DR. CONAN DOYLE is coming to this country to lecture.

WILLIAM WATSON, the poet, is again ill, and rather seriously so.

COL. FREDERICK D. GRANT has prepared a new edition of his father's "Memoirs," which will be issued this year.

JOSIAH FLINT, whose articles on tramp life gaged in writing a book of tramp experiences and adventures.

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, the editor of the "Drawer" in Harper's and author of several clever books, is the Democratic candidate for mayor in the city of Yonkers, N. Y.

PERCY FITZGERALD is at work on a book to be called "The Savoy Opera," which is, of course, a history of the Gilbert-Sullivan productions. It is to be illustrated.

VERESTCHAGIN has written a new story, "The War Correspondent," dealing with the Russo-Turkish War of 1877–78, and Mr. Poultney Bigelow is translating it into the English.

JOHN C. ROPES, of Boston, has offered a prize of $250 for the best essay on "The Russian War of 1812," prepared by a candidate for a degree in either Harvard or the University of Pennsylvania.

PIERRE LOTI has gone to accumulate literary material in Egypt and the Holy Land. His plan, it is said, includes a caravan journey through the desert; and he will end his travels by a visit to the Crimea and Moscow.

THE granddaughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne, Hildegarde Hawthorne, is about to publish her first book. It is to be called "The Fairest of the Fair," and is to contain a record of her experiences in Chicago last summer.

THE present Count Murat, a grand-nephew of Napoleon's King of Naples, is editing a number of his uncle's papers, which are said to throw new light on many persons who belong to the Napoleonic drama. He came into possession of the papers through the will of Count de Morbourg, who was a friend of the King of Naples.

BESIDES a volume of Renan's philological memoirs, Mme. Renan intends soon to issue a new edition of his "Henriette Renan: souvenir pour ceux qui l'ont connue." The latter work was printed privately many years ago in an edition of 500 copies. The reprint will contain five illustrations, one of them showing the birthplace of Renan in Brittany.

THE late Steele Mackay, the playwright, actor, and projector of the ill-starred Spectatorium at Chicago, was the favorite pupil of Delsarte, and heir to his system of training in expression, and left among his papers a manuscript setting forth the philosophy, science, and art of expression, based upon the principles of Delsarte. This manuscript the author's widow has requested Rev. William R. Alger, of Boston, to prepare for publication, and probably by next autumn the work will be in the hands of the public. Its scope extends beyond the limits of dramatic representation to the whole field of human expression—with pen or brush, as well as with voice and gesture. Rev. Mr. Alger is himself an orator of distinction and a writer of singular force and charm. His "Critical History of the Doctrine of a Future Life" is in its 14th edition. Its concluding chapter, which stands for the labor of three years, is pronounced by Hon. William T. Harris, commissioner of education at Washington, and one of the most competent philosophical critics living, to be the most masterly presentation of the theme in all literature. Rev. Mr. Alger's interest in the drama won for him, many years ago, the friendship of Edwin Forrest, whose biography he has written; with Steele Mackay it also led to a long and intimate friendship, whose fruit cannot but enrich

POSTAL MATTERS.

DIRECTIONS FOR FACILITATING THE DELIVERY OF MAIL MATTER.

POST-OFFICE, NEW YORK, N. Y., February, 1894.

THE delivery of letters through lock boxes at this office will be greatly facilitated if they are so addressed that they may be at once recognized as "Box Letters." This could, of course, be best accomplished by the addition of the box numbers to the addresses; but it is understood that it is not always practicable to induce correspondents to adopt this plan, and that they cannot be expected always to remember the proper numbers. The same object, however, can be secured by the use of the words "Lock Box" (without the addition of any number). These words in the superscription of a letter will insure its proper treatment, in transit, by clerks in railway post-offices, as well as by clerks in this office, who will place it among those intended for box delivery—thus saving the time that would otherwise be required to separate it from those intended for delivery by carriers, and, of course, facilitating its prompt delivery.

You are respectfully urged to use all means in your power to induce your correspondents to use this method of address.

CHARLES W. DAYTON, Postmaster.

BUSINESS NOTES.

CINCINNATI, O.—By the death of John M. Scudder, M.D., on February 17, the firm of John M. Scudder & Sons was dissolved, and the firm of John M. Scudder's Sons formed to continue the business as heretofore. The specialty of this firm will remain the publishing of eclectic medical books.

NEW YORK CITY.—J. S. Ogilvie has transferred his right and property in the book publishing business to the new firm of The J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co. His son, a young man of eighteen, will be an important factor in the new company. This young man gives great promise.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Porter & Coates, who have been located for so many years at Ninth and Chestnut Streets, will soon move to the Hale Building, formerly the old Keystone Bank building, at Chestnut and Juniper Streets, the first floor of which is being handsomely fitted up for them.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The W. S. Bell Book and Stationery Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000.

SAN JOSÉ, CAL.—E. J. Gillespie, stationer and bookseller, has sold out.

TROY, N. Y.—Herbert F. Hastings, for the past fourteen years in the employ of H. B. Nims & Co., has formed a copartnership with Herbert R. Mann, under the firm-name of Mann & Hastings, and they have purchased the book and stationery store of Smyth & Co., at 266 River Street. Mr. Mann is also a former employee of Nims & Co. The fact of their being two of Troy's representative young men, coupled with a business experience in the store of H. B. Nims, ought to bespeak for them a prosperous career. Mann & Hastings, as did their predecessor, will pay especial attention to church and Sunday-school supplies of all denominations.

WAUKON, IA.—E. N. Hancock, bookseller, has sold out.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

G. CHARPENTIER & E. FASQUELLE, Paris, announce a new illustrated edition of Zola's "Rougon-Macquart" series.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & Co. have in press the complete "Concordance to the Writings of Milton," prepared by the late Dr. John Bradshaw, whose death occurred recently and suddenly in India. The concordance is said to be so thorough a guide to the poet that it will contain every word he has used in his writings.

E. B. TREAT, New York, has in preparation "A System of Legal Medicine," by Allan McLane Hamilton, M.D., and Lawrence Godkin—an illustrated volume to which many others will contribute, including Dr. Charles L. Dana, Francis M. Wellman, John E. Parsons, Judge Calvin S. Pratt, William B. Hornblower, and Judge Simeon E. Baldwin.

ROBERT CLARKE & Co. have in preparation "Recollections of Life in Ohio, from 1813 to 1840," by William Cooper Howells, with an introduction by his son, William Dean Howells; "Queen Moó and the Egyptian Sphinx," by Dr. Augustus Le Plongeon; "Judaism at the World's Parliament of Religions;" and a reprint of the "Key to the Hebrew-Egyptian Mystery in the Source of Measures Originating the British Inch and the Ancient Cubit," by J. Ralston Skinner, which has been out of print for several years.

THE "Gutenberg House" at Mayence was burned down February 17. A statue of "Gutenberg" stood in its courtyard. Gutenberg's uncle had let this house to the inventor of "printing with movable metal types." The first presses, which Gutenberg very likely constructed at Strassburg, were put up there, and forty years ago some remainders of these presses and tools which Gutenberg had used were still to be seen in one of its cellars. The inhabitants of Mayence had so little regard for this old historic house, where the greatest invention mankind ever made had taken its rise, that they permitted it to be converted into a brewery.

CROTHERS & KORTH, New York, have just ready a work entitled "The Eucharistic Offering: spiritual instructions upon the office of holy communion, together with helps for the carrying out of the same, including a kalendar for the commemoration of persons and events, a method of eucharistic preparation, intercession and thanksgiving, the office analyzed, annotated, and accompanied with devotions adapted to its several parts, an arrangement of collects, epistles, and gospels whereby the eucharistic thought proper for the day is made plain," by G. H. S. Walpole, S.T.D., professor of dogmatic theology, Gen. Theo. Sem., New York, with introduction by Morgan Dix, S.T.D., D.C.L., rector of Trinity Church, New York.

D. APPLETON & Co. are to publish "The Biography of Gen. Robert E. Lee," by his nephew, Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, in their Great Commanders series. Nearly two hundred letters written by General Lee to Mrs. Lee during the four years he was in the field will be incorporated in the work. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee was intimately associated with his uncle during the Civil War, and since has lived the life of a quiet country gentleman at Lexington, Va., excepting possibly the term he recently served as governor of Virginia. He has thought well to wait until time had healed many political wounds, and till there were readers who could judge dispassionately of the great character of General Lee, who was so much among his associates, besides the greatest general of "the Rebellion."

"CANADIAN Independence, Annexation, and British Imperial Federation," is the title of a forthcoming volume in the Questions of the Day series, published by G. P. Putnam's Sons. The author is James Douglas, president of the Copper Queen Co., of New York and Arizona. Mr. Douglas is a native of the city of Quebec; during the past twenty years he has resided in the United States, where his business interests have led him to the widest travel and where he has made a careful study of the economic and political questions of the country. Meanwhile he has paid repeated visits to Canada and kept himself in touch with the drift of Canadian public opinion. His book is certain to be a thoughtful contribution to problems which few writers have considered from both sides of the frontier.

WILLIAM HAMILTON GIBSON, of Brooklyn, the well-known artist, is an amateur naturalist of distinction. During the present season he has given lectures on the relations between flowers and insects to scores of large audiences in New York, Brooklyn, and other cities. As readers of his "Sharp Eyes" well know, Mr. Gibson has a style which renders attractive much that in the ordinary scientific treatise is dry as dust. Mr. Gibson is not only an artist but an ingenious mechanic, and among the novel features introduced in his lectures are devices by which a plant is shown in the act of growth from bud to blossom, with a working delineation of a bee or wasp in the act of fertilization. As the pictures and models are of immensely enlarged proportions, Mr. Gibson gives his audiences a better idea of what takes place in the fields and woods than most observers would detect there. In his marriage of the resources of art and mechanism to the sciences of botany and entomology Mr. Gibson in his own work illustrates the fruitfulness of cross-fertilization—a theme which in its floral aspects is one of his favorite subjects.

MACMILLAN & Co. have in preparation The Temple Shakespeare, a new edition of Shakespeare's works, two volumes of which are to be published each month; each volume is to contain a complete play carefully printed in black and red on hand-made paper, and the greatest care will be devoted to every detail of production. The text is that of the Globe edition, carefully amended from the latest Cambridge edition; the numbering of the lines is identical with the Globe, so that the frequent references to that edition will apply also to the Temple. Israel Gollancz will edit it, contributing a full glossary with a brief preface and notes, but there will be no needless discussion of textual emendation, and no æsthetic criticism. Mr. Walter Crane has designed the title-pages, and each volume will have a frontispiece in photogravure. For the use of teachers there will be an edition printed on writing-paper, with broad margins for manuscript notes. The publishers' aim has been to produce a thoroughly attractive edition of Shakespeare, printed in bold and legible type, and yet of so compact a form that it may be light to hold and convenient to carry in the pocket. The binding will be in two styles, limp cloth and paste grain roan.

ANNUAL CATALOGUES, 1893.

The Annual American Catalogue for 1893 contains:

(1) Directory of American Publishers issuing books in 1893.

(2) Full-title Record, with descriptive notes, in author-alphabet, of all books recorded in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, 1893.

(3) Author-, title-, and subject-index to same in one alphabet.

(4) Publishers' annual lists for 1893.

The edition is limited, and to secure copies orders should be sent at once. The price is $3.50 half leather; $3.00 in sheets.

The Annual Catalogue for 1886 and 1887 is now out of print. But few copies of the Annual Catalogue for 1888, 1889, 1890 and 1891 are on hand.

We also supply the English Catalogue for 1893, price $1.50, paper; the Annual American and English Catalogues, 1892, can be had in one volume, half leather, $5.00.

...1893...

INCLUDING PERIODICALS, AMERICAN AND ENGLISH, ESSAYS, BOOK-CHAPTERS, ETC., SPECIAL BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND NECROLOGY OF AUTHORS.

EDITED BY W. I. FLETCHER and R. R. BOWKER,

With the co-operation of members of the American Library Association and of the Library Journal staff.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 complements the "Annual American Catalogue" of books published in 1893 by indexing (1) articles in periodicals published in 1893; (2) essays and book-chapters in composite books of 1893; (3) authors of periodical articles and essays; (4) special bibliographies of 1893; (5) authors deceased in 1893. The two volumes together make a complete record of the literary product of the year.

The new volume includes the features of the "Co-operative Index to Periodicals," originally a monthly supplement to the Library Journal, then extended into a quarterly in an enlarged form, and later issued as an annual volume.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 forms the second supplement both to the new five-yearly volume (1887–1891) of Poole's Index to Periodical Literature and to the new A. L. A. Index to essays and book-chapters of Mr. Fletcher.

The new volume will more than fulfil the opinion as to the Co-operative Index expressed in the following extract:

"To the literary worker its value can hardly be over-estimated; to the specialist in any branch of science or letters it is indispensable, since it places within his immediate reach many of the latest fruits of labor in the same field, to every one who desires to be well informed it furnishes the means of making the most effective use of his time."—Providence Press.

THE ENGLISHMAN AT HOME:

HIS RESPONSIBILITIES AND PRIVILEGES.

By EDWARD PORRITT,

Formerly London Editor of the Manchester Examiner.

The author's aim has been to make the book not only of use and interest to students of civics and of English history and contemporary politics, but also of value to American visitors to England, and to readers of English news in the American press. His accuracy and carefulness of statement may be subjected to the most critical test. The style is good and entertaining. The book cannot fail to be a welcome addition to every library. One vol., cloth, 12mo, xiv. + 379 pp. Appendices, index, $1.75.

VOL. XLV., No. 11. NEW YORK, March 17, 1894. WHOLE No. 1155

D. APPLETON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Symbolic Education.

By SUSAN E. BLOW. Vol. 26, International Education Series. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

This book discusses in a practical way the foundations of the philosophy of Froebel as found in "The Mothers' Songs and Games"—Mutter-und Koselieder—and shows in a clear manner the significance of the kindergarten and its claims for the important place of corner stone of education. It is emphatically a book for mothers as well as for teachers, as it gives the desired aid and interpretation of the actions, feelings, and thoughts of infancy, and unfolds the true method of training as taught by Froebel.

A Costly Freak.

By MAXWELL GRAY, author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland," "An Innocent Impostor," etc. No. 137, Town and Country Library. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

This story demonstrates that the author's power to hold her readers' closest attention has not diminished since the appearance of "The Silence of Dean Maitland." It is a novel which compares more nearly to that remarkable book than does any other of her writings.

Our Manifold Nature.

Stories from Life. By SARAH GRAND, author of "The Heavenly Twins," "Ideala," etc. No. 136, Town and Country Library. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, with portrait of author, $1.00.

In these stories the author of "The Heavenly Twins" shows some of her strongest and most impressive work. The great number of readers who have been charmed with her previous books will not fail to discern herein the qualities which have gained for her such prompt and widespread recognition.

A History of the United States Navy,

From 1775 to 1894. By EDGAR STANTON MACLAY, A.M. With technical revision by Lieut. Roy C. Smith, U. S. N. In two volumes. Vol. I. With numerous maps, diagrams, and illustrations. 8vo, cloth, $3.50 per volume.

For nine years the author has devoted himself to the task of supplying the want of a complete history of our navy. His researches in France, with the assistance of Admiral Aube, Minister of the Colonies and the Marine, and in England with the aid of the late Sir Provo Wallis and others, together with the use of private papers and unpublished documents in this country, the aid of descendants of naval heroes and the suggestions of naval officers who have taken part in some of the events described, render the results of his diligent labor complete and authoritative. The appearance of this standard history is a peculiarly happy accompaniment of the development of our new navy.

(Volume II. will be published in May.)

NOTES IN SEASON.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS will issue shortly "The Thumb Prayer Book for the American Church," uniform with their well-known edition of the book for the English church.

T. Y. CROWELL & CO. announce for immediate publication a little volume containing seven essays under the title "Social Reform and the Church," by John R. Commons, professor of economics and social science, Indiana University, and secretary of the American Institute of Christian Sociology. Professor Ely, who furnishes the introduction, claims that the work will be "an excellent stimulus to popular thought" and will help "to awaken men to the true importance of the popular questions of the day."

WILLIAM R. JENKINS, of New York, is about to publish a work entitled "The Foot of the Horse," by David Roberge, who has been closely associated with Mr. Robert Bonner for 25 years in his study and practice of the art of horseshoeing. The work is said to be on a different plan from anything of the kind which has yet been presented, inasmuch that lameness and all diseases of the foot are traced to an unbalanced foot bone, and Mr. Roberge declares that all lamenesses and diseases may be prevented or cured by simply balancing the foot. The work will be fully illustrated, showing improved methods of shoeing horses, etc.

MACMILLAN & CO. have now ready the first volume of the "Complete Works of Geoffrey Chaucer," edited from numerous manuscripts by the Rev. Walter W. Skeat, who has devoted a quarter of a century to his great work. "The Romaunt of the Rose" is the beginning of the first modern edition that will contain the whole of Chaucer's works, and it is promised complete by the end of the year. "The Tempest" is the first volume of "The Temple Shakespeare," edited by Israel Gollancz, which will be issued in the order of the Folio editions at the rate of three volumes a month. "The Raiders," by S. R. Crockett, author of "The Stickit Minister," is just ready, and his former book has reached a fifth edition. Macmillan & Co. do not expect to issue Mrs. Humphry Ward's new book, "Marcella," before April 3.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. will publish on the 24th a beautiful book on the Isles of Shoals, especially on a little garden which Mrs. Thaxter has cultivated with wonderful success. The book is called "An Island Garden," and contains twelve full-page illustrations with some smaller ones in color by Childe Hassam. At the same time will appear "Brave Little Holland, and What She Taught Us," by Dr. William E. Griffis, who has made three visits to the Netherlands, and has carefully studied Dutch and American archives for the purpose of rendering himself thoroughly competent to tell the story of the remarkable little country; "A Bird Lover in the West," covering her observations in Ohio, Utah, and Colorado, by Olive Thorne Miller, whose writings about birds have special value on account of her careful observation and her enthusiasm in her subject; "Bayou Folk," by Mrs. Kate Chopin, a volume of remarkably interesting tales of Creole and Acadian life in Louisiana, told by one who is perfectly familiar with all their unusual customs and characters, and told with very remarkable literary skill; also, "Does God Send Trouble?" a volume intended for the consolation of those who in any respect need it, by Dr. C. C. Hall, of Brooklyn. Besides these will be published an edition for 1894 of "The Satchel Guide for Vacation Tourists in Europe," revised to date; and a memoir concerning the Seabury Commemoration held at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, in 1884, by George Shea.

Adam, G. Mercer, comp. and ed. Sandow on physical training: a study in the perfect type of the human form; comp. and ed. under Mr. Sandow's direction. N. Y., J. Selwin Tait & Sons, 1894. c. 16+244 p. pors. O. cl., $3.50. [755

Eugene Sandow, born in Prussia in 1867 and now twenty-seven years of age, is as far as known the strongest existing man; by a carefully sustained and intelligent method of his own discovery, he has built himself up from a delicate child to be the most powerful man in the world. His exhibitions in England and in this country have awakened great interest in his methods of training. His system, which requires no elaborate apparatus, and involves no vigorous course of athletics or alteration in diet, is fully and minutely described; the incidents of his life are also given and his personality analyzed. The book is embellished with upwards of eighty half-tone illustrations from photographs by Sarony and other photographers, and by one hundred and fifty marginal illustrations by a pupil of Meisonnier.

The changes which he witnesses that have been wrought in the way of moral material, and spiritual progress in the course of one hundred years, are minutely described. Churches and creeds have disappeared, and the "reign of righteousness is in full bloom and life." Chiefly aims to delineate the effects of real religion as contrasted with ecclesiasticism.

They are often in the form of allegories and often sad and morbid. The "philosopher" frequently gives an appropriate song at the end of the story.

The ten years embraced in this volume are among the most memorable in the history of the papacy and of Europe. They cover the close of the Pontificate of Leo X., the brief interlude of Adrian VI's occupancy of the Papal chair, and the first years of Clement VII.'s reign. Among the great civil events of the period are the election of Charles V. as emperor, the peasants' war, the battles of Pavia and Mohacs, and the fall of Rhodes. In each of these the Papacy had an important stake, but naturally the interest of the volume is mainly concentrated on the rise of Luther and the development of the Reformation movement in Germany.

Gives a history of duplicate whist, with directions for playing it. In the chapters devoted to whist strategy, the writer says: "Several of the fundamental principles, and 'extensions of principle' of our great authorities are set aside, such as 'the invariability of the lead from the longest suit, whatever the score; the reckless giving of information, whatever the hand; the useless and confusing system of leads, erroneously called American; the assumption that the discard is always directive; the total disregard of finesse and tenace; and the refusal to acknowledge the merits of the short-suit game." Ample reasons are given for the rejection of these principles.

The story opens in London and changes to the West Indies, where the sugar plantation known as "Lot 13" is situated. "Lot 13" has been persistently unlucky, failing to make money under any management. Simon Berrincott, in a malicious mood, wills it to his cousin James, whom he hates, and from whom he has been separated for many years. Simon leaves a son called Bernard, and James has a daughter named Marian. These young people are the leading characters, and, of course, "fall in love" with each other. "Lot 13" becomes unexpectedly prosperous, and Bernard loses his English estate, because his father unwittingly had married Bernard's mother—his second wife—before his first wife was dead. Marian then becomes an heiress, and complications are numerous.

When ill health compels the Rev. Stephen Balfour to resign his pastorate in Norfolk, and seek relief in an entire change of scene, his daughter Katie goes to the home of her uncle, in Fenchurst; by common consent, however, she soon changes her abode for the homely, free and kind hospitality of a quaint little house called the "Nutshell;" life here is contrasted with life at the Walnuts, and a sad episode in Grace Balfour's brief history is given, with the incidents in Katie's happy love-story.

Contents: Eugenia; The yellow leaf; Janey, a humble administrator; Boomellen; Kane, a soldier servant; Ah Man. These half dozen stories appeared originally in English magazines, where they were greatly cut down for several reasons. They are now restored to their original length and are also carefully revised. They all illustrate the advanced views of the author of "The heavenly twins" relative to marriage, heredity, etc.

Hare, A: J. C. The story of two noble lives: being memorials of Charlotte, Countess Canning, and Louisa, Marchioness of Waterford. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1893 [1894.] 3 v., 6+381; 4+489; 3+495 p. pors. il. D. cl., $8. [784

The work begins in the third quarter of the eighteenth century, long before the "two noble lives" came into existence. Lady Hardwicke and Lady Stuart de Rothesay, the grandmother and mother of the two beautiful women designated by the title, contribute two charming collections of prefatory letters. Lady Hardwicke's husband was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland from 1801 to 1806, and she gives some amusing sketches of Dublin society of that time. Lady Stuart de Rothesay's letters are dated from the English Embassy at Paris, and are rich in reminiscences of men and events of the period. Her daughters, Lady Canning and Lady Waterford, belonged to the second quarter of the present century. Mr. Hare gives interesting details of their childhood in France and England and of their marriages. Lady Canning's married life was spent in India during the eventful period of the mutiny, her journal being full of the thrilling scenes there enacted and of accounts of the actors in them. Lady Waterford spent her long widowhood among her husband's tenants in Ireland. With many domestic details are anecdotes and recollections of some famous people.

John Larkin Lincoln was for forty-five years professor of of the Latin language and literature in Brown University; he was born in Boston in 1817, and died in 1891. A new series of works specially designed for Sunday-schools and Bible classes, consisting of expositions of the International Sunday-School Lessons. They are grouped and arranged under the books of scripture to which they relate, and form a very fairly complete commentary on the particular portion of scripture. Dr. Maclaren is not only a thorough Biblical scholar, but he is an expositor who presses living truth home to heart and conscience. It is believed that the books will be found most useful to teachers and superintendents who have to deliver addresses to children, for pupils in Bible classes, and for private reading.

Maclay, Edgar Stanton. A history of the United States navy from 1775 to 1893; with technical revision by Roy C. Smith. In 2 v. V. 1. N. Y., Appleton, 1894. c. '93. 32+575 p. il. maps, diagrams, O. cl., $3.50. [797

For nine years the author has devoted himself to the task of supplying the want of a complete history of our navy. His researches in France, with the assistance of Admiral Aube, Minister of the Colonies and the Marine, and in England with the aid of the late Sir Provo Wallis and others, together with the use of private papers and unpublished documents in this country, the aid of descendants of naval heroes and the suggestions of naval officers who have taken part in some of the events described, render the results of his diligent labor complete and authoritative. In addition to the spirited illustrations of Mr. J. O. Davidson, there are many carefully prepared diagrams of important battles, showing the respective positions of the ships throughout the contest, and there are many small maps of the scenes of naval operations.

A hasty secret marriage, subsequently concealed, is the cause of the unhappiness which is the plentiful portion of the heroine. Believing herself a widow she marries again, only to find that her first husband is living and that she is involved in a course of deceit which is successfully maintained until a second widowhood brings freedom. The scene is chiefly St. Augustine.

Mr. Nye has followed the actual history of the discovery and growth of the republic; the events are presented in a dry, satirical way entirely his own, his comments being full of humor. In spite of the fact that the volume is simply designed to be entertaining, and is an illustration of the author's peculiar vein of fun, one may also derive some information from it.

"The motive of this volume is a desire to restore the primacy of certain conceptions which are in danger of disappearing from our modern thinking, and to reform others which, as I think, have been wrongly or inadequately conceived. Reflection has led me to dissent from monistic pantheism on the one hand, and from agnosticism on the other—two of the leading tendencies in the thoughts of our century—and to seek a metaphysical basis for philosophy that may adequately ground a rational theory of knowledge and being."—Author's Preface.

"The first volume of the 'Memoirs' [see notice, 'Weekly Record,' P. W., Dec. 9, '93] told briefly the story of the Revolution, and, at greater length, that of the Directory, the Consulate, and the Empire up to the Russian campaign. The second volume might be entitled 'The empire's fall.' Beginning with that most fatal victory on the banks of the Moskowa, Pasquier follows the emperor step by step along the lamentable pathway that led him out of the lurid glare of Muscovy's flaming capital to dark night and Fontainebleau and abdication. Then the return of the Bourbons is described and their doings up to the promulgation of his charter by Louis XVIII."—New York Times.

Dr. Wood, who is professor of gynecology in the Cleveland Medical College, says in his preface: "An ideal text-book, according to my conception, is one which should not only embody in concise form for the specialist the most advanced teachings of the American and European schools of gynecology, but should present these teachings in such a way as to enable the student of medicine and the non-specialist to obtain at least an intelligent knowledge of the subject without exhaustive research." Such a work he has aimed successfully to present. He has devoted much space to diagnosis, especially to the diagnosis of abdominal tumors. He has introduced more than the usual number of illustrations and clinical cases and omitted the usual chapters devoted to diseases of the breast and diseases of the rectum.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MARCH 17, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE PROFESSION OF BOOKSELLING.

THE CIRCULATING LIBRARY.—II.

THE particular locality in which the bookseller resides, as stated before, must determine his choice of fiction for his circulating library, if it is to fulfil its purpose and attract the public to his store. A country community will always care more for books of which they have heard people speak all their lives than for the newest and latest publications, news of which will probably take some time to reach them in their busy, unliterary lives. The opening of a circulating library is always hailed with delight, and when the old favorites are found well represented the bookseller will make for himself a constituency that will easily suggest to him in what direction his nucleus should be developed to retain its popular character, or to furnish special borrowers who have proved worth pleasing.

Fiction being always most in demand, especially by women who form the chief reading public of busy towns, we have made up a short list of novels which have enjoyed great popularity in their day and are still always called for at libraries. We do not pretend to cover the fiction a bookseller should try to keep on his shelves and make his patrons desire. We have merely trusted to the memory of an inveterate novel-reader, who, glancing back quickly over the past twenty-five years, has jotted down the titles of books which have all been talked about and eagerly read and are just as sure of meeting the tastes of a new generation. Of course if a bookseller can afford to have complete sets of Dickens, Thackeray, George Eliot, Walter Scott, Bulwer, Cooper, and others, he will do well to make a show of standards. We have only given the most popular of the greater novelists' noted books. Other books must depend upon the demand, and we should consider a call for the same book from three or four regular patrons sufficient to justify adding it to the library.

THE END OF THE SUIT OF MARTIN vs. THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

THE news that the verdict in Mrs. John Biddulph Martin's suit against the trustees of the British Museum, awarding the plaintiff 20s., has been set aside, and that the High Court of Justice has given judgment for the defendants, will no doubt greatly relieve the minds of many English librarians and library committees of a new and deepened sense of their responsibilities. If the verdict had been allowed to stand, nothing, in the eye of the law, was to be taken for granted. It would not have sufficed that a book came from a respectable publisher. It would not have done to plead the difficulty, almost amounting to impossibility, of reading all the additions to a large library; apparently even statutory authority would not have protected. It is right and proper, of course, that private reputation should be safe-guarded, and books containing libellous matter certainly ought not to reach the hands of readers. It is just here that the troubles of the librarian come in. Libels may lurk in innocent-looking works—in novels, for example, and the best biographies—and how is the unlucky librarian to discover that there is no word of libellous import in the books he adds to his collection? The simple answer is by reading them. The British Museum receives annually some 95,000 books, and to read these the services of 110 readers would be necessary. Counting newspapers, etc., the total reaches nearly 320,000. Yet the managers were to be held responsible for every line in every book issued to the public, for with them, as with newspaper editors, ignorance was to be no plea! The finding of the jury was so manifestly unreasonable that it could not be expected to stand.

N. Y. NEWSDEALERS' AND STATIONERS' PROVIDENT AND BENEFIT ASS'N.

THIRD ANNUAL DINNER.

THE third anniversary dinner of the New York Newsdealers' and Stationers' Provident and Benevolent Association was discussed on the evening of the 13th inst. at the Hungaria, Union Sq., New York City. About eighty members were present, Thomas F. Martin occupying the chair. Nearly all branches of the newspaper business were represented. At the head table sat John Swinton, of the New York Sun, and David A. Munro of The North American Review. Chief among the toasts on the list were "Our Bread and Butter" (the daily papers) and "Our Meat and Pudding" (the weeklies and magazines). In some of the speeches reference was made to the movement now on foot to establish news-booths under the stations of the elevated railroads, and it was shown that the feeling of these representative dealers present was strongly opposed to the scheme.

Among those seated at the tables were T. Martin, A. Beggs, J. E. Ledwith, W. P. Maher, R. Grant, R. Grum, H. Bonnett, T. Lunt, P. J. McGrath, B. Haag, N. Frank, W. Schriever, T. J. McBride, S. M. Perkins, P. J. Mack, J. J. Jackson, J. Rudolph, G. B. Bancker, J. Eck, J. E. McBride, J. Brennan, W. H. McKiernan, W. H. Decker, D. G. Davis, S. Weinberg, H. Merten, H. Hansler, L. Jonas, H. Malkan, M. Singerman, and A. Michelman.

CALEB S. BRAGG.

CALEB S. BRAGG, senior member of the American Book Co., and one of the foremost school-book publishers in this country, died suddenly on March 8 while in the train en route from New York to his home in Cincinnati. He was accompanied by his son and daughter-in-law, and was ill but for a few minutes, his death being attributed to Bright's disease. Mr. Bragg was born in Sydney, Maine, in 1823, and began life as a teacher. When about twenty-five years old he went to Ohio as a travelling salesman for W. B. Smith & Co., the founders of the great Cincinnati school-book house, which, through a succession of changes, is finally known as the Cincinnati branch of the American Book Co. A short time later he severed his connection with this house to become a member of the firm of Ingham & Bragg, of Cleveland, who were also booksellers and competitors of the Cincinnati house. In 1872 Mr. Bragg returned to Cincinnati as the junior member of the firm of Wilson, Hinkle & Co., which had succeeded W. B. Smith & Co. The firm then consisted of Mr. O. J. Wilson, now retired, and Anthony H. Hinkle, whose death occurred ten years ago, and whose place in the firm was taken by his son, Mr. A. Howard Hinkle.

In 1875 this firm was succeeded by the firm of Van Antwerp & Bragg, and the business, which had steadily grown to enormous proportions, was continued under this firm-name until 1890, when it was taken into the reorganization of school-book publishing houses consolidated as the American Book Company. With this change Mr. Bragg and Mr. A. Howard Hinkle were elected Cincinnati directors, and Mr. Bragg was made managing director of the Cincinnati branch. About a year ago Mr. Bragg concluded to retire from active business life, and to enjoy the handsome competency which he had accumulated during his business career.

He was succeeded in the Cincinnati branch by Mr. W. E. Thalheimer. Last December, however, it was found that the New York office of the company was much in need of a manager of the agency department, and as this had been Mr. Bragg's business since his connection first began with the Cincinnati house, he was finally prevailed upon to come to New York and assume the duties for awhile.

He was returning to his home in Avondale, near Cincinnati, after an absence of two months, when his death occurred.

While in Cleveland Mr. Bragg was also actively interested as an agent of Charles Scribner's Sons, and especially worked to introduce throughout the State, Guyot's Geography, which was then a new publication. In the early school-book wars in Ohio, in which W. B. Smith & Co. pushed vigorously McGuffey's readers and Ray's arithmetic, he took an active part, particularly so because the New York firms engaged in publishing school-books were in active competition then to introduce their books in his market of the growing West. He was conceded to be the best-posted school-book man in the State, and he was personally acquainted with all the prominent educators.

He leaves a widow and one son, C. C. Bragg, Charles, the other son, having died about a year ago.

Mr. Bragg was a man of liberal culture and education, his chief characteristics being his knowledge and insight of men, his executive ability and management. He was generous, kindly, and a liberal contributor to religious, educational, and charitable institutions, having long been an elder in the Avondale Presbyterian Church, and always evincing a warm interest in its work. He always took pleasure in encouraging young men starting in business, and many institutions have been recipients of his generosity. But while generous in thus extending assistance and in his contributions, he was prudent and careful in his business, and had accumulated a very comfortable estate, approximating nearly $1,000,000. His funeral was held on the 11th inst. at Spring Grove Cemetery, Cincinnati, and was attended by a large number of friends, associates, and acquaintances.

GINN & Co. will publish next month in their College Series of Latin Authors the "Dialogus de Oratoribus" of Tacitus, edited by Prof. Charles E. Bennett, of Cornell.

CASSELL & Co. will issue shortly G. A. Sala's "Things I have Seen and People I have Met," a collection of papers which have appeared serially in the Daily Telegraph and elsewhere.

THE very important lectures on art delivered during the winter by Mr. John La Farge at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, will be revised by the author, and published in book form possibly next fall.

THE first publication of the Columbia University Press, for which Macmillan & Co. are publishing agents, will be a volume of "Classical Studies in Honor of Professor Drisler." The issue of this series of papers by former pupils of Professor Henry Drisler will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his connection with Columbia College.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY has bought the property at 144 Nassau Street from David and Charles Banks. The lot is 21.1 x 47 feet. The Society by this purchase thus acquires a plot of about 8500 square feet with a frontage on Nassau Street of 100 feet and on Spruce Street of 84.6 feet. A twenty-story stone building will be erected on the plot.

A. C. MCCLURG & Co., Chicago, will publish immediately "In Maiden Meditation," by E. V. A. This dainty and attractive book might be called with "The Reveries of a Bachelor"—"a book of the heart." As that admits us to the innermost thoughts of the man, so this gives us a glimpse of thoughts which pass through a woman's mind when "In maiden meditation, fancy free."

THE list of "Private Libraries in America," now being compiled by G. Hedeler, publisher of the Leipzig Export Journal, already includes 500 considerable libraries, but he still desires to obtain, from owners with whom he has been unable to communicate, brief details as to the extent of their treasures and the special bent of their collections. Mr. Hedeler's address is No. 3 Poststrasse, Leipzig.

WE are pleased to note that Mr. F. E. Grant, the well-known bookseller of 7 W. 42d Street, New York, is recovering from the effects of an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Grant was taken ill on the 2d inst., and on the 6th his physician decided to remove the vermiform appendix, which was done successfully. Mr. Grant promptly recovered from the shock, and is now in a fair way to be about again shortly.

FUNK & WAGNALLS Co. have just ready the twelfth and concluding volume of their Columbian Historical Novels, by John R. Musick. It is entitled "Union: a story of the great Rebellion," and while merely a story of the Civil War, laying special stress on the period from 1860 to 1864, it summarizes the chief episodes of our history down to the year 1894, and thus makes this series of historical novels inclusive of the leading events of American history from the voyage of Columbus to the present day; like its predecessors, it is fully illustrated.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have in press a "Laboratory Course in Physiological Psychology," by Dr. E. C. Sanford, of Clark University. A limited edition of the first six chapters of the work will be brought out at once. These chapters cover the Dermal Senses, the Static and Kinæsthetic Senses, Taste and Smell, Hearing, Vision in general, and Sensations of Light and Color. Chapters to follow treat of the Seeing of Space, Direction and Motion, Weber's Law, Reflex Action and Reaction Times, Association, Memory, Attention, Voluntary Motion, etc. The author's aim has been to give directions for experiments covering as far as practicable all the chief facts and methods of experimental psychology.

THE WATCH AND WARD SOCIETY, of Boston, recently caused the arrest of B. Lewis, newsdealer, of 250 Hanover Street, on the charge of selling obscene literature. Lewis was indicted on seven counts, but the jury, after a long deliberation, could find him guilty on only two counts—namely, selling "The Arms of Love" and "Crimson Kisses." Lewis has appealed to the Superior Court. Count Zuboff, who was arrested on the charge of issuing obscene matter, in putting forth his last book, "Violet," was acquitted on the 12th inst. Alexander McCauce, a South End Washington Street newsdealer, has also been indicted on a charge similar to the foregoing for selling a Worthington edition of the "Decameron."

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. will issue immediately a translation of a very popular novel by the celebrated Hungarian writer, Maurice Jokai, "In Love with the Czarina;" also a thrilling story by Henry Herman (author of "His Angel" and "One Traveller Returns," etc.), entitled "A Dead Man's Secret." They have now ready a new edition, the fourth, of "Electricity Up to Date," by John B. Verity, with many new illustrations and a new and very interesting chapter on electric cooking and heating—a branch of this wonderful science likely to attract great attention in the near future; also, a new book on "Puzzles" of every conceivable variety—arithmetical, quizzical, and curious—dissecting puzzles, matches and wire, etc., by Angelo K. Lewis, who, as "Professor Hoffmann, the Conjurer," is well known to all interested in legerdemain.

CHARLES L. WEBSTER & Co. will publish on April 1, under the title of "Joanna Traill, Spinster," a novel by Miss Annie E. Holdsworth, who is one of the most popular of the younger English novelists, and who in this new story has treated the now widely-agitated question of individual rescue work among fallen women with great power and at the same time with delicacy. The book presents a possible solution of the question, but is primarily a well-planned and interesting novel. C. L. Webster & Co. have transferred their rights in Bliss Carman's first volume of poems, "Low Tide on Grand Pré," to Stone & Kimball, of Cambridge and Chicago. The first edition of the book, which appeared only a few months ago, has already been exhausted, and a new and handsome edition will soon be brought out. Stone & Kimball, who we believe are known to be two undergraduates of Harvard, will take their degrees at the close of the present college year.

SHARPS AND FLATS.

A Complete Revelation of the Secrets of Cheating at Games of Chance and Skill.

By JOHN NEVIL MASKELYNE.

With 4 Plates and 62 Illustrations in the Text. Crown 8vo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1.50.

CONTENTS: I. Introductory—II. Common Sharpers and their Tricks—III. Marked Cards and the Manner of their Employment—IV. Reflectors—V. Holdouts—VI. Manipulation—VII. Collusion and Conspiracy—VIII. The Game of Faro—IX. Prepared Cards—X. Dice—XI. High Ball Poker—XII. Roulette and Allied Games—XIII. Sporting-Houses—XIV. Sharps and Flats—Postscript.

 This book will constitute a complete exposure of the methods and devices employed in cheating at the present day, and a revelation of the whole of the secrets of the modern gaming sharp. It will be a work absolutely unique of its kind, nothing at all approaching it having ever before been published in any language.

Apart from its value as a warning to those who are addicted to any form of gambling, it is a book which will prove, it is hoped, of the utmost interest to the general public, showing, as it does, the capabilities of trickery. Swindling of any kind is only rendered possible by the fact that the public have so little knowledge of what can be accomplished by unfair means, and this applies more particularly perhaps to unfair practices in play than to any other subject.

WILL PUBLISH SATURDAY, MARCH 24:

An Island Garden.

By CELIA THAXTER, author of "Drift-Weed," "Among the Isles of Shoals," etc. With twelve full-page illustrations in color; and several smaller ones, by Childe Hassam. In a handsome octavo volume, very attractively bound, $4.00 net.

Mrs. Thaxter, who has spent a large part of her life on Appledore, the largest of the Isles of Shoals, here describes the flower-garden by her cottage, which is one of the chief attractions of the islands and the wonder of the thousands who visit them every summer. The illustrations reproduce the beauty and the blazing splendors of the garden, and the corner within the cottage where the hostess welcomes and charms those whom she delights to honor.

Brave Little Holland, and What She Taught Us.

By WILLIAM ELLIOT GRIFFIS, D.D., author of "Japan," "The Lily Among Thorns," "Matthew Calbraith Perry," etc. With illustrations. 16mo, $1.25. In Riverside Library for Young People, small 16mo, 75 cents.

Dr. Griffis has made three visits to the Netherlands, and by careful study of Dutch historians and also of Dutch-American archives has amply prepared himself to tell the noble story of Holland, and to show the influence which that country exerted upon the Colonial, Revolutionary, and Constitutional founders of American order and liberty.

Does God Send Trouble?

By CHARLES CUTHBERT HALL, D.D., of Brooklyn, author of "Into His Marvellous Light." Crown 8vo, $1.00.

This book is an attempt, founded on an interpretation of the New Testament, to break from the influence of that religious phraseology which attributes calamity, suffering, sickness, and death to the will of God. While wholly evangelical it is a radical departure from the beaten track, and its tendency is to invest the subject of consolation with fresh beauty and sweetness.

A Bird-Lover in the West.

By OLIVE THORNE MILLER, author of "In Nesting Time," "Bird-Ways," "Little Brothers of the Air," etc. 16mo, $1.25.

In this Mrs. Miller relates, with even more than her customary enthusiasm and charm, her delightful bird experiences and observations in Ohio, Utah, and Colorado. The freshness of the field, the new varieties of her beloved "little brothers of the air," and her positive skill in describing their habits, give to her new volume an interest even greater than that of her previous books, good and engaging as those were.

Bayou Folk.

By KATE CHOPIN. 16mo, $1.25.

Under this title Mrs. Chopin includes several tales drawn from life among the Creoles and Acadians of Louisiana. They are faithful, spirited representations of unfamiliar characters and customs, but picturesque and altogether worthy of description and literary preservation. The dialect of these semi-aliens is given, but not at such length as to be tedious; and it distinctly aids in imparting to the stories a genuine "local color." These stories are quite unlike most American tales, and cannot fail to attract much attention.

Printed chiefly from a Manuscript Monograph introductory to a unique volume in the possession of GEORGE SHEA, the pages of which are inset with all the original correspondence and other proof of that historical event. 8vo, cloth, $1.25.

A Satchel Guide

For the Vacation Tourist in Europe. Edition for 1894, revised. With maps, plans, money tables. "Complete, concise, accurate." $1.50.

NOTES IN SEASON.

FUNK & WAGNALLS CO. will publish in May a volume entitled "Five Minute Object Sermons to Children," a series of sermons preached before the main sermon on Sunday mornings, by Dr. Sylvanus Stall, author of "Methods of Church Work," which the author is said to have used with great success in filling an empty church in Baltimore.

MACMILLAN & CO. have just ready F. Marion Crawford's new novel, "Katharine Lauderdale," the first of a series to describe the career of an American family after the manner of the author's treatment of the Saracinesci. The story is issued in two dainty volumes illustrated by Alfred Brennan. On April 3 they will publish Mrs. Ward's new book, "Marcella."

T. Y. CROWELL & CO. will, next month, add to their Library of Economics and Politics a volume on socialism, by Professor Richard T. Ely, of the Wisconsin University. This work, which has been in preparation for several years, will treat the subject historically, descriptively, and critically. It promises to be a notable addition to the literature of this topic, which is already one of the most important questions of the day.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING CO. are bringing out a volume entitled "The Life and Later Speeches of Chauncey M. Depew," comprising the most notable of the speeches and addresses made by Mr. Depew within recent years, and including the Columbian oration delivered at the dedicatory ceremonies of the World's Fair, at Chicago, the address delivered at the laying of the corner-stone of the Grant monument at Riverside Park, and many other happy contributions to conventions and festivities. The book will be uniform with the former volume of "Orations and After-Dinner Speeches," and there will also be an edition of 100 copies on fine paper in half leather binding.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS announce a translation of a recent French work entitled "The Life of Saint Francis of Assisi," by the Rev. Paul Sabatier. The book is of an important character, as it is perhaps the first attempt to portray the most attractive figure of the Middle Ages—as in many respects Saint Francis may be called. Its chief interest is biographical, as any life of so extraordinary a personality as Saint Francis', must be, but it is hardly less a picture of the century in which Saint Francis lived and of which he was the central personage. It is written from a critical, and not from either an enthusiastic or a sceptical, standpoint, and discusses the various questions associated with Saint Francis in the spirit of modern research and absolute candor, while at the same time its tone is thoroughly sympathetic.

D. APPLETON & CO. announce a new edition, thoroughly revised, of Smith's "Classical Dictionary;" "General Washington," by Ceneral Bradley T. Johnson, in the Great Commanders series; "Creatures of Other Days," by the Rev. Dr. H. N. Hutchinson, author of "Extinct Monsters;" "Aërial Navigation," by J. G. W. Fijnje, translated and revised by Colonel George E. Waring, Jr.; "Evolution of the Public School System in Massachusetts," by G. F. Martin; and "Symbolic Education," by Susan E. Blow. In fiction they have in preparation "A Daughter of To-Day," by Sara Jeannette Duncan; "Cleopatra," by Georg Ebers; "Red Diamonds," by Justin McCarthy; "Outlaw and Lawmaker," by Mrs. Campbell-Praed; "Dust and Laurels," by Mary F. Prenderel; "A Beginner," by Rhoda Broughton; "A Yellow Aster," by "Iota"; "The Trail of the Sword," by Gilbert Parker; and a new, as yet unnamed, novel by the author of "Dodo."

Crawford, F. Marion. Katharine Lauderdale; il. by Alfred Brennan. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1894. c. '93. 2 v., 4+332; 4+336 p. il. por. S. cl., $2. [851

With this novel Mr. Crawford begins a series which deals with the fortunes of two American families, the Lauderdales and the Ralstons, in the same manner as the stories of the Saracinescas were given us. The love and jealousy, the strife and intrigue, the romance and commonplace, which enter into their lives are graphically pictured in a thoroughly American atmosphere. The background of this volume is New York City; the characters belong to the "400"; Jack Ralston, the hero, is a "failure" from a business point of view, and is addicted to drink. A secret marriage he enters into with his cousin Katharine Lauderdale is the motive. The author indulges in many philosophical remarks about heredity, the drink habit, etc., etc.

Dana, Mrs. W: Starr, [Mrs. Frances Theodore Dana.] According to season: talks about the flowers in the order of their appearance in the woods and fields. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1894. c. 5+159 p. T. cl., 75 c. [855

"In that the aim of this little volume is the stimulation of an observant love of nature, and especially the increase of knowledge about our plants, it is similar to 'How to know the wild flowers.' But in each book this has been attempted in so different a mood and manner that I feel confident that neither encroaches upon the province of the other. The present classification—if a word so suggestive of technicalities can be used—is 'according to season' and incidentally, locality, enabling the reader to start upon each tour of discovery with so clear a notion as to what he may expect to find, and where he may expect to find it, as materially to increase the chances of a successful expedition."—Preface.

Fuller, J:, sr. Art of copper-smithing: a practical treatise on working sheet-copper into all forms. N. Y., D: Williams, 96-102 Reade St., 1894. c. '93. 8+327 p. por. il. O. cl., $3. [863

The material embraced in this work first appeared as a serial in The Metal Worker. The author acquired proficiency in copper-working through a long apprenticeship and many years of actual labor at the bench. The instruction he gives is therefore entirely practical. A special feature is the illustrations, which add not only to the interest but to the value of the text, as they show the work in all stages of progress and illustrate all the appliances, patterns, and tools. The work is divided into sections, each treating a separate topic, and is thoroughly indexed. The style of writing is exceedingly simple and the descriptions of work go into the smallest details.

Gage, Simon H: The microscope and microscopical methods. 5th ed. rev. and enl. and il. by 103 figures in the text. Pt. 1 of the microscope and histology. Ithaca, N. Y., Comstock Pub. Co., 1894. c. 7+165 p. il. O. cl., $1.50. [864

Remains in general plan like former editions—that is, definitions and discussions are followed by laboratory experiments, in which the student makes the demonstrations for himself. It is printed only on the left-hand page, thus leaving the right blank for notes. The figures have been increased from about 50 to 103 and have been distributed in the text instead of being collected into plates. In matter, the book has been increased from 96 to 165 pages; this is due in part to the elaboration of the old text and in part to a wholly new chapter, "On photo-micrography and on photographing natural history specimens in a horizontal position with a vertical camera." The author "hopes that the book as it now appears may, while remaining strictly elementary, still more fully meet the needs of those who wish to use the microscope for serious study and investigation."

King, C: Waring's peril. Phil., The J. B. Lippincott Co., 1894. 230 p. D. cl., $1. [883

The time is in the "sixties" just after the war; the place, the barracks of regular U. S. troops in a southern city; the officers and their wives, and the usual "hangers on" of a camp, the characters. The incidents illustrate the lights and shadows of military life, and are evidently drawn from actual knowledge and experience. Lieut. Waring, the hero, and his colored servant Ananias, are deliciously humorous; Ananias fully deserving his name. An escapade of Waring's, which leads to an accusation of murder, is well worked up.

This volume completes the series of "Columbian historical novels." It begins with the events leading up to the Rebellion, reviews Buchanan's administration, and shows the weakness of his character. Lincoln then takes his place and steers the helm of the ship of state successfully through the storm of four years' civil war. A deep mystery and an intricate plot in the narrative, and in which the central figure is Elsie Cole, is finally worked out at the close of the story, which ends with John Wilkes Booth making love to Maggie Mitchell, his proposal and his rejection; the assassination of President Lincoln, and the death of Booth. The romance of the narrative ends with the year 1865. Following is a full and complete statement of leading events in our country's history down to 1894.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Tourney is a new magazine devoted to the discussion of sociological subjects. It is published at Fort Collins, Col., and edited by Grace Espy Patton. The first (March) number contains several interesting papers.

THAT famous London book-store of Robert Dodsley, called "Tielley's Head," where Johnson, Pope, and other literary lights of the seventeenth century gathered, is delightfully redescribed by Austin Dobson in Scribner's for April.

THE ALPHA PUBLISHING CO., 212 Boylston Street, Boston, has assumed the publication of Babyland and Our Little Men and Women, formerly published by D. Lothrop Company. The company will also act as advertising and subscription agents for The Pansy.

AFTER a private existence of seven years The Hobby Horse has been granted a new lease of life, and will continue to be issued quarterly in a limited edition to subscribers only. It will be under the editorship of Herbert P. Horne, and besides its illustrations the magazine will contain articles upon literature, music, painting, sculpture, architecture, and the decorative arts; poems; essays; fiction; and original designs, choicely printed in quarto form upon hand-made paper. The American market will be supplied by Copeland & Day, 69 Cornhill, Boston.

A NEW magazine called the Midland Monthly is issued at Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Johnson Brigham is the editor, and he hopes to make his magazine truly representative of the Middle West, which for some reason has not as yet achieved the literary recognition its native talent has merited. The first two numbers contain stories by Octave Thanet and Hamlin Garland, who have both done much to bring the West to its desired place in literature.

THE first issue of the first Greek newspaper to be printed with Greek types in the United States made its appearance in New York City March 3. Its name is Atlantis. It has four pages, and is well printed. It appeals not only to the Greeks, but to those Americans who are studying the language of the ancient Greeks. The Atlantis is printed in modern Greek, a knowledge of which will aid the student of the tongue in which Homer sang. The Atlantis will print full information about the findings in the various excavations made about Athens by the different schools there. It is published under the auspices of the Greek Society of this city. The advertisments are in English. Haik is the title of another Greek journal published from 202 W. 23d Street, New York.

over one billion pieces of mail matter are handled there every year; it is the clearing-house for the money-order business of the United States; its registry department is far larger than that of any other office in the country; its revenues and accounts are enormous; through it are transmitted all the stamps, the value of which runs up to many millions a year; and the forces in its employment are large. Yet the allotment out of its revenues for its own support is but 36 per cent., while that of Philadelphia is 49; that of Baltimore, 55; that of Boston, 41; that of San Francisco, 48; and that of many other offices, nearly as large.

THE statute prohibiting the sending to a debtor a postal-card on which is written a demand for a debt having been construed in so many and various ways, the Postmaster-General has given an opinion on the matter that is certain to be of general interest. Two postal-cards were submitted to him. On one was written "Please call and settle account, which is long past due and for which our collector has called several times, and oblige." The other contained these words: "You owe us $1.80. We have called several times for it. If not paid at once we shall place with our law agency for collection." The Postmaster-General, on the decision of an eminent judge, stated that the first card was mailable and that the second was not. The logic of this decision is that whenever a threat, direct or implied, is written upon a postal-card, the latter under the law is unmailable.

A NEW FRENCH BOOK-TRADE CATALOGUE.

IN 1859 Charles Reinwald, of Paris, undertook to furnish an annual catalogue of all French books issued in Paris and throughout the world for the benefit of the book trade of France, and still more for the book trade of foreign countries. It seemed that such a useful undertaking, bound to further the sale of French books in foreign countries, would be appreciated and supported. This did not happen, however. From 1858 to 1869 Reinwald published his catalogues, the one for the latter year not appearing until 1872. Reinwald proposed compiling a combination catalogue for the years 1870 and 1871, and then to continue the annual regularly in future. But the volumes did not appear. After six years Otto Lorenz, the bibliographer, who assisted Reinwald from the beginning of his scheme, decided to risk the great undertaking once more, and brought out the "Catalogue annuel" for 1876. In his preface Lorenz pointed out the absolute necessity of such a catalogue, but although it seems incredible, he also came short of the needed support, and could not bring out the catalogue for the following year. That an enthusiastic bibliographer like Lorenz, who had for many years proved his devotion to his art by the publication of the "Catalogue général de la librairie française," should become discouraged speaks volumes for the lack of appreciation, even in France, of the true value of bibliographical work. And now a third attempt is made by D. Jordell, who has compiled the "Catalogue annuel de la librairie Française pour 1893," which has just been published by Per Lamm (Librairie Nilsson), again showing that there are still men full of the courage of their opinions and willing to do needed work which may wait long for tangible appreciation. It is to be hoped that a fourth attempt will not become necessary.

It is interesting to compare the three undertakings with one another and also with the official Journal général de l'imprimerie et de la librairie. Reinwald's first catalogue for 1858 contained about 4000 titles, and the issue for 1869 about 400 more. Lorenz's catalogue for 1876 included 4500 titles, while the alphabetical list of the Journal Général contained about 13,000. In the new catalogue for 1893, the Journal Général gives about 14,000 titles, of which D. Jordell has only accepted about 6000 as legitimate titles of books and pamphlets, rigidly excluding all such publications as only have an ephemeral use and duration of importance. Mr. Jordell who will be remembered as the editor of the continuation of Lorenz's "Catalogue Général de la Librairie Français," (1840–1885) has planned his work strictly on the lines of the Reinwald and Lorenz catalogues, but in place of the classified index he has made an alphabetical list of titles and an alphabetical list of subjects, referring from the catchword to the author's name.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY has removed to 10 East Twenty-third Street, New York, from the building which has been its home from the beginning. This removal has elicited some interesting facts as to the early work and later development of the society. It was organized, as already mentioned, in 1825, for the avowed purpose of diffusing Christian knowledge and promoting religious living and sound morality by the issue of publications "calculated to receive the approbation of all evangelical Christians;" among its chief organizers were Dr. Spring, of the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Milner, of the Episcopal Church, Dr. Payson, of the Congregational Church, Dr. Sommers, of the Baptist, and Dr. Milledoler, of the Dutch Reformed Church. How well the society has fulfilled its purpose may be inferred from the numbers of certain books it has put in circulation. It may be interesting to know that it has issued 472,767 copies of "Pilgrim's Progress," 512,000 of Baxter's "Call to the Unconverted," 832,877 of "New Drops," 400,000 New Testaments, with notes, 141,000 Nelson "On Infidelity, 141,000 Pike's "Persuasives to Early Piety," 181,000 Doddridge's "Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul," 263,550 Baxter's "Saints' Rest." 339,240 "Songs for Little Ones at Home," and 223,260 Bible dictionaries. The society emp'oys annually about 150 colporteurs, who carry its publications to the foreign-speaking and tenement-house population of the large cities as well as to the more remote country communities; it publishes seven periodicals, two of them in German; while for its foreign constituency it issues many books and tracts in German. French, Welsh, Dutch, Norwegian, Danish, Swedish, Hungarian, Finnish, Bohemian, Polish, and Hebrew.

THE AMERICAN PATERNOSTER ROW.

WITHIN an incredibly short space of time Fifth Avenue, from Tenth to Twenty-third Streets, has attracted to itself and its immediate vicinity almost the entire wholesale book trade—indeed at the present there are but two important exceptions —Harper & Brothers and D. Appleton & Co., and of these the latter may be expected to locate themselves in that neighborhood probably within a year. Among the later arrivals are Charles Scribner's Sons, on the east side, between 21st and 22d Streets, whose handsome new building will be ready for occupancy about the 1st of May. The Presbyterian Board will become the neighbors of the Methodist Book Concern, having purchased the property at the N. W. corner of 20th Street and Fifth Avenue. The American Baptist Publication Society will occupy the first floor up in the new building at the N. E. corner of 21st Street and Fifth Avenue, adjoining Scribner's. Hamilton Gordon, the music publisher, will occupy the new building nearing completion on the east side, of Fifth Avenue two doors above 20th Street. The Merriam Company (formerly the Price-McGill Co.) will take the store at present occupied by Charles L. Webster & Co., at 67 Fifth Avenue. Webster & Co. will remove to the floors above. J. Selwin Tait & Sons are rapidly getting into shape in their new quarters at 65 Fifth Avenue. The American Tract Society has just removed its headquarters to 10 East 23d Street.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

THE WAVERLY PUB. CO. vs. H. RIDER HAGGARD.

JOSEPH A. ARNOLD, president of the Waverly Publishing Company, has brought suit in the United States Circuit Court to recover $10,000 damages from H. Rider Haggard.

In June, 1892, the Waverly Publishing Company issued a reprint of Haggard's story, "Nada, the Lily." Haggard's publishers, Longmans, Green & Co., of No. 15 East Sixteenth Street, secured a temporary injunction restraining the Waverly Company from selling the book, on the ground that it was copyrighted. The case was argued in the United States Circuit Court of New Jersey and the injunction vacated. Now, Mr. Arnold, to whom the Waverly Company has assigned its claim, brings suit for damages sustained while the sale of the book was interfered with. The suit was brought in the Court of Common Pleas, but was a few days ago removed to the United States Circuit Court.

Mr. Arnold said to a Mail and Express reporter:

"The case involves the constitutionality of the International Copyright law. There is a clause in that law which gives the President, whenever he is satisfied that a country grants substantially the same copyright privileges to the citizens of the United States that it does to its own citizens, power to proclaim copyright to the citizens of that country, in the United States.

"It gives the President judicial power in deciding whether a country grants substantially the same privileges to our citizens that it does to its own, and it is on this ground that the constitutionality of the law will be questioned. In my opinion the works of no foreign author have been legally copyrighted since the International Copyright law went into effect."

BOOK PRODUCTION IN BOHEMIA.

THE Society of Bohemian Publishers and Booksellers began the issue in Prague in December last of Knihkupecky oznamovatel, a fortnightly book-trade journal, edited by Jos. M. Hovorka, a well-known Bohemian writer and bookseller.

In a recent issue Mr. Hovorka prints the following statistics of the book production in Bohemia during the last fourteen years: In 1880 1126 works were printed, of which 200 were books, the remainder pamphlets, music, periodicals, and daily and weekly journals. Ten years later the number grew to 2154, of which 1499 were books and 438 periodicals. In 1893 the number of books amounted to 1517; the periodicals 507, and musical compositions 419, making a total of 2443—a remarkable showing for a country in which the freedom of the press is a mere name.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ANNISTON, FLA.—W. F. Allen has sold one-half interest in his book and stationery business to D. F. Constantine, Jr.

ASHLAND, OHIO.—D. W. Brandt has purchased Bailey's book-store.

BATH, ME.—John O. Shaw, bookseller and stationer, whose stock was recently burned out, would like to have catalogues and price-lists to aid in selecting his new stock.

BOSTON, MASS.—The receiver of D. Lothrop Company has just paid the first 25 per cent. of the claims against the company. It is reported that in time the company expects to pay every cent of its indebtedness.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—Judgment has been rendered against Adam Becker, bookseller, for $1000.

DETROIT, MICH.—Herman Reif, the well-known bookseller and stationer, celebrated on March 3 the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of his business. The day was also the sixtieth anniversary of his birth and the fortieth anniversary of his arrival in Michigan.

MOBILE, ALA.—S. Bidgood's book and stationery store was destroyed by fire on the night of the 17th inst.

NEW YORK CITY.—Bowden & Smith have removed to 744 Broadway, where they will continue their business in second-hand books.

NEW YORK CITY.—Emile Amblard, of the firm of Amblard & Meyer Brothers, has brought suit against his partners, Louis and Paul Meyer. We understand that the action is intended rather to effect a dissolution of patnership and to obtain an accounting than to prove bad faith, as has been hinted at in certain newspaper reports. The Messrs. Meyer claim to have offered Mr. Amblard a bond, with proper securities, to pay at maturity all creditors' claims in full, provided Mr. Amblard retires from the firm.

NEW YORK CITY.—The following removals are reported to take place May 1: John Ireland, to 1192 Broadway; M. W. Jones, to 18 East 17th Street; Van Cleeve-Andrews Pub. Co., to 18 East 17th Street.

OMAHA, NEB.—Evan Wyman, bookseller, has sold out.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

DR. GEORGE SANTAYANA, of the Department of Philosophy at Harvard, is about to publish a volume of verse.

ROBERT BUCHANAN has just finished a novel of Yorkshire working-class life, which he entitles "Rachel Dene."

M. ZOLA'S novel, "Lourdes," will be published serially in the New York Herald, beginning on April 15 and running through the Sunday issues for probably three months.

A LIFE of the late Lucy Larcom is being prepared by the Rev. Dulaney Addison, of Beverley, Mass., who asks for the loan of letters in possession of her friends that may be helpful to him.

THE real name of Henry Seton Merriman, whose novel, "With Edged Tools," is now running anonymously through The Cornhill Magazine, is H. S. Scott, the author of "The Slave of the Lamp."

THE name of the author of "The Story of Margrédel," which was withheld during its serial publication in Blackwood's and from the title-page of the book, is now announced to be David Storrar Meldrum.

F. MARION CRAWFORD has written a new novel, to be published in the Lady's Pictorial during the latter half of this year. The second volume in Mr. Crawford's series of novels illustrating New York life will be published in the fall, and be entitled "The Ralstons."

DR. CONAN DOYLE, who is still at Davo Platz, has practically completed his new novel, which will be entitled "The Stark Monro Letters." Dr. Doyle meditates publishing his long-promised collections of medical stories and papers in the fall. Some of them have already appeared serially in the Idler.

DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY has nearly completed a one-volume novel, "A Capful of Nails." It deals with the life of the nail-makers, and is founded on fact. It will first appear in serial form. Mr. Murray is also engaged on a series of detective stories, à la "Sherlock Holmes," shortly to be commenced in the Woman at Home.

PROF. E. B. POULTON, who occupies the Hope Chair of Zoölogy at Oxford, has recently delivered courses of lectures on "Mimicry in Nature" at the Lowell Institute in Boston, at Columbia College in New York, and in a circle of other colleges. His discourses—illustrated with high artistic skill, and delivered with rare charm of manner—have created widespread enthusiasm. Prof. Poulton's theme has been admirably presented in his "Colors of Animals," in the International Scientific series—a title which but imperfectly suggests the scope of his valuable work.

NOTWITHSTANDING all rumors to the contrary, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes has definitely decided that he will not give his memoirs to the public during his lifetime. In a recent conversation Dr. Holmes remarked: "I work at the memoirs an hour or two each day, and am making satisfactory progress. That is, I have about one-half completed of all I shall write. Then I shall place the manuscript in the hands of my publishers, and they will keep it in their safe until I shall have passed away. My belief has always been that a man's memoirs should be distinctly posthumous, and I shall carry out that belief in my own case."

As soon as Coulson Kernahan (the author of "A Dead Man's Diary") has his volume of essays, "Sorrow and Song" (a title, by the way, used by Henry Curwen about twenty years ago for some of his "literary struggles"), out of hand, he proposes setting to work on a volume which is to bear the singular title of "Dead Faces." It is to be a "somewhat uncanny book," says the London Literary World, "and likely to be quite out of the common. A few of the studies will be entirely supposititious, but in some the reader will be brought in imagination to stand by the death-bed of real persons (Heine, the German poet, and Pranzini, the French murderer—though his death-bed was the scaffold—for instance); and from that standpoint a light will be cast as it were over their past lives, and some attempt made to lift the curtain of the future."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE CHARLES H. SERGEL CO. will shortly publish a "History of Bohemia," by R. H. Vickers.

THE biography of Sir Richard Owen, which his grandson has been writing, is to be published in England in May.

STONE & KIMBALL, of Chicago and Cambridge, have adopted the short-discount system, and will allow only 25 per cent. to the trade.

THE rumor that the publication of Heinemann & Balestier's English Library has been discontinued is officially contradicted in London.

IT is estimated that in England 5,071,000 copies of books are published in a year, which are sold at a total of £760,650 or an average of three shillings a copy.

THE JEWISH PUBLICATION SOCIETY OF AMERICA (Philadelphia) will shortly bring out the third volume of Graetz's "History of the Jews," and "Papers of the Jewish Women's Congress," Chicago.

THE WASHINGTON PUB. CO., Washington, D. C., announce a book entitled "The Show at Washington," describing life at the national capital by two correspondents—L. A. Coolidge and J. B. Reynolds.

IT has been decided that in 1896, 1898, and 1900 there shall be no Bampton Lectures. The reason is that the property which provides the endowment will in those years itself need the income for improvements.

WE notice that Ludwig Rosenthal, of Munich Bavaria, has for sale a good copy of the first edition (Harrisse No. 22) of Vespucius' "Mundus Novus" (circa 1502), one of the rarest early books on America, which is offered for $2500.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. will shortly publish the "History of Trade Unionism" upon which Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Webb have long been closely engaged. Previous work by both writers in the field of social science will make many persons look forward with especial interest to this book.

THE annual dinner of the London Booksellers' Society has been fixed to take place on April 14 at the Holborn Restaurant. The Lord Mayor has intimated his intention of being present on the occasion and taking the chair, and he is to be supported by several authors of note and many leading publishers.

THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' CLUB will give a smoker on the evening of the 27th inst., to which every one who wishes may go. No invitation is needed—use Mr. Knott's name and it will be "O. K." The club has suspended its initiation fee for the present, with the result that 200 solid men have joined the club since the first of the year.

CHARLES MITCHELL, the pugilist, alleges that the book published by Dick & Fitzgerald, entitled "Manual of Boxing, by Charley Mitchell," has been placed on the market wholly without his assistance, knowledge, or consent. His lawyer, Louis J. Grant, has applied to Judge McAdam at Special Term of the Supreme Court for a temporary injunction against the further sale of the book.

H. GREVEL & CO., London, have just published "Rare Book-Plates (Ex libris) of the xvth and xvith Centuries," by Albert Dürer, H. Burgmair, H. S. Beham, Virgil Solis, Jost Amman, etc., edited by Frederick Warnecke, the edition limited to one hundred copies; and they have in press, in a limited edition, "Art in Book-Plates," illustrated by forty-two original ex-libris, printed in colors in the style of the little masters of the 16th century, by Josef Sattler.

THE Numismatic and Antiquarian Society of Philadelphia has changed its headquarters to the School of Industrial Art. Prof. Fenollosa is giving the same series of lectures on Japanese art at the Pennsylvania Academy which he has been delivering in New York at the Berkeley Lyceum. The dates are March 5, 9, 12, and 16, in the afternoon. A club like the Grolier has been founded, called the Philobiblion. It will republish rare books and hold special exhibitions for bookworms and bibliomaniacs.

KING & LEONARD, Dublin, Texas, call attention to a neat compilation entitled "Citations of the Colorado Supreme and Appeal Court Reports," designed to show what cases have been mentioned in subsequent cases and to refer the practitioner and the judge to every case in which a former opinion has been cited, thus showing the present value of every decision as an authority and enabling the practitioner to present all of the authorities on any subject and the judge to ascertain readily the weight of authority. The volume is interleaved so the citations may always be kept up to date. Many commendations from important law firms have pronounced this book very useful.

DR. ISAAC K. FUNK's appeal for a new trial in his unsuccessful libel suit against the New York Evening Post has been denied at the General Term of the Supreme Court. The prevailing opinion of the court written by Presiding Justice Van Brunt and concurred in by Justice O'Brien, is that the judgment below be affirmed on the waiving by the defendant of the extra costs allowance of $750 granted by Justice Lawrence at Circuit. The only question presented to the General Term was as to the right of the appellant, Dr. Funk, to a reversal on the ground that upon the evidence and the charge of the trial judge he was entitled to a verdict for nominal damages at least.

PUBLICATION OFFICE, 28 ELM STREET (NEAR DUANE), NEW YORK.

VOL. XLV., No. 13. NEW YORK, March 31, 1894. WHOLE No. 1157

In Preparation for the RIALTO SERIES.

A FLOWER OF FRANCE.

A Story of Old Louisiana. By MARAH ELLIS RYAN, author of "Merze," "In Love's Domains," "Told in the Hills," "A Pagan of the Alleghanies," and "Squaw Elouise."

"A Flower of France," Marah Ellis Ryan's forthcoming novel, is a work of extreme and well-sustained interest. The old days of Spanish and French occupation of Louisiana are portrayed with the irresistible vigor distinctive of this author. Based on a foundation of revolution and murder a tender love-story is reared, characterized by a charming delicacy of touch and warmth of coloring, and saturated with the spirit of a romantic past.

THE TWO-LEGGED WOLF.

From the Russian of N. N. KARAZIN. Illustrated by the author. A romance of modern Russian military life. Nature and man, war and peace, are treated with the vivid realism characteristic of the best Slavonic literature of to-day. The incidents of wild adventures and hard-fought battles lose none of their interest from being founded on fact.

The Red House.

By "THE DUCHESS."

His Will and Hers.

By DORA RUSSELL.

Joseph Balsamo.

By ALEXANDER DUMAS. These translations of these famous works are exceptionally vivid and true to the original text, and retain in a marked degree the charming literary style of the author.

The Heir of Redclyffe.

HENKELS, Auctioneer. This valuable and extraordinary collection of Autograph Letters, Engraved Portraits and Views, was formed by the late

COL. CHAS. COLCOCK JONES, LL.D., Historian of Georgia,

The collection of Engraved Portraits and Views of New York, Boston, St. Louis, Baltimore, Niagara Falls, Mount Vernon, and other interesting localities throughout the United States, is the most important that has ever come under our observation, whilst the Broadsides contain many that relate to the Revolution, and which are of the utmost rarity.

In the Collection will also be found many scarce maps, as well as quite a long list of Georgia and South Carolina Continental Paper Money, containing many rare varieties.

The Catalogue enumerates so many important items, that it would be impossible for us to draw special attention to them singly. We have therefore added an Index, and a glance at it will more readily convey an idea of the character of the whole.

Sabrina, becoming enthusiastic over Pearl's idea, furnishes not only the means, but a grand old house for the furtherance of the scheme, which, in accordance with Pearl's fancy, is called "In the king's country." The story tells how Sabrina and Pearl co-operated in their good work, what came of it, and finally gives a romantic incident in the life of the heroine.

A young woman who had been betrayed and deserted is found starving, with a babe of a few days, by a poor but warm-hearted doctor, in a London lodging-house. She is induced, through certain reasons, to give up her child, marry a rich man, and go out with him to Australia. The child is amply provided for, and becomes the daughter of a Jewish family named Cohen. They give her a parents' love and tenderness, and raise her in their faith, though she is a Christian. The power of heredity is shown in her subsequent career. In the character of her supposed father, Aaron Cohen, a very noble and honorable type of Jew is represented.

Garrigues, H: J., M.D. A text-book of the diseases of women. Phil., W. B. Saunders, 1894. c. 3+690 p. il. col. pl. O. cl., net, $4; shp., net, $5. [969

An exhaustive book on the diseases of women other than those covered by the special science of obstetrics. It is wholly practical, avoiding theoretical discussions and treating the pathology very briefly. Anatomy is treated discursively, because the text-books as yet have not satisfactorily described this branch except in the science of gynecology, and most of the large encyclopedic works are beyond the reach of the general practitioners and students for whom this work is specially intended. The chief object has been to give modes of treatment as practised in America. Many of the illustrations come from the writer's own operations, dissections, and microscopical examinations. Dr. Garrigues is by birth a Dane. He is Prof. of Obstetrics in the New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital, and holds many other highly responsible posts as consulting obstetrician.

The scene is an English country parish, in which a young, athletic, worldly, good-natured rector is trying to please his patrons by introducing ritualism. The hero of the book is the old, low-church, spiritual man, who has spent his days as curate-in-charge. £30 given for a new article of chancel furniture disappear, and circumstantial evidence is puzzling for many months. The curate's wife and daughter and the rector's young girl cousin are remarkably well-drawn characters.

Griffis, W: Elliot. Brave little Holland, and what she taught us. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1894. c. 6+252 p. il. D. cl., $1.25. Same, 16°, (Riverside lib. for young people.) cl., 75 c. [972

Three visits to the Netherlands, and a careful study of Dutch historians and also of Dutch-American archives were the preparations made for writing this history of Holland. Its chief aim is to show the influence which that country exerted upon the Colonial, Revolutionary, and constitutional founders of American order and liberty. The language is simple, and the narrative within the comprehension of young readers.

Hall, C: Cuthbert, D.D. Does God send trouble? An earnest effort to discern between Christian tradition and Christian truth. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1894. c. 4+98 p. D. cl., $1. [973

Dr. Hall dedicates this volume "to all who sorrow over the sorrows of humanity." Its five chapters treat "The problem of Consolation," "The relation of God to natural law, to chastisement, and to discipline," "The historic atonement and the punishment of sin," "The will of God and the tendency of nature," and "The duty, the comfort and the power of prayer." The tone is inspiring and the style attractive.

The Haj caravan had just started on its annual pilgrimage from Bagdad to Mecca, when Obeyd Alee, a young Turkish official, travelling as the guest of the prince in command of the caravan, was surprised at an untimely hour, by the sudden entrance into his tent of a beautiful Bedouin girl, who was flying from an Arab sheikh, who would forcibly make her his wife. Obeyd rescues Feydeh, as the girl is called, places her under the protection of a good man, who educates her. Feydeh becomes a beautiful woman, and loves her first benefactor. Her story is one of love, jealousy, and intrigue, with scenes from eastern life, as the women of the Orient know it at present.

ing that she can make Margaret subservient to her by exercising hypnotic influence, brings her power to bear on the girl. The results of her machinations are seen not only in the life of Margaret but in the life of the hero.

Pure thought, high aspiration, and a considerable gift for musical expression characterize this memorial volume, of which the best thing that can be said is that it not inadequately expresses the spirit and the life of its author."

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MARCH 31, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE SPRING OUTLOOK.

ALTHOUGH business is wearyingly slow in picking up, yet it is moving, with a favorable turn toward confidence and an enlarged demand for goods to meet the requirements of the people whose needs are beginning to make themselves felt. In brief, the conviction that the country has "turned the corner," in a business sense, is gaining ground, and the prospect is decidedly brightening. Though the spring and summer may bring with them but doubtful proof of this, hopes are generally entertained that by fall business may put itself into something like normal condition.

As it is, the book trade through all the panic has suffered less than almost any other branch of trade from which we have had reports. Publishing activity during the past six months, or, more strictly speaking, up to within two months, has been without abatement; if anything, it has been a trifle more than normal. Since the beginning of February there has been a tendency to put on the brakes, which can but be considered a healthy sign.

We think there has been decidedly too much unhealthy activity in the publishing world here as well as abroad. A few weeks ago we gave a glimpse of the conditions of the book trade and literature in France. They are not much better in England, nor anywhere else, excepting possibly in Germany, where a rigid trade organization, and more conservative and scientific publishing methods, generally, tend to preserve the equilibrium.

The tendency of modern publishing, as in other trades, has been towards over-production, without regard to the capacity for consumption. This has brought about a congestion that has entailed unnumbered hardships upon the bookseller, has rendered the public apathetic, and is beginning to react on the publisher. So, for instance, during the past season the publishers have had no trouble in disposing of the new books—the fads of the hour—while their best books of previous seasons rested idly in their bins. There is no overlooking the fact that books require leisure to read, and that the publisher who markets a few books well will in the end fare better than the one who indifferently tumbles many into the market.

As will be seen in the classified lists and descriptive summary, as well as in the advertising pages of this Spring Announcement number, a famine of books is by no means impending. Almost the usual quantity is in preparation, and a careful reading of the list leads to the conclusion that the quality is fully up, if not beyond, last year's standard, which had already improved on that of former years. Juvenile literature, which swells the quantity of publications during the year most noticeably, takes no place in Spring Announcements, and almost all dainty books and holiday literature are as yet unnamed volumes. Biography, history, education, political and social science, and, of course, fiction, will have many additions of notable quality. Several valuable works of reference and solid books of science will also encourage the bookseller to invest his capital profitably. The advertising compares even more favorably than last year with the announcements, and makes one of the most representative lists of the publishers preparing new books that we have had for several seasons. It is fair to say that the unrepresented publishers, with but one or two exceptions, have really decided to wait for more propitious times before incurring new expenses.

IT has been suggested by a number of dealers that those answering wants in our "Books Wanted" column use, as often as possible postal-cards of a uniform size, the one now manufactured by the government ($3\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ in.) being in most cases ample for a considerable number of titles. When the bids take up more room than a postal-card affords, they should be written on half-note paper and folded to the size of a No. 6 envelope and endorsed with name of sender. Such bids could be more easily filed away for future reference than the varying ones now received, written on letter and half-note paper and the three sizes of postal-cards which will probably be current for some time to come. It has also been suggested that if a uniform code of signs—such as n for new, g for good, w for worn, p for poor condition—were adopted much space and time could be saved in describing the books offered. The following sample is offered as a standard to be adopted, whether the bid is made by postal-card or slips of the size of a postal-card :

n, new; g, good; w, worn; p, in poor condition.

ANOTHER ORIGINAL EDITION OF POE'S "TAMERLANE."

THE American Press Company, of Baltimore, has made a remarkable literary "find." It is a copy of the exceedingly scarce original edition of Edgar Allan Poe's first volume of poetry, entitled "Tamerlane and Other Poems." Until the spring of 1892 only one copy was known to be in existence, and that was the imperfect one in the British Museum. In April, 1892, C. F. Libbie & Co., of Boston, at an exciting auction sale, sold to Dodd, Mead & Co. a perfect copy of this rare book for $1850. Dodd, Mead & Co. sold the book for $2500 to a private buyer, who sent it to Paris to have it bound at a cost, we believe, of $300.

The copy just discovered by the American Press Company, of which Mr. Eugene L. Didier, author of a life of Poe, is the leading spirit, was picked up in a second-hand book-store in Boston over sixty years ago, and has remained in the possession of the then purchaser ever since. It is in an excellent state of preservation, and is worth its weight in gold ten times over. The book is a sixteenmo of 40 pages (about 4¼ x 7⅝ inches) and has the following title:

TAMERLANE AND OTHER POEMS.
BY A BOSTONIAN.

"Young heads are giddy, and young hearts are warm,
And make mistakes for manhood to reform."—COWPER.

BOSTON:
CALVIN F. S. THOMAS, PRINTER.
1827.

Collectors have an opportunity to secure this literary treasure for $1625 before it is put on the market. After that the price will be raised several hundred dollars.

AN ENGLISH SOCIETY OF ILLUSTRATORS.

A SOCIETY of illustrators has just been organized in London. The wonder is, says a writer in the New York Post, "that one was not instituted sooner, for the close competition in English illustrated journalism and the prevailing low standard, which is the outcome of the average English editor's preference for cheapness, have made such an association eminently desirable for some years past. The object of the society is to accomplish for illustrators what the Society of Authors is supposed to do for writers, i. e., to protect their interests and defend their rights, lending them the strength that always comes from union. All the most distinguished black-and-white men in the country have already joined it, and as it is hoped to give the organization something of an international character, it ought to appeal to Americans as well as to Englishmen. The main objects are reduced to four heads. First, there is to be an endeavor to insure the making of contracts and agreements between editors and illustrators, such as are now made between editors and authors, and to allow the illustrator some share of responsibility in the reproduction of his work. Secondly, there will be an effort to amend and perfect the present artistic law of copyright, which is still in the haziest and vaguest condition, and thus to place some restriction upon the indiscriminate traffic in clichés. Third, to take in hand the publication of illustrated catalogues of current exhibitions, in order to do away with some of the abuses from which the artist suffers under the present system. And, fourth, to hold occasional shows of the drawings of the great illustrators, and gradually, by such reminders of what good work is, raise the art to the dignity it once enjoyed. Surely, these are legitimate and important ends, with which every intelligent editor and publisher, as well as artist, must be in sympathy."

DESCRIPTIVE SUMMARY OF THE SPRING ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE descriptive summary which here follows presents as usual, in its alphabetical arrangement by publishers, a survey of the entire field, so far as the necessary information is at hand. Other books, not yet fully determined upon, will find mention in subsequent issues. In our announcement lists proper, the books will be found arranged by classes, while the advertising pages will afford further detailed information as to prices, sizes, styles, etc.

THE AMERICAN BOOK CO.'S spring announcements will be found under the heading Education, Language, etc., in the classified list preceding this department.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY have in preparation "Assyrian Echoes of the Word," by Rev. Thomas Laurie, who tells in interesting fashion of the progress that has been made in the field of Assyrian archæology and the results obtained; he aims to show that many of the royal inscriptions and many of the incidents of daily life recorded on the Assyrian tablets illustrate and confirm the records of Scripture, and are thus "echoes of the word." They also announce "The Starry Skies," a popular account of the wonders of astronomy, by Agnes Giberne, written for young people and intended as a companion volume to the same writer's "Sun, Moon, and Stars" and "Among the Stars;" "Rachel's Farm," a breezy country story for boys and girls, by Annette L. Noble; and a dainty little booklet by Mrs. George A. Paull, called "Consolation for Mothers with Empty Arms." The revised and enlarged edition of "American Heroes on Mission Fields," announced last year, will be brought out this spring. The society has recently begun the publication of a series of paper-covered religious stories, sold at four cents each; the series is entitled Books for Everybody. This house, after having been established for sixty-nine years —or since its organization in 1825—at 150 Nassau St., New York, has recently removed to 10 E. 23d St., directly opposite Madison Square.

D. APPLETON & CO. have several valuable historical works, either just ready or almost ready to be issued, among the most notable of which are "Memoirs of the Baron de Meneval, Private Secretary of Napoleon I.," a man of the pen, not of the sword, but who came so closely in contact with Napoleon to the close of 1815 that he is able to shed new light on many features of the Napoleonic campaigns. It is the grandson of the Baron de Meneval whose privilege it has been at last to present to the world these fascinating pictures of Napoleon's daily life. The manuscript memoirs left by his ancestor have been intelligently prepared for the press, and the publication, awaited with deep interest by those who have learned of the existence of this work, is now close at hand. It will be published in three volumes with portraits. The second volume of Mr. Edgar Stanton Maclay's "History of the United States Navy" will close the War of 1812, describe the various incidents of consequence in our naval records down to 1861, present a full naval history of the Civil War, and describe the building up of the new navy; and special events, like the disaster at Samoa, and, more recently, the part taken by the navy in Brazil. In his study of naval actions in the Civil War the author has been aided by Admiral Jouett, and other officers who shared in the actions described. "General Washington," the new volume in the Great Commanders series, is by General Bradley T. Johnson, a Virginian, who will be found a most competent biographer and well-equipped critic in dealing with Washington on the military side, while his comprehension of Washington's personality sheds much light on the understanding of his hero as a man. In fiction the announcements are very interesting. There will be a new novel by the author of "Dodo," of which the title is not yet made public; "A Daughter of To-Day," by Mrs. Everard Cotes, who as Sara Jeannette Duncan has secured herself a waiting audience; "Cleopatra," the novel of Egyptian life on which Dr. Georg Ebers has been engaged for many years, a modest self-distrust having held him back until he had mastered his theme and reached the full development of his powers; "The Trail of the Sword" and "The Trespasser," by Gilbert Parker, a story now running in Lippincott's; "Red Diamonds," by Justin McCarthy; "Outlaw and Lawmaker," by Mrs. Campbell-Praed; "Dust and Laurels," by Mary F. Prenderel; "A Beginner," by Rhoda Broughton; and "A Yellow Aster," the successful English story written under the pseudonym of "Iota" by Mrs. Caffyn. Among the further announcements we briefly note a new edition, thoroughly revised, of Smith's "Classical Dictionary;" "Creatures of Other Days," by the Rev. Dr. H. N. Hutchinson, author of "Extinct Monsters;" "Aërial Navigation," by J. G. W. Fijnje, translated and revised by Col. George E. Waring, Jr.; "Evolution of the Public School System in Massachusetts," by G. F. Martin; "Symbolic Education," by Susan E. Blow; and the long-expected "Life of Dr. Edward L. Youmans," by John Fiske.

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON will bring out during the spring the seventh series of their Expositor's Bible. The six volumes of this series will comprise "The Epistle to the Romans," by the Rev. H. C. G. Moule; "The Second Book of Kings," by Ven. Archdeacon Farrar; "First and Second Books of Chronicles," by Rev. Prof. Bennett; "The Book of Psalms," third and concluding volume, by Rev. Alexander Maclaren; "Second Epistle to the Corinthians," by Rev. James Denny; and "The Book of Numbers," by Rev. R. A. Watson. They have just ready the first five volumes of a most useful series of Bible Class Expositions, by Rev. Dr. Alexander Maclaren, specially designed for Sunday-schools and Bible classes, and consisting of expositions of the International Sunday-School Lessons, grouped under the books of Scripture to which they relate. The present series comprises "The Gospel of St. Matthew," in two volumes, "The Gospel of St. Mark," "The Gospel of St. Luke," and "The Gospel of St. John;" they should prove admirable not only for Sunday-school teachers and superintendents, but for private reading and as a commentary on the portions of Scripture treated.

ARNOLD & CO. announce that they have purchased the plates of William Hardcastle Browne's "Bible Heroes," and are now making a new edition of the book, which will be brought out in improved form. They are also preparing a new edition, from type, of John Crombie Brown's "Ethics of George Eliot's Works," which has been out of print for about two years.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR CO. will publish in April "With the Wild Flowers," a "rural chronicle of our flower friends and foes," by E. M. Hardinge, who describes in a delightfully simple and chatty manner the flowers of each season of the year, carrying the reader "through the spring, summer, and autumn, from pussy-willows to thistledown;" "The Amateur Aquarist," by Mark Samuel, the aquarist of Columbia College, a capital manual, full of useful information for any one starting or possessing an amateur aquarium, and containing complete instructions as to management and details of care; and "Christianity Practically Applied," the report of the Proceedings of the Evangelical Alliance of the United States, held at Chicago in 1893, to be issued in two volumes. One volume will be devoted to the doings of the General Conference, the other to the Sectional Conference, and together they will form an admirable exposition of contemporary methods in this field of religious work. This house has just issued "The Friendship of Jesus," an Easter booklet, by Rev. Frank Samuel Child.

BAKER, VOORHIS & CO. will have several important books in their special field, full titles of which will be found elsewhere in this issue, under the heading Law.

BENZIGER BROS. will shortly publish "The Data of Modern Ethics Examined," by Rev. John J. Ming, S.J., of Canisius College, and "The Means of Grace," a popular exposition of the sacraments, the sacramentals of the church, and of prayer, adapted from the German of Rev. Herman Rolfus and Rev. F. J. Brändle, by Rev. Richard Breman, LL.D.

ROBERT BONNER'S SONS announce three new novels: "A Princess of the Stage," a romantic love-story, from the German of Nataly von Eschstruth, telling of the transformation of a hoydenish little country girl into an elegant young lady; "Countess Obernau," an adaptation from the German, by Julien Gordon; and "The Gun-Bearer," a story of the great rebellion, by E. A. Robinson.

BRENTANO'S have three new books on whist: "Duplicate Whist and Whist Strategy" and "American Leads and How to Lead Them," both by R. F. Foster, and both exhaustively treating the specialties of their subject, bound prettily in appropriate board covers, uniform with the author's former "Whist Manual;" and "Modern Scientific Whist," by C. D. P. Hamilton, a digest by a practical whist player, that will be appreciated by beginners for its simplicity and clearness, and by an expert for its comprehensiveness; beautifully printed in red and black, with upwards of 500 illustrations. Brentano's also announce "The Epicurean," a complete encyclopædia of the culinary art, by Charles Ranhofer, the chef at Delmonico's, New York City.

THE BURROWS BROTHERS CO. have in press for early publication a new limited edition of the famous "Lincoln and Douglas Debates" of the Illinois campaign of '58. The volume will also include the speeches made by Lincoln and Douglas before the debates at Chicago, Springfield, and elsewhere, as well as the two great speeches made by Lincoln in Ohio in 1859. The edition, which will be limited to 750 numbered copies, will be printed from type at the University Press, Cambridge, on fine laid paper; the volumes will be royal octavo, bound in buckram. This publication will be especially welcome, as the original (1860) edition of the "Debates" is now so scarce that the book is almost unprocurable.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING CO. announce "The Life and Later Speeches of Chauncey M. Depew," to be issued in a regular edition and in an autograph édition de luxe, limited to one hundred numbered copies, signed by the author; "The Story of Our Planet," an important work by Prof T. G. Bonney, of the London University College, fully illustrated and supplied with maps and six colored plates; "Portrait and Figure Painting," a thorough exposition of the details of the subject, by Frank Fowler; and two notable contributions to Biblical literature—"New Light on the Bible and the Holy Land," an account of some recent discoveries in the East, by Basil T. A Evetts, formerly of the Assyrian department of the British Museum, and "Plain Introductions to Books of the Bible," in two volumes, covering the Old and New Testaments. A number of new novels are in preparation; they comprise: "Broken Links," a love-story by Mrs. Alexander; "The Awkward Squad, and other stories," by Shan F. Bullock; "A Fair Jewess," by B. L. Farjeon; "The Iron Pirate," a stirring sea story, by Max Pemberton; "The Man in Black,' by Stanley Weyman; "The Romance of a Transport," by W. ROBERT CLARKE & CO. have in preparation "Recollections of Life in Ohio from 1813 to 1840," by William Cooper Howells, father of William Dean Howells, who furnishes an introduction. Although primarily personal memoirs, Mr. Howells' recollections relate to a most interesting period in the history of the state, and narrating, as they do, the experiences of a family of Quakers, transplanted from the English border of Wales and confronted with all the novel hardships of the backwoods, they cast considerable light on the picturesque, if uncomfortable, conditions of "settlement" life at the close of the pioneer epoch. The book will be issued in a limited edition. They also announce "Queen Moó and the Egyptian Sphinx," by the archæologist and Egyptologist, Dr. Augustus Le Plongeon, a careful collection of evidence tending to show that traces of the civilization and science of the ancient Mayas of Central America are to be found in India, Egypt, and other distant regions; "Judaism at the World's Parliament of Religions," containing the papers read at the Jewish Denominational Congress, the Jewish Women's Congress, the Jewish Presentation at the Parliament and the Parliament proper, covering the latest phases of Jewish thought and forming a valuable contribution to Jewish literature in this country; and a reprint, in a limited edition, of J. Ralston Skinner's "Source of Measures," a curious treatise on the origin of the British inch and the ancient cubit. This book, first published in 1875, has for some years been out of print; the new edition will include a supplement of sixty-three pages to the original work, printed in 1876 by Mr. Skinner, for private distribution.

W. B. CONKEY CO., Chicago, have devoted themselves most successfully to the manufacture of books that are to perpetuate the memories of the great Columbian Exposition. They are to bring out the official edition of "The Congress of Women Held at the Woman's Building, World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893," illustrated with numerous portraits, which will give the biographies, addresses, and other matters of interest prepared under the judicious editorship of Mary Kavanaugh Oldham Eagle, Chairman of the Committee on Congresses of the Board of Lady Managers; and "The Photographic World's Fair and Midway Plaisance," with 217 magnificent illustrations, in which every detail of the great enterprise can be followed and enjoyed. They have already issued "The World's Parliament of Religions."

COPELAND & DAY have from the start issued books which in typographical details and the minutiæ of manufacture have maintained an admirable standard. One of their handsomest new publications will be a series of designs by Walter Crane, illustrating Shakespeare's "Tempest," printed on Japanese silk paper, mounted on cardboard, and issued in a portfolio, each set signed by Mr. Crane; of this only two hundred copies have been made for America. Oscar Wilde's one-act tragedy, "Salome," has been translated by the author from his French version, recently issued in Paris, and will be brought out in a limited edition, with a cover-design and ten full-page illustrations by Aubrey Beardsley. They will also have a volume of essays by John Davidson, entitled "A Random Itinerary with a Ballad," for which a frontispiece and title-page have been designed by Lawrence Housman; "Cuckoo Songs," by Katherine Tynan Hinkson, with cover-design and title-page by Housman; "Poems," by John B. Tabb, with cover and ornaments designed by George Edward Barton; a volume of poems by Dr. Richard Garnett, with a title and half-title, by Illingsworth Kay; a third edition of Richard Le Gallienne's "English Songs;" and a third edition of Francis Thompson's "Poems," with cover-design and frontispiece by Lawrence Housman.

DODD, MEAD & CO. have several new books in preparation. "The Poets and Poetry of the Century," their encyclopædia of modern poetry "covering the area of greater Britain and the limits of the nineteenth century," is issued in eight volumes, completing the scheme of the work from George Crabbe to Rudyard Kipling. This cyclopædia is edited by Alfred H. Miles, and the plan is to represent each poet in his variety, giving such biographical details as will illustrate the verse, and supplying a critical summary of each writer's work. The critical and biographical notices are by foremost writers, such as Dr. Furnival, Austin Dobson, J. Addington Symonds, Robert Bridges, and others, and the work bids fair to be a most voluminous and important anthology. "The Journal of Martha Pintard Bayard" will be interesting to lovers of biography and history. It is edited by S. Bayard Dod, and will be issued in an attractive little sixteenmo volume. Mrs. Bayard's journal covers the period from 1794 to 1797, and is an excellent picture of London life at that time. She was the wife of Samuel Bayard, who was appointed by Washington agent of the United States in the British Admiralty courts under the Jay treaty, and consequently was brought in intimate contact with many of the foremost statesmen—American and English—of her time; the pages of her journal bristle with notable names, whose owners are described with lucidity and force. They also announce "Courage" (Vaillance), a new book by Charles Wagner, author of "Youth," who treats in his earnest and enthusiastic style of the attributes that go to make up the quality of courage; "Intentions," Oscar Wilde's little volume of essays, is to be brought out in a new cheaper edition; and there will be a handsome large-paper edition of Dobson's "Proverbs in Porcelain," illustrated by Bernard Partridge, with impressions of the illustrations on India paper, beautifully printed and bound. In fiction there will be "Bogland Studies," Jane Barlow's charming pictures of Irish life, brought out in a new revised edition, uniform with her "Irish Idyls;" "Links in a Chain," a novel by Margaret Sutton Briscoe, and "The Lone House," a new story from the pen of Mrs. Barr; while the many young girls who have followed Miss Finley's "Mildred" through half a dozen volumes of varied experiences will welcome the seventh volume in the Mildred Series, to be called "Mildred's New Daughter." A work deserving special mention will be Charles A. Hildeburn's "Bibliography of New York Imprints," uniform with his "Pennsylvania Imprints," of which only 350 copies will be issued, and which will be invaluable to collectors of America.

WILLIAM DOXEY, San Francisco, will publish "Doxey's Guide to San Francisco and Surroundings, and to the Pleasure and Health Resorts of California," by Arthur H. Barendt, a careful and comprehensive account of the history, characteristics and chief points of interest of San Francisco and of the most attractive regions of California and Southern California, which should be specially useful to intending tourists.

E. P. DUTTON & CO. announce a revised edition, with all the notes, of Archdeacon Farrar's "Life of Christ," in which the author says in his preface: "I have done my best to improve and amend this edition in many ways, and have added not a few points of interest." The balance of the former edition without the notes will be reduced after the new edition is on the market. George H. Hepworth's two little books, "Hiram Golf's Religion" and "They Met in Heaven," are selling briskly, and booksellers may be sure they can sell these books if they will only show them and suggest their drift to customers. The Preachers of the Age series has now grown to eighteen volumes, all of which are published in uniform 12mos with photogravure portraits.

JAMES H. EARLE, Boston, has in preparation a volume containing the reports, papers and proceedings of the "International Congress of Sunday Rest," one of the Chicago World's Congresses, held in the interest of establishing a common basis toward a "world's rest day," and attended by representatives of the Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish faiths, as well as by leading workers in many fields of labor. Dunnett, the "singing evangelist;" "From Shadow to Sunlight," a volume of twenty-two short stories by "Mizpah"; "Counter-currents," by Rev. Dr. Williams; "Chords of light," a year-book compiled by Effie E. Blodgett, containing daily selections of poetry and Bible verses for a year; and "Success and its Achievers," an account of the lives of some successful men, by William W. Thayer, to be added to the Log Cabin Series.

GEORGE H. ELLIS has three books by Protap Chunder Mozoomdar, entitled "The Spirit of God;" "Heart Beats," a book of meditations, with portrait and biographical sketch of the author; and a new edition of "The Oriental Christ," all three books that cannot fail to give readers of whatever religious conviction a deep insight into the real meaning of religion as sense of duty, love and service.

Hinton; and "Five-Minute Object Sermons for Children," preached before the main sermon on Sunday mornings, by Rev. Sylvanus Stall. Pike's "Expeditions and Discoveries through the West and Southwest, during the years 1805–1806–1807," carefully edited by Dr. Elliott Coues, to be issued uniform in style with the recent Coues' edition of Lewis and Clark's Expedition, which has met with prompt and deserved success.

HARPER & BROTHERS have in preparation a goodly array of books, to be published during the spring and early summer. R. Green's "Short History of the English People" will complete one of the most remarkable pieces of book-making of the past few years. From an anonymous writer will come "The Jewish Question and the Mission of the Jews," a thoughtful contribution to one of the most interesting questions of the day; the unknown author studies the Jew as a type, as an influence and as a "problem" of growing importance in the history of civilization, and pleads not only for tolerance, but for fraternity and for the according of a wider liberty of thought and action to the Hebrew race. "Portraits in Plaster, from the Collection of Laurence Hutton," will be the title of a little volume describing Mr. Hutton's fine collection of the death-masks of famous men, illustrated with reproductions of some of the more remarkable of the masks. There will also be two capital books of description—"Our English Cousins," by Richard Harding Davis, and "The Wee Ones of Japan," by Mae St. John Bramhall. In the first are gathered the graphic papers on English life which appeared during the past year in Harper's Magazine; in the second Mrs. Bramhall tells how the Japanese baby looks, acts, is cared for, disciplined and amused; she has a fresh and sympathetic feeling for the "wee ones" she describes, which gives a special charm to the book, and the many excellent illustrations by C. D. Weldon add not a little to its interest. For the young housekeeper—and for her older sisters as well—there will be a most useful little manual called "The Expert Waitress," in which Anne Frances Springsteed describes the duties of a skilled waitress and gives many helpful hints as to the care of dining-room and pantry, the best ways of caring for silver, lamps, etc., and the many details that go to make up good housekeeping. The fiction promised is especially attractive. There will be a new volume of short stories by Thomas Hardy, grouped under the striking title of "Life's Little Ironies;" "Cadet Days," a capital tale of West Point life by Captain Charles King, who writes con amore of the drills, the studies, and the jolly escapades at the big "military academy"; "Out of Step," a clever story of New York and Boston life, in which Maria Louise Pool traces the married life of the heroine of "The Two Salomes"; "Pembroke," Miss Wilkins' remarkable novel of New England life—said by some critics to be her finest work—which appeared as a serial in Harper's Weekly; "The Phantom of the Footbridge, and other stories" of Tennessee life, by Miss Murfree (Charles Egbert Craddock); "Pastime Stories," by Thomas Nelson Page; "Perlycross," R. WILLIAM R. JENKINS has in preparation a work entitled "The Foot of the Horse," by David Roberge, who has been closely associated with Mr. Robert Bonner for twenty-five years in his study and practice of the art of horseshoeing. One of the most novel and interesting features of the book is the statement that lameness and all diseases of the foot are traced to an unbalanced foot bone, and Mr. Roberge declares that all lamenesses and diseases may be prevented by simply balancing the foot. The book will be fully illustrated, showing improved methods of shoeing horses, etc., and its preparation has been the life-work of the writer. This publisher will also issue several new books in his specialty of French fiction arranged for school reading; full titles of these will be found in the classified list in this issue, under the heading Education, Language, etc.

Opper, and is really a remarkably clever piece of fooling.

LOVELL, CORYELL & Co. announce two new books—"How Like a Woman," a novel by Florence Marryat, telling the story of a girl who defies the conventionalities of society and sets aside Mrs. Grundy's precepts to follow the instincts of her own heart; and "Mr. Bailey-Martin," a piquant picture of the modern English snob, by Percy White, a young British novelist, who portrays the weaknesses and foibles of his subject with keen satire and telling humor. Burn Murdoch's "From Edinburgh to the Antarctic," an illustrated journal made by Mr. Burn Murdoch, the artist, during a voyage in a whaling barque belonging to the Dundee Expedition of 1892–93, in which, besides reproducing with his pencil the natural beauties and characteristics of the surroundings, he describes the many incidents of life on board a sailing ship in a long ocean voyage, and the perilous experiences in Antarctic ice; Mr. Murdoch's journal is supplemented by the "science notes" made by the three naturalists of the expedition. There will also be "On the Wallaby," a book of travel and adventure in Australia, by Guy Boothby, the title being derived from the Australian slang expression "on the wallaby," meaning "on the march," and generally applied to persons tramping the bush in search of employment. Bjornstjerne Bjornson's drama, "The Gauntlet," has been translated by Osman Edwards, and is said to be the first of this writer's plays to be submitted to an English audience; it is a picture of Norwegian family life, in which the heroine throws down the gauntlet to society, by her claim that "a man should live as strict a life as a girl." Grosart from the works of Robert Greene, one of the sweet but little known singers who flourished in the later years of the sixteenth century, and "The Poet of Poets," love-verses from the minor poems of Edmund Spenser, representing some of his choicest, imperishable work. The selections from Spenser are also made by Mr. Grosart, who as editor of the series has shown fine critical perception.

Thomas Nelson & Sons will publish shortly the Oxford edition of the "Thumb Prayer Book" for the American Church, in which larger print will be used than in any miniature edition yet published, as the peculiar quality of the genuine "Oxford" paper, which the Nelsons alone can procure from the paper mills of the Oxford Press, renders it possible to compress an incredible amount of matter into the tiny shape. Every imaginable style of binding has been devised for the dainty books, lists of which can be procured from the New York house on application.

Jas. Pott & Co. will soon issue the Bedell Lectures for 1893, on "The Witness of the Church to Pure Christianity," by Rev. W. A. Leonard, Bishop of Ohio. Sanders Reed, a careful and thorough study of the historic episcopate, which should prove a valuable addition to the literature of the subject; "The Catholic Religion," a manual of instruction for members of the English Church, by Rev. Vernon Staley, who enforces the dogmatic and doctrinal teaching of his church in earnest language and with unfaltering boldness; and two preceding works of the same writer—"Plain Words on the Holy Catholic Church" and "Plain Words on the Incarnation"—which have met with approval and success in England. The first volume of Geikie's "Hours with the New Testament," covering "The Gospels," was issued some time since, and will be followed in May by the second volume, which treats of "St. Paul;" these volumes cover the Sunday-school lessons for 1894. Three or four important medical works are announced, titles of which appear in the classified list under the heading Medicine, Hygiene, etc.; and several works of social and political interest are also grouped there under the heading of Political and Social Science. Of religious interest will be the vol. 6 of "The Papers of the American Society History;" "The Apostolic Age of the Christian Church," translated by James Millar from the second and revised edition of Carl von Weizsäcker's important work; and "The Life and Teachings of Jesus," a critical study by Arthur K. Rogers. Among the very newest announcements of this house are "The Lives of Twelve Bad Men," edited by Thomas Seccombe, of Balliol College, Oxford, and composed of original studies of the lives of noted scoundrels from various hands; "Prince Henry the Navigator" (of Portugal), by C. R. Beazley, in The Heroes of the Nations; and "Canadian Independence, Annexation, and British Imperial Federation," by James Douglas, in The Questions of the Day Series.

RAND, MCNALLY & CO. have a new novel by Marah Ellis Ryan, the talented author of "A Pagan of the Alleghanies;" "Told in the Hills" and other strong books, which will be entitled "A Flower of France," and will deal with the old days of the Spanish and French occupation of Louisiana. These publishers will also issue "The Two-Legged Wolf," from the Russian of N. N. Karazin, who has illustrated his book himself; "His Will and Hers," by Dora Russell; and "The Red House," by "The Duchess." ANSON D. F. RANDOLPH & CO. have just ready "The Story of Two Noble Lives," by Augustus J. C. Hare, the well-known author of "Walks in Rome" and "Memorials of a Quiet Life." Charlotte, Countess Canning, and Louisa, Marchioness of Waterford, are the women whose "noble lives" are described with rare appreciation and force. Both were women of high position in the social and political world, and their letters—from which Mr. Hare has drawn most of his material—are a store-house of interesting information relating to important personages and noteworthy political happenings. Lady Canning's journals cover the Sepoy mutiny and other historical events in India. The work is issued in three handsome octavo volumes, with fine portraits and many illustrations. This firm announces a new edition of Mrs. Norton's "Lady of La Garaye," printed on hand-made paper, with portrait and etched title-page, artistically bound. are for sale; and a new edition of James L. Ford's clever "Hypnotic Tales," first published two or three years ago.

ROBERTS BROTHERS will, during the spring, bring out several volumes of their Columbian Knowledge Series, which they have had in most careful preparation for many months. The series is edited by Prof. David P. Todd, of Amherst, and the initial volume on "The Total Eclipses of the Sun" is written by his wife, Mrs. Mabel Loomis Todd. Sixteen volumes of this series are already planned, which will furnish information on their subjects up to date of the most advanced knowledge of the Columbian year. Their precise succession is not quite certain, but the volumes now under way include "Public Libraries in America," by William I. Fletcher, Librarian of Amherst College, than whom there is none more fitted to tell of the public library movement, its history and significance, laws, relations to the people, management, classification, cataloguing and other minor details, which will be beautified by fine views of eighteen of the handsomest and most important libraries in the country; "Stars and Telescopes," by Prof. Todd, being the seventh edition of "Celestial Motions," by William Thyne Lynne, with extensive additions; and "Aërial Locomotion," and "Our Coal, and How to Conserve It," by authors not yet named for publication. Two fascinating books devoted to out-door life may be looked for in "By Moorland and Sea," by Francis A. Knight, author of "By Leafy Ways," who has made his own illustrations; and "Wayside Sketches," by Eben J. Loomis, full of observations of nature in America, as seen in the birds, brooks, buds, etc. A new volume on art is also announced, to be entitled "Art for America," written by William Ordway Partridge in the form of essays upon the true education and the false, an American school of sculpture, the outlook for sculpture in America, etc. Miss Wormeley has also nearly finished another of her remarkable translations of Balzac, which is devoted to his famous story of "Catherine de Medicis."

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS have prepared several new volumes for their series of Lubbock's 100 Best Books; they are Lord Lytton's translation of the "Odes and Epodes of Horace;" Wordsworth's poetical works, illustrated by Birket Foster, Wolf, and Sir John Gilbert; the "Plays of Aristophanes, Sophocles, and Euripides," translated by Frere; and Gray's poems and Pope's "Essay on Criticism." They will bring out Abbé Prévost's "Manon Lescaut" as one of the dainty pocket-size volumes of the Nelumbo Library; and have added some thirty volumes of standard literature, chiefly fiction, to their Hearth and Home Library.

THE SCHULTE PUBLISHING CO. will issue early in April, by authority of the Publishing Committee of the International Congress of Anthropology, held in Chicago in connection with the other World's Congresses of the Columbian Exposition, the "Memoirs" read before the congress; these will form a large octavo vol-important papers on physical anthropology, archæology, ethnology, folk-lore, religions, and linguistics; it will be sold by subscription. They have in preparation a new edition, the fourth, of ex-Governor William Larrabee's book on "The Railroad Question;" a fifth edition of Art. Young's remarkable satire, "Hell up to Date;" and "The Giant Cyclopedia," by K. L. Armstrong, the latter to be sold only by subscription.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have several important works in preparation. "The Sherman Letters" is one of the most noteworthy. It covers a correspondence between General William Tecumseh and Senator John Sherman, beginning with General Sherman's West Point days and extending to February, 1891, and is unique in furnishing a familiar and intimate record of and commentary upon the events of American history during this period, and the various actors in them, by two persons, themselves participants and men of unusual power and penetration. The fraternal discussion is often from opposite standpoints—a fact which lends it special interest, and the men and measures of the war epoch, the growth of public sentiment, and the gradual formulation of principles which finally triumphed in the new Union are clearly and graphically described. Somewhat similar interest attaches to General Dabney Herndorn Maury's "Recollections of a Virginian in the Mexican, Indian, aud Civil Wars," which will have an introduction by Thomas Nelson Page. General Maury's varied military service brought him in contact with many eminent men, regarding whom he has an abundant supply of racy anecdotes, while, besides describing his diversified personal experiences with vivacity and humor, he gives an admirable picture of the courtly life of old Virginia and touches more seriously upon the thoughts and emotions to which the war gave rise. Of the "Pasquier Memoirs," the second volume has just been issued, and the third is promised during the early summer. There will also be "Josiah Gilbert Holland, a Memoir," by Mrs. H. M. Plunkett, a life-long friend of Dr. Holland, who describes with affectionate zeal his early struggles, his prompt successes in education and literature, his estimate of his own achievements, and the sources of his strong and lasting influence with the "plain people." Mrs. William Starr Dana, whose charming book on "How to Know the Wild Flowers" was one of the successes of last summer, will have an equally delightful narrative called "According to Season," in which she describes the wild flowers which the stroller in field and wood may find at each season of the year, and which admirably supplements her first and more comprehensive work. There will also be a new book by Dr. Charles A. Stoddard, who, after travelling "Across Russia," and describing "Spanish Cities," now turns his steps "Beyond the Rockies," and gives us the benefit of his observations, experiences, and reflections during a journey by the southern route to California, for whose beauties and wonders he has a keen and appreciative eye. Two or three new books in lighter vein are promised. Robert A. Bridges, the "Droch" of Life will have a delightfully original little volume called "Overheard in Arcady," made up of a series of dialogues, originally printed in Life, between the famous characters in the stories of Howells, James, Aldrich, Stockton, and Barrie, in which the creations of the novelist discuss his works with candor, appreciation, wit, and humor; it will be illustrated by Oliver Herford, F. G. Atwood, and A. E. Sterner. There will also be "On the Offensive," a new story of army life on the plains, by George I. Putnam, author of "In Blue Uniform;" "Salem Kittredge, and other stories," a volume of short tales by Prof. Bliss Perry; and a new edition of Frank Stockton's "Ardis," to be issued uniform with Scribner's edition of the author's other books. This house has also in preparation a second edition of "The Life and Letters of Dean Stanley," and they have just issued "Basal Concepts in Philosophy," an important contribution to philosophic literature, by Prof. A. T. Ormond, of Princeton, and "The Chess Pocket Manual," a convenient and admirable little handbook, intended not only for the beginner but for the more expert chess-player.

JOHN M. SCUDDER & SONS have several medical works in preparation, titles of which are fully given elsewhere under the heading Medicine and Hygiene.

CHARLES H. SERGEL COMPANY have in press for immediate issue a "History of Bohemia," by R. H. Vickers. They also announce two new novels, "A Yellow Aster," by "Iota"; "Mam'zelle Beauty," by Miss Marian Crawford, a new American writer of the Bertha M. Clay "school;" and a new paper-covered edition of Souvestre's "Attic Philosopher in Paris."

SPON & CHAMBERLAIN announce a number of new books and new editions in their special field of mechanical science and useful arts; full titles will be found under the heading Arts and Sciences, in the classified list preceding this department.

STONE & KIMBALL have in preparation a number of books of unusual literary merit, which will be brought out in fine limited editions, with all the accessories of good paper, tasteful printing and appropriate decoration. Poems and selections of verse make up almost the entire quota. Grant Allen will have a little volume of lyrics with the quaint title "The Lower Slopes: reminiscences of excursions round the base of Helicon, undertaken for the most part in early manhood," with a title-page by J. Illingsworth Kay. The "Plays" of John Davidson, comprising "An Unhistorical Pastoral," "A Romantic Farce," "Bruce," "Smith," and "Scaramouch in Naxos," will form a small quarto volume, with frontispiece and cover-design by Aubrey Beardsley. "A Lover's Diary" is the title of a collection of sonnets by Gilbert Parker, the young English novelist, for which Will H. Low has furnished a frontispiece; it will be printed at the De Vinne Press and brought out in two editions—one of 450 copies on antique paper, the other of fifty copies on Dickinson hand-made paper. From Maurice Thompson, the singer of the "good greenwood," comes "Lincoln's Grave," a poem, printed at the University Press, and also issued in two editions; Hugh McCulloch will have "The Quest of Heracles, and other poems;" and there will be a little volume of vers de société, called "When Hearts are Trumps," by "Tom Hall," whose clever rhymes have long been known to readers of Life and the current magazines. Miss Carman's book of poems, "Low Tide on Grand Pré," has been transferred to these publishers, who will issue it in a revised and enlarged edition. They will also publish Stuart Merrill's "Poems of the Symbolists," translations from the works of Paul Verlaine, Stéphane Mallarmé, and others, to be issued in a first edition of 600 copies on small paper and seventy-five copies on large hand-made paper; George Santayana's "Sonnets, and other poems," and "Selections" from the poems of Thomas Gordon Hake, edited with an introduction by Mrs. Meynell (Alice C. Thompson) and supplied with a portrait after a drawing by Dante Gabriel Rossetti. In prose there will be "Arthur O'Shaughnessy, his life and his works," by Louise Chandler Moulton; Frances Adams' "Essays in Modernity;" and a new edition of Hamlin Garland's "Prairie Folks," uniform with "Main-Travelled Roads" and "Prairie Songs." All of the books bearing the imprint of this new firm are models of good taste in bookmaking. In the case of nearly every book already mentioned, besides the regular edition, from fifty to seventy-five copies will be brought out in limited "de luxe" style.

J. SELWIN TAIT & SONS announce three new paper-covered series, in which they will bring out some excellent books. Their Illustrated Series will have for its first two issues "The Soul of the Bishop," by John Strange Winter, and "Told by the Colonel," W. L. Alden's collection of clever and amusing tales; the Kenilworth Series will start with "Americans in Europe," a stinging description of American life abroad, first published last summer, "What One Woman Thinks," Mrs. H. Holt Cahoon's clever essays on social and domestic life, and "Cavalry Life in Tent and Field," by Mrs. O. B. Boyd; while in the Idler Series will be issued "Mrs. Clift-Crosby's Niece," by Ella C. Hurlbut; "The Doomswoman" and "Before the Gringo Came," a story of California life, by Gertrude Atherton. They will also bring out Knauff's "Physical Culture" in a substantial twelvemo. The following volumes are announced as just ready in their National Library of 200 Best Books: "Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table," "Elsie Venner," "House of the Seven Gables," "The Lady of the Aroostook," "The Marble Faun," Bret Harte's poems, Lowell's poems, Longfellow's poems, and Tennyson's poems. These are all copyright American books, now issued in uniform shape, with new illustrations made especially for this series, and handsomely bound in half calf.

THE UNIVERSALIST PUBLISHING HOUSE have in press "Back to the Old Testament for the Religion of the New," a treatise on the religion of the Old and New Testaments and their mutual relations, by Dr. A. B. Curtis, of Tufts Divinity School; "Our Word and Work for Missions," presenting the representative thought of the Universalist body upon that subject, and edited by Rev. Henry W. Rigg; and "The Purpose of God," by J. Smith Dodge, Jr., D.D., who aims to present a system of theology which shall make clear the Universalist teachings upon the problems of life and nature. They announce a new revised edition of "A Book of Prayer for the Church and the Home," with selections from the psalms by Rev. C. H. Leonard, dean of the divinity school of Tufts College.

WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN, LTD., have in preparation "Half Hours with the Hindus," "Scenes and Stories from the Land of Idols," and "Pictures of Life in India," all by Rev. John J.

Pool, who describes Indian life, from a missionary standpoint, with interesting detail and personal earnestness; two new novels, "The Monk of Mar Saba," by Joseph Hocking, and "The Fool of Fate," by Mary H. Tennyson; and two useful manuals for students of electrical science —"The Electrician at Home" and "Electrical Apparatus for Amateurs," both edited by Francis Chilton-Young.

CHARLES L. WEBSTER & CO. have in press for early publication "Joanna Traill, Spinster," a new story by Annie C. Holdsworth, one of the younger English novelists. It deals with the question of individual "rescue work" among fallen women, and the difficult subject is said to be handled with delicacy as well as with power, while the possible solution of the problem suggested has a considerable element of practicality. This will be shortly followed by Mark Twain's new story, "Tom Sawyer Abroad," in which "Huck Finn," the irrepressible, describes the remarkable experiences of himself, Tom Sawyer, and Nigger Jim, in a trip abroad, made in an extraordinary conveyance and attended with even more extraordinary happenings.

THOMAS WHITTAKER has in preparation several important contributions to religious literature. He announces as nearly ready the Boyle Lectures from 1892–93; these lectures, by Rev. Alexander J. Hamilton, are on "The Ascent of Faith, or, the grounds of certainty in science and religion," and trace the gradual process of reasoning, logical and moral, which may lead from established scepticism to certainty of faith. They will be followed by "Labor and Sorrow," a volume of sermons by Canon Knox-Little; "The Hebrew Twins," a "vindication of God's ways with Jacob and Esau," by the late Dr. Samuel Cox, editor of The Expositor; "The Oblation and the Invocation," an essay on this portion of the communion office, by Rev. SEATTLE, WASH.—A consolidation of the book and stationery business of T. H. Calbert & Co. and the printing and publishing business of the Sunset Publishing Company, has recently been effected, and the joint business is now incorporated under the name of The Calvert Company.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

STONE & KIMBALL have secured the services of Mr. Bliss Carman as their literary adviser.

THE second novel in Matthews & Lane's series, in which "Keynotes" was the first volume, will be "The Silver Faun," by Mrs. Emery.

THE Russian society of booksellers and publishers, which has been in existence for ten years, has decided to open a school for booksellers in St. Petersburg.

BANGS & Co. will sell on April 17 and following, by order of the receiver, Joseph J. Little, the entire stock of books, bound and in sheets, stereotype plates, etc., of the late Worthington Company.

THE STUDENT PUBLISHING Co., Hartford, Conn., has just issued "The Triple Tradition of the Exodus," by Rev. B. W. Bacon, in which the author carries further the work of popularizing the results of the higher criticism of the Pentateuch begun in his "The Genesis of Genesis."

SONNENSCHEIN & Co., London, will publish shortly a pamphlet by Frederick Rogers, president of the Vellum Binders' Trade Society, entitled "The Arts of Bookbinding." It is, in substance, the lecture recently delivered by him at South Place Institute, but there are notes and additions.

A. LAHURE, Paris, has just issued under the title of "La Reliure" a collection of a dozen articles on the art of bookbinding in the present and in the past, by Émile Bosquet, the well-known bookbinder. It is illustrated with portraits of modern French bookbinders and photogravures of recent covers.

GUSTAV E. STECHERT will market in this country a German work on the language of the Zimshian Indians in Northwestern America, by Dr. A. C. Count von der Schulenburg, with ethnographical introduction, grammar, specimen extracts, and vocabulary. The tribes in question inhabit the rocky north coast of British Columbia.

ONE of the autograph sales of the last year was of an early MS. by Tennyson, which was never published. It was written in 1823, and was entitled "Mungo, the American. A Tale by Alfred Tennyson. Showing how he found a sword, and afterwards how it came to the possession of the right owner, after the space of two years."

"DIRECT LEGISLATION," now in its 11th thousand, has served to broaden the interest felt throughout the United States in the Initiative and Referendum of Switzerland. James W. Sullivan, its author, in the course of a recent lecture tour, addressed the Legislature of New Jersey at Trenton, students of Cornell University, and of Dickinson College, in his native town of Carlisle, Pa.

J. H. ED. HEITZ (Heitz & Mündel), Strassburg, have in preparation the seventh and eighth volumes in his "Repertoire bibliographique strasbourgeois," containing respectively Jean Knobloch 1500–1528, and Matthias Schürer 1508–1521; and the second part of "Der Initialschmuck in den elsässischen Drucken des XV. und XVI. Jahrhunderts" (Decorative initials in the Elsass prints of the 15th and 16th centuries) covering "Die Zierinitialen des Johannes Grüninger 1483–1531."

COUNT TOLSTOÏ has just repeated his public declaration that he does not give any one the exclusive or even the preferential right of publishing his works and translating from them. "I offer it indiscriminately," he says, "to all those publishers who find the publication of my works or their translation desirable." This statement is called out by the facts that he often receives requests for an exclusive right of publication, and that certain foreign publishers ascribe to themselves this exceptional right and contest it with others.

"L'EXISTENCE," by C. Greppo, just issued by L. Sauvaître, Paris, has been pronounced by Gaston d'Hailly in an eight-page review in La Revue des Livres et du Théâtre to be an epoch-making book. M. Greppo asks why, when all have eyes to see, ears to hear, and a mind to comprehend the truth, so few seem to realize the facts of existence, why they are and whence they are. He takes high religious and moral ground. A chapter entitled La Predation (injustice and robbery) treats the question of government with a master-hand. Anarchy, in its generally accepted and real meaning, is most eloquently defined. The book is intended for the general public, and is said to be a model of clear thinking and simple expression.

STAN V. HENKELS, the well-known collector and auctioneer, announces two important sales to take place at Thos. Birch's Son's rooms, 1110 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. The first is that of the large and important law library of the late Hon. Furman Sheppard, of Philadelphia, which includes complete sets of American and English reports and a collection of 600 criminal trials. The second and most important is the valuable and extraordinary collection of autograph letters, portraits and views formed by the late Col. Charles C. Jones, historian, of Georgia. It embraces a set of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, series of Members and Presidents of the Continental Congress, Presidents and Vice-Presidents of the United States, and a number of others now rarely to be found for sale. The portraits and views are almost of equal importance with the autographs. Fuller particulars will be found in Mr. Henkel's advertisement, elsewhere in this issue.

FIFTY-ONE volumes of Napoleon's St. Helena library are about to be sold by the Messrs. Sotheby in London. On the death of Napoleon his effects in St. Helena were sent home and divided among his brothers. Jerome Bonaparte received, besides other things, this box of books, and presented them, with an autograph letter, to Baron Stölting, one of the gentlemen in his service. The baron left them to his wife, who married again, died as Frau von Wiedburg, and left the books to her adopted daughter, Fraulein Malvine Fischer, of Arolsen, Waldeck, Germany, by whose instructions they are now offered for sale. The autograph letter sent by Jerome Napoleon to Baron Stölting accompanies the books. These books include the "Histoire de France," by Velly, Villaret, and Garnier, in thirty volumes; the Duc de Sully's "Mémoires," in eight volumes, with a cardinal's arms in gold on the sides; the "Vie" of the Duc de Villars; the "Histoire" of the Vicomte de Turenne; and an odd volume of "Gil Blas."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' NEW BOOKS

General Dabney Herndon Maury.

Recollections of a Virginian. In the Mexican, Indian, and Civil Wars. With portrait and with introduction by Thomas Nelson Page. 12mo, $1.50.

The author of this volume, who was a favorite nephew of the famous scientist, Matthew Fontaine Maury, has had an active and adventurous life, the narrative of which is full of interest. His service in the Mexican, Indian, and Civil Wars brought him in contact with many eminent men of whom he tells no end of racy anecdotes, while he had many unusual experiences which he describes with the vivacity and humor of a true raconteur.

Mrs. H. M. Plunkett.

Josiah Gilbert Holland. A Memoir. With portraits and illustrations. 12mo, $1.50.

Mrs. Plunkett was a life-long and intimate friend of Dr. Holland, and had exceptional opportunities for studying his personality and character. She has drawn largely upon Dr. Holland's record of his own aspirations and achievements, thus giving her work an agreeable autobiographic flavor, and presenting an attractive portrait of an altogether remarkable man.

Mrs. William Starr Dana.

According to Season. Talks about the Flowers in the Order of their Appearance in the Woods and Fields. 16mo, 75 cents.

"This most charming series of papers cannot fail to stimulate an observant love of nature. It is a fitting supplement to Mrs. Dana's previous book, and the two constitute one of the most truly delightful descriptive studies of nature which has made its appearance in recent years."—Boston Advertiser.

George I. Putnam.

On the Offensive. An Army Story. 12mo, $1.25.

Mr. Putnam's new story is varied and adventurous in character, including among its exciting incidents a hunting trip and an expedition against the Indians. The story has a thread of sentiment and presents with rare fidelity an interesting picture of Army life on the plains.

By the same Author: IN BLUE UNIFORM. 12mo, $1.00.

Prof. A. T. Ormond, of Princeton.

Basal Concepts in Philosophy. 12mo, $1.50.

An important work in which an attempt is made to reconsider and restate the fundamental ideas of philosophy, in view of the vital issues of the present state of culture, with the purpose of unifying the conflicting elements of life, and of supplying to knowledge and belief an immutable ground.

Beyond the Rockies. A Spring Journey in California. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.50.
This new book by the author of those two popular volumes of travel, "Across Russia" and "Spanish Cities," describes Dr. Stoddard's observations, experiences, and reflections during a journey by the southern route to California, to all the beauties and wonders of which he brings an appreciative mind and a fresh eye. It has the same charm of style and substantial value as his other books.

Robert Bridges. (Droch.)

Overheard in Arcady. With 65 illustrations by O. Herford, F. G. Attwood, and A. E. Sterner. 12mo, $1.25.
There is something very novel, original, and attractive in the plan and execution of Mr. Bridges' book. It is made up of a series of dialogues, originally printed in Life, between the famous characters in the stories of Howells, James, Aldrich, Stockton, Davis, Crawford, Kipling, Meredith, Stevenson, and Barrie. In each case the characters created by the novelist discuss his works with candor, sympathetic appreciation, wit, and humor; and the abundant illustrations give the book an added value.

Bliss Perry.

Salem Kittredge, and Other Stories. 12mo, $1.00.
This volume of short stories will confirm the impression which was made by Prof. Perry's first book, "The Broughton House," that he deserves to stand among the leaders of the younger school of American novelists. Some of the nine stories depict phases of European life and others deal with American subjects. All, however, have a characteristic charm both of substance and of style.

Frank R. Stockton.

Ardis Claverden. 12mo, $1.50.
Charles Scribner's Sons have recently acquired the rights of this volume and now issue it in uniform style with the author's other famous books. The heroine, Miss Ardis Claverden, is one of Mr. Stockton's most charming creations; while the scene of a large part of the story, the eastern slope of the Virginia Blue Ridge, with its original life and characters, is described with a delicate and humorously sympathetic touch.

G. H. D. Gossip.

The Chess Pocket Manual. A Pocket-Guide for Beginners and Advanced Players. 16mo, $1.00.
This little book is not merely a portable guide to the openings, but also contains what is necessary to carry beginners safely into the labyrinths of the game, as well as endings of games in actual play, with diagrams of instructive positions and a collection of illustrative games by celebrities.

The Poets and the Poetry of the Century.

A Popular Encyclopædia of Modern Poetry, covering the area of Greater Britain and the limits of the Nineteenth Century. Edited by Alfred H. Miles. In eight volumes, completing the scheme of the work from George Crabbe to Rudyard Kipling. Small 8vo, per set, $12.00.

"The plan of the work is to represent each poet in his variety, with critical and biographical notices by such writers as Dr. F. J. Furnivall, J. Addington Symonds, Buxton Forman, Austin Dobson, Robert Bridges, Alex. H. Japp, and others.

"The work bids fair to become not only the most voluminous anthology of the time, but also one of the most important." "A more wealthy volume of poetry, page for page, scarcely exists. It is, indeed, 'infinite riches in a little room.'"—The Athenæum.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

TO BE READY NEXT WEEK:

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "ROBERT ELSMERE."

MARCELLA.

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD, author of "The History of David Grieve," "Robert Elsmere," etc., etc. With new portrait. In two volumes, small 12mo, cloth, in box, $2.00.

"In 'Robert Elsmere' and 'David Grieve' a great talent was at work; but the question whether behind the talent there was that originating force which we call genius, was left unanswered. In 'Marcella' that question is answered beyond a doubt. . . . 'Marcella' marks a long advance in the art of novel-writing. . . . Mrs. Ward has worked through her culture, and found herself; she speaks at last, in clear, resonant tones, out of the depths of her own nature, and her voice is the voice of an artist by the grace of God as well as by the nurture of the schools. . . . As in the earliest stories, Mrs. Ward's task is to dramatize the strife of the soul with its inheritance and its conditions. . . . She makes every step in the vital development of Marcella clear, not so much by description as by the disclosure of the happenings of her outward life. We are concerned from first to last with the question of her fate. . . . Mrs. Ward deals with problems; but her real interest is in the problem of the personal life. . . . In 'Marcella' Mrs. Ward presents the question of the day in strict subordination to its influence on the mature and destiny of a girl of brilliant temperament, deep feeling, intense idealism, and noble but impetuous and untrained character. She exhibits the social revolution as it touches a personality of native force and artistic sensitiveness. . . . It is with these subtler contacts . . . that art legitimately deals; and it is these aspects of the modern problem which are set forth with marvellous vividness and power in the story of Marcella's career."—Mr. HAMILTON W. MABIE, in The Forum for April.

MARCELLA. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.

"So many words about the problem with which the story deals must not be suffered to convey the impression that 'Marcella' is only another social study; it is dramatic in the deepest sense from beginning to end, and more than once its dramatic movement rises to a great height. There are passages and scenes in it which in force and intensity come very near the greatest things in English fiction. Indeed, the special quality of the story is the passion which vibrates through it; a passion for truth, a passion of sympathy, and at the end a passion of love. The narrative is full of strongly-drawn figures; men who live in their emotions, no less than in their convictions and interests, and whose processes of thought are disclosed with a force and reality that constantly recall the masters of the novel. A splendid veracity runs through 'Marcella,' and gives it a kind of nobleness possessed only by books that are born out of full knowledge, and yearning sympathy; knowledge that will see and know the worst, and sympathy that is inspired rather than chilled by the knowledge of the worst."—Mr. HAMILTON W. MABIE, in The Forum for April.

D. APPLETON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

A History of the United States Navy.

From 1775 to 1894. By EDGAR STANTON MACLAY, A.M. With Technical Revision by Lieut. Roy C. Smith, U. S. N. In two volumes. Vol. I. With numerous maps, diagrams, and illustrations. 8vo, cloth, $3.50 per volume.

For nine years the author has devoted himself to the task of supplying the want of a complete history of our navy. His researches in France, with the assistance of Admirable Aube, Minister of the Colonies and the Marine, and in England with the aid of the late Sir Provo Wallis and others, together with the use of private papers and unpublished documents in this country, the aid of descendants of naval heroes and the suggestions of naval officers who have taken part in some of the events described, render the results of his diligent labor complete and authoritative. The appearance of this standard history is a peculiarly happy accompaniment of the development of our new navy.

(Vol. II. will be published in May next.)

Edward L. Youmans,

Interpreter of Science for the People. A Sketch of his Life, with Selections from his Published Writings, and Extracts from his Correspondence with Spencer, Huxley, Tyndall, and others. By JOHN FISKE. With portrait. 12mo, cloth, $2 00.

The late Dr. Youmans' services to popular education in science, as a lecturer and writer, as the founder of The Popular Science Monthly, the originator of the International Scientific Series, and the introducer of Spencer, Tyndall, Huxley, and others to an American audience, have been so singularly rich and productive that the history of his life is in large measure the history of popular science in America during his lifetime. It is especially fortunate that his life-work is described by so competent, eloquent, and appreciative a biographer.

LOVELL, CORYELL & COMPANY'S

Spring Announcements.

HOW LIKE A WOMAN. By FLORENCE MARRYAT.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Entertaining and readable from first to last.

A bright, happily-conceived story describing the wilfulness of a young English heiress in defying her nominal titled guardians (who dread her marrying beneath her) and in taking her own course in matters of the heart. The story is charming throughout.

Mr. BAILEY-MARTIN. By PERCY WHITE.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Mr. White, with the aid of the necessary qualities, dry humor and delicate irony, succeeds nearly all the time. The story of Mr. Bailey-Martin's early career is as good as possible; his childish education in the book of the snob and his marvellous aptitude for the past must be read to be appreciated."—Athenæum, London.

The amusing chronicle of the doings of an English up-to-date snob.

FOUND GUILTY. By FRANK BARRETT.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

Should find readers among those attracted by the Sherlock-Holmes stories.

The reader's interest is maintained through a succession of narratives, written down by the characters concerned in the plot, and whose statements are helpful in unravelling the threads of the story, while they add intensity to the dramatic qualities of the novel and lead up to a dénouement as unexpected as it is tragic.

WOMAN THROUGH A MAN'S EYE-GLASS.

By MALCOLM C. SALAMAN.

Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.25; illustrated series, paper, 50 cents.

A series of genial analytical essays, showing much penetration and a charming felicity of description on piquant types of modern woman. The book will amuse not only the general reader but the student of human nature.

Full of good feeling, good sense, shrewd observation, and kindly utterance.

THE TRUTH ABOUT BEAUTY. By ANNIE WOLF.

12mo, cloth, $1.25; illustrated series, paper, 50 cents.

A book of good counsels for every sane woman's boudoir.

The author, in this eminently wholesome book, telling "the truth about beauty" and what constitutes it, does not preach. She writes as a woman of the world, and what she has to say is eminently sound and inspired by high motive. Nature and not artifice is her model.

THE DIARY OF A NOBODY. By GEORGE GROSSMITH.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; illustrated series, paper, 50 cents.

There is much clever fooling and a happy audacity of whimsical invention in this book that make it delightful reading. Any one who has seen Mr. Grossmith on the stage or lecture platform will know what to expect from the book.

Just the book to dispel a fit of the blues.

Cheaper Student's Edition. 12mo, cloth, gilt top. $2.00.

THE VICTORIAN AGE OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT, author of "The Makers of Florence," "Diana," "The Cuckoo in the Nest," etc.

A skilful yet honest survey of the literary gains of the era, of much value to all students of English literature. The story is told with intelligent brevity, yet with the charm of an experienced and graceful writer, who is at once well-informed and in full sympathy with her subject.

Warne's Library of Natural History.

Published Monthly. Price, 50 Cents.

MESSRS. FREDERICK WARNE & CO. take pleasure in announcing that about May 1 they will commence the issue of a new monthly serial under the above title, of which the first instalments will compose

The Royal Natural History.

EDITED BY MR. RICHARD LYDEKKER, B.A., F.G.S., F.Z.S., joint author of "An Introduction to the Study of Mammals," etc. The preface by P. L. Sclater, M.A., Ph.D., F.R.S., Secretary of the Zoölogical Society of London.

A MODERN NOVEL.

(Ready April 1st.)

JOANNA TRAILL, SPINSTER.

By ANNIE E. HOLDSWORTH.

Miss Holdsworth is one of the most popular of the younger English novelists, and in "Joanna Traill, Spinster," she has treated the now widely agitated question of individual rescue work among fallen women with great power and at the same time with delicacy. The book presents a possible solution of the question, but is primarily a well-planned and interesting novel.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.25.

MARK TWAIN'S NEW STORY.

(Ready April 15th.)

TOM SAWYER ABROAD.

By HUCK FINN. Edited by MARK TWAIN.

Cloth, Square Octavo, 240 Pages, with 27 Illustrations from Original Drawings by Dan Beard, $1.50.

Mr. Andrew Lang has called "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" the great American novel. Certainly there are no characters in modern fiction more popular with young and old than Tom Sawyer, Huck Finn, and Nigger Jim.

A Western professor invents a wonderful flying machine, and it is widely announced that on a certain day he will make an ascension. Our three travellers are, of course, in the machine when it starts, and soon find themselves sailing over the Atlantic Ocean. They finally land in Africa.

The opportunities for thrilling and humorous situations can readily be imagined. The interest never lags, the humor is delightfully spontaneous, and there are many strong pathetic touches in the book.

The system Sandow recommends is calculated to make thousands of men and women stronger and happier and healthier." —The Spirit of the Times.

"One of the books which we have been interested in during the past week is entitled 'Sandow on Physical Training.' Such books as these have a considerable importance, because they exercise a decided influence over the younger generation. The work is admirably done. "Its poetic title is suggestive of its contents. It is a collection of brief paragraphs, which are not so much the scintillations of the intellect as poems of the imagination and pulsations of the heart. In this volume Mr. Mozoomdar has transcribed some of his profoundest personal experiences. Here we have the music of a soul uttered now in a plaintive minor key, here in some deep passionate threnody, or soaring into ecstacy of joy, or breathing the calmness and quietude of peace with God. The book is an illustration of the lofty heights to which devotional sentiment may rise, free from all tinge of superstition."—Christian Register.

IN THE KING'S COUNTRY

A Christian Endeavor Story Price $1.50

Natural development of character and plot, and pure and lofty sentiment, are qualities which have ever distinguished Miss Douglas' work, and won for her a multitude of readers. In none of her stories are these qualities more marked than in this beautiful story of Christian endeavor.

The characters of Pearl Disbrowe and Sabrina Eastwood, though so entirely dissimilar, cannot fail of making a deep impression upon the reader; and as we "journey with them into the country of good works," we receive purer and higher ideals from the association.

VOL. XLV., No. 14. NEW YORK, April 7, 1894. WHOLE No. 1158

D. APPLETON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

A Policy of Free Exchange.

Essays by Various Writers, on the Economical and Social Aspects of Free Exchange and Kindred Subjects. Edited by THOMAS MACKAY, editor of "A Plea for Liberty." 8vo, cloth, $4.00.

Vital economic questions of the day are treated in this volume by recognized authorities. Among the chapters of this important work are: "The Coming Industrial Struggle," by William Maitland; "National Workshops," by St. Loe Strachey; "The State in Relation to Railways," by W. M. Acworth; "The Principle of Progression in Taxation," by Bernard Mallet; and "The Law of Trade Combinations," by the Hon. Alfred Lyttelton.

Aphorisms from the Writings of Herbert Spencer.

Selected and arranged by JULIA RAYMOND GINGELL. With portrait. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

". . . All the aphorisms have been selected from the latest editions of the works, and I have tried to make them illustrate, as fully as possible, the wide range taken by this unique philosophy, which not only soars to the sublimest heights but takes note of the apparently most trivial matters, showing that nothing is too insignificant to form a more or less important factor in the great work of evolution."—From the Preface.

Edward L. Youmans,

Interpreter of Science for the People. A Sketch of his Life, with Selections from his Published Writings, and Extracts from his Correspondence with Spencer, Huxley, Tyndall, and others. By JOHN FISKE. With portrait. 12mo, cloth, $2 00.

The late Dr. Youmans' services to popular education in science, as a lecturer and writer, as the founder of The Popular Science Monthly, the originator of the International Scientific Series, and the introducer of Spencer, Tyndall, Huxley, and others to an American audience, have been so singularly rich and productive that the history of his life is in large measure the history of popular science in America during his lifetime. It is especially fortunate that his life-work is described by so competent, eloquent, and appreciative a biographer.

Memories of My Exile.

By LOUIS KOSSUTH. Translated from the original Hungarian by Ferencz Jansz. 12mo, cloth, $2.00.

The present widespread interest in the life of the great Hungarian patriot has created a renewed demand for this volume, published some years ago, and a new edition is now ready.

A Beginner.

By RHODA BROUGHTON, author of "Goodbye, Sweetheart!" "Nancy," etc. No. 138, Town and Country Library. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

The long-standing popularity of Rhoda Broughton's former books is sufficient introduction for the present volume, which is pronounced one of her best.

A Yellow Aster.

By IOTA. No. 139, Town and Country Library. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

"The warmest of welcomes is due from the reading public."—London Athenæum.

"We shall be surprised if it does not rank among the novels of the year."—Westminster Gazette.

"A Saul has arisen among the fictional prophets. 'A Yellow Aster' is distinctly a work of genius, remarkable for novelty of plot, force of diction, grace of literary style, and subtlety of psychical analysis."—London Telegraph.

READY APRIL 9.

The Rubicon.

By E. F. BENSON, author of "Dodo." No. 140, Town and Country Library. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

An eminent English critic has said of this new novel: "I think 'The Rubicon' a more interesting society story than any that has been published in England for many years. . . . It is a tale of London fashionable life of to-day, . . . introducing a novel situation which is extremely cleverly managed so as to form a singular satire on our artificial modes of life and springs of action. Toward the close of the book Dodo is introduced in a very effective manner, for a few pages; and her choice in life is cleverly contrasted with that of the new heroine."

NOTES IN SEASON.

D. C. HEATH & Co., Boston, have in press for immediate issue in Heath's Modern Language Series Freytag's "Rittmeister von Alt-Rosen," with introduction and notes by Professor J. T. Hatfield, of Northwestern University.

HENRY HOLT & Co. will publish at once "The Prisoner of Zenda," a romantic story by a comparatively new author, which, though exciting and almost sensational, is characterized throughout by fine literary art and good taste.

SILVER, BURDETT & Co., Boston, will publish shortly a "Harmony of the Gospels" on a new and improved plan, and also a revised edition of the "Outline Handbook of the Life of Christ." The authors are Prof. William Arnold Stevens, of the Rochester Theological Seminary, and Prof. Ernest De Witt Burton, of the University of Chicago.

E. R. WALLACE, Syracuse, N. Y., has nearly ready a thoroughly revised edition of his "Descriptive Guide to the Adirondacks," first published in 1872, and brought down to date year by year. The issue for this year has been illustrated in half-tone engravings, has been increased to 600 pages, and will make a fine book in tasteful flexible covers, which will sell at slightly advanced price.

E. L. KELLOGG & Co., of New York and Chicago, announce for publication May 1 "A class in Geometry," by George Iles. In this little book the author will set forth his lessons to three boys as an informal teacher by observation and experiment. Two illustrations will show apparatus of the simplest kind for extracting square and cube root; other illustrations equally original are to be presented. Three years ago Mr. Iles delivered a lecture on his methods in geometry at the Teachers' College, New York, when much interest was elicited.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have just issued paper editions of Mrs. Gaskell's "Cranford" and Ludovic Halévy's "The Abbé Constantin," which are little models of artistic book-making, as was conceded by all upon their appearance in their pretty cloth bindings at Christmas time. They are now ready for summer travel, and should be sure of very pleasant excursions in many bags and "shawlstraps." Dr. Everett S. Stackpole's "The Evidence of Salvation, or, the direct witness of the spirit," is also ready, and is eminently fitted to accomplish its announced mission of giving courage, cheer, and aid, with kindly warning and careful instruction.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

SOME "Nonsense Rhymes," by Edward Lear, which have never been published, will appear in the May Atlantic.

The American Fashion Journal is the title of a new monthly publication devoted to men's fashions. The first number was published under date of March.

A FRENCH monthly review of progress, edited by M. A. Gromier, president L'Union Méditerranéenne, is entitled La Question de Demain (The question of to-morrow), and published by Paul Sevin, Paris. The second number is chiefly devoted to copyright, and a very long translation is made of the speech of Mr. MacAdoo, of New Jersey, on the bill for international copyright. Mr. Carlisle's speech is also reported at length.

AFTER a phenomenally successful career of 106 years as a monthly, Le Journal de Debats has decided to become a weekly publication. The paper is published in handy quarto size, stitched. Its list of contributors includes the names of the foremost men of letters, scholars, and specialists. The paper gives a complete review of the world's progress in politics, art, science, and literature, and its feuilleton is always devoted to the very best current fiction. B. Westermann & Co. are the American agents.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no prices, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Through a clever correspondence between three people, a bright little romance is evolved. The "make-up" of the volume is more important than the story, being unique in its way. The eight letters which tell the story, some newspapers clippings, and some verses, "the documents in evidence," are given in fac-simile; in each letter appears a characteristic handwriting, on a perfect sheet of note or letter paper, with monogram or business heading, etc. Each document is fastened to a sheet of stiff paper, the letter being complete in its folds, not printed on the stiff sheets, which are left blank on one side, and enclosed in a paper cover, the design of which includes the envelopes of the letters in fac-simile, bills for flowers and bon-bons, etc. The whole is enclosed in an official envelope with an official red seal, and tied with red tape. Makes a good valentine, or a souvenir for other occasions.

These "Inductive studies" were printed three years ago, and bound for ready reference with the "Inductive Latin primer" of the same authors. They have been now carefully revised and somewhat enlarged.

"It is scarcely necessary to say that on questions of literary criticism, which in no respect, or at most remotely, concern exposition, this commentary says little or nothing," the writer states in his preface, and further in speaking of the aim of the epistle, "It seems plain that when the epistle is studied from within its deepest spiritual element, it shows us the apostle fully minded of the largest aspects of the life and work of the church, and also, and yet more, occupied with the problem of the relation of the believing sinner to God. The question of personal salvation was never, by St. Paul, forgotten in that of Christian policy."

Strong, Ja. The exhaustive concordance of the Bible: showing every word of the text of the common English version of the canonical books, and every occurrence of each word in regular order; with a comparative concordance of the authorized and revised versions, including the American variations; also brief dictionaries of the Hebrew and Greek words of the original, with references to the English words. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1894. c. '90. 1340+262+128+79 p. F. cl., $6; hf. rus., $8; hf. tky. mor., $10. [1076

The main concordance covers 1340 pages of three columns each. The words are arranged in strict alphabetical order, and in one continuous series without omissions or duplications; and all the passages in which they are found are set down in like manner in single file regularly according to the respective books, chapters and verses from Genesis to Revelation, without requiring the student to look under separate heads for any occurrence. Absolutely every word is given with all the passages in which it occurs. To every English word is a figure reference to the Greek, Hebrew, and Chaldee dictionaries which complete the work, where the original meaning or derivation of the word may be found; these dictionaries may be consulted without any previous knowledge of the language. This is an entirely original work, and not a compilation of those that have gone before; Dr. Strong has spent more than thirty years in preparing it, and has had the aid of more than one hundred assistants. All possible pains have been taken to avoid errors. It is a monument to the industry, ingenuity, and Biblical scholarship of Dr. Strong.

Sudermann, Hermann. Regine; from the German, by Hettie E. Miller. Chic., E. A. Weeks & Co., 1894. c. 195 p. (The Marguerite ser., no. 23.) pap., 25 c. [1077

The story tells of the year after Napoleon had been confined at Elba. A German soldier, upon his return home from the field, hears that his father has just died, and that because he had been known to give information to the French the church and state refused him burial. After this is settled he goes to his forsaken home, and there finds a half savage girl, who has faithfully served his father and now becomes his slave. Their lonely, wild, silent life, ostracized from all village society, is artistically told.

Thaxter, Mrs. Celia. An island garden; with pictures and illuminations by Childe Hassam. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1894. c. 7+126 p. O. cl., $4. [1078

Mrs. Thaxter has spent a large part of her life on Appledore, the largest of the Isles of Shoals, and has a flower garden by her cottage which is one of the chief attractions of the islands and the wonder of the thousands who visit them every summer. In compliance with repeated importunities to tell how she succeeds so marvellously, she has written this book, which has quite enough practical information to aid the few whom information in such matters helps, and yet is charmingly permeated by the poetry of the flowers, the islands, and good literature. The illustrations reproduce the beauty and the blazing splendors of the garden, and the corner within the cottage where the hostess welcomes and charms those whom she delights to honor.

Ward, Mrs. Mary A., [Mrs. T: Humphry Ward.] Marcella. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1894. c. 2 v., 4+447; 4+498 p. por. D. cl., $2. [1082

"Marcella" is primarily a love-story, with the chief interest centering in the heroine, an intelligent, passionate, independent young girl, burning with the sense of social injustice under which she and others have suffered and still suffer. She is the child of a high-born, but disgraced father, and of a mother who seems to have little natural affection for her. Two years of her life are lived independently in London, studying art and associating with young Bohemians of socialistic enthusiasms. Then her reformed father inherits Mellor Park, and she rises from what is almost poverty to comparative luxury, and to the distinction of being "Miss Boyce of Mellor Park." Her father's past follows him here, and she finds herself snubbed. She takes refuge in reforms, and applies, unsuccessfully, her socialistic principles. A peculiar crisis in her love affairs sends her back to London and to nursing in the slums. While the development of Marcella's many-sided nature is the principal theme, other characters from the extreme points of social life are presented, and the work is as rich in intellectual discussions on the many social problems now disturbing thoughtful people, as were "David Grieve" and "Robert Elsmere."

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 7, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS AND ITS ADMINISTRATION OF THE COPYRIGHT BUSINESS.

IN the current Lippincott there is an interview between Julian Hawthorne and A. R. Spofford, Librarian of Congress, in which some interesting facts relative to the organization and workings of the Congressional Library are elicited. Mr. Spofford assumed his present position in 1861, but it was not until nine years later that the library was made the central copyright depository of the nation. Before that time clerks in the district courts in the several States had registered local copyrights, but the records had been kept most unsystematically, and it was no easy task to obtain proper evidence of copyright from the districts. After the passage of the law, however, the work of collecting the local records was vigorously begun, and they are now complete from the last decade of the eighteenth century up, with the exception of a few in the South, which were destroyed during the war.

The total number of books in the Congressional Library is about 650,000, exclusive of pamphlets, musical publications, etc. It is commonly said that the collection begins with Jefferson's sale of his 6000 volumes; but this is incorrect. In 1851 there was a fire in the library, which destroyed some 30,000 volumes—more than three-fifths of the entire contents—so that the collection as it now stands dates back only about forty years. The books are all catalogued, and a card catalogue of the contents of the library is kept. The duplicates received yearly number about twelve thousand, not including the copyright dup'icates of current literature. These are stored in the basement and used for purposes of exchange. No volume in the library can be sold, but it is permitted to exchange duplicates for other books of equal value which are not in the library. Mr. Spofford speaks strongly of the paltry appropriation allowed for the purchase of books. The original grant for this purpose was $15,000 a year, but this was later cut down to $11,000—a sum absurdly inadequate for the needs of a national library. This is fully recognized in England, where the British Museum has a regular annual grant of $80,000, besides special grants whenever it is desired to purchase an important collection or library. Nearly all the books added to the Congressional Library are purchased through catalogues, of which Mr. Spofford is a diligent reader.

Since the passage of the international copyright law the work of the library force has been greatly increased, and at least three additional clerks are needed to deal with the copyright business alone. Mr. Spofford attends personally to the entire mail; of course, most of the letters are applications for copyright, which can be answered by printed blanks. Many applications are refused as not lawful subjects for copyright, and the fees are returned to the applicants. The dollars received for legitimate copyright—averaging about $150 daily—are turned over to the Treasury day by day. Many persons apply for copyright of names only, and few seem to be aware that a title cannot be copyrighted. "The law is," says Mr. Spofford, "that the substance, the literary contents, of a book or publication may be protected by copyright, but not the name. You may call your book "Vanity Fair," or "The Quick or the Dead," if you please, only you must be careful not to put the original story, whatever it may be, between the covers."

The number of foreign applications received is slowly growing, though the law is hampered by the restrictive "manufacturing clause." Much commonplace foreign matter is not copyrighted, and therefore can still be printed free. The Canadians have steadfastly refused reciprocity in copyright, and American books cannot be copyrighted in the Dominion. American books, according to Mr. Spofford, "are not protected in Canada, in spite of the British assurances regarding the attitude of 'British Possessions' towards the matter. Perhaps the President's prerogative may be invoked in that direction; though very few Canadian books appear in this country."

The increased work of the Congressional Library and the great need of additional help, mentioned in this interview, certainly needs to be emphasized. Since the passage of the international law the copyright business has increased at least twofold, and the Librarian of Congress has been granted but one additional clerk. The vexing delays in the record of copyright entries — often causing serious loss and invalidation of copyright — are due solely to the neglect of the government to provide enough clerks for the needful work. The staff of the national library is ridiculously small, compared even with the employees of the public libraries of our large cities. The entire clerical force allowed the Librarian of Congress for administering the great national library and the entire copyright business of the country is twenty-nine, and the vast correspondence entailed by the receipt of nearly 70,000 applications for copyright annually, is conducted by a force of less than a dozen persons. These are facts that call for speedy reform, in justice to the publishing interests of the country alone, and it is sincerely to be hoped that with the transfer to the new national library building — if not before — Congress will take action to place the Library of Congress upon an adequate and efficient footing.

It is reported that the customs authorities of New York have decided that Zola's "La Terre" is no longer too indecent for admission into this State. The Massachusetts customs authorities were either more enlightened, or had less compunctions in such matters, for while their New York confrères remorselessly confiscated the book, whether in the vernacular or translation, the former permitted it to pass without question. The State authorities of Massachusetts, however, seem to differ from the Federal authorities, and live closer to Puritan ideas of propriety. As we go to press we receive news that the Watch and Ward Society have secured the conviction of Alex. McCauce after trial in the Superior Criminal Court, of the offence of selling a copy of Boccaccio's "Decameron," the jury having rendered its verdict on the ground that the book was "manifestly intended to corrupt public morals." Though the book in question is one that must be handled with care, if it be not avoided altogether, it has been questioned by legal authorities whether, if appeal is taken, the prohibition can be maintained under the Constitution and Statutes of the United States. It would be desirable, in the interests of all concerned, to have this question decided in the last instance once and for all.

NOTES ON EARLY ENGLISH EDITIONS OF THE BIBLE.—I.*

The first Bible printed in any language was the Latin Bible of Gutenberg, printed in Mayence, about 1450. Martin Luther made his German translation of the Bible in 1522; but in England, where the Bible had long before—in 1380—been translated into the vernacular by John Wycliffe, it was not until 1526 that any part of it was printed. After the first step had been taken, however, the printing of English Bibles increased rapidly to meet, though inadequately, the growing demand, and from 1526 to 1611—when the King James "authorized version" appeared—no less than eleven different English translations had been made; while from 1526 to 1600 there were 326 different editions of the Bible printed in England.

The first portion of the Scriptures printed in the English language was Tyndale's New Testament, in 1526, of which but two copies are known to be in existence—one in the library of Bristol College, the other in the library of St. Paul's Cathedral; in both the title-page is missing. William Tyndale, the translator, was born at Melksham Court, Gloucestershire, in 1485, and studied at Oxford and Cambridge. He became a preacher, and in 1522 formed the resolution of translating the Bible into English. Two years later he went to Hamburg, and thence to Wittenberg, where he joined Luther, and finished his translation of the New Testament. Tyndale's translation, which was made from the Latin-Greek folio edition of Erasmus, printed in 1519 at Basle, shows clearly the influence of Luther's work; indeed, he transferred a large portion of Luther's introduction and 190 of his marginal references. Its publication was attended with considerable difficulty. Tyndale had arranged with Peter Quentel, the Cologne printer, to bring out a quarto edition; but the work had proceeded only as far as signature K when it was prohibited by the senate of Cologne. Tyndale fled to Worms, and there the work was completed by Peter Schöffer, the second son of the famous Mayence printer, and partner of Fust; of the incomplete Cologne quarto edition but one fragment is known to exist—now in the Grenville library of the British Museum.

This was the first New Testament ever printed in English. It is a small octavo, containing 348 pages and 12 wood-cuts. As soon as the book was imported into England it met with fierce opposition, which culminated in the burning of the whole edition. Tyndale himself did not try to prevent its destruction, as he was aware of the many defects and faults of his work, and hoped to bring out a second and better edition. He was unable to do this for nine years, and in the interval many pirated reprints of his first edition were made and circulated. Of these there are numerous traces, but no copies are known to exist.

Tyndale's second edition, in 16°, bore the imprint of the widow of Christoffel of Endhoven at Antwerp, 1534, and the copy in the Grenville library of the British Museum is the only one now known. As this edition contained several arbitrary alterations by George Foye, his assistant, Tyndale brought out, in the same year, another edition revised by himself and printed by Martin Emperawe (Martin de Keyser) at Antwerp, in 12°; of this the copy in the Chetham Library, Manchester, is the only one known. The last edition revised by Tyndale himself was printed in 1534–35, and is known as the "G. H. edition," from the signature of the Antwerp bookseller, Gotfridus Dumaeus (Gotfried van der Haghen), for whom it was printed by Martin de Keyser. Soon after, on May 23, 1535, Tyndale was arrested as a heretic in Amsterdam, and sentenced to death. On October 6, 1536, he was hanged, and his body burnt. In the same year the first folio edition of his Testament was printed by Robert Valentine in London, being the first edition printed in England. In 1538 the first Latin-English New Testament was printed in quarto by Robert Rodman; this is notable for a printer's error in II. Corinthians x. ii., which reads "think on his wife" for "think on this wise."

Tyndale had fallen a victim to the severe law introduced by Henry VIII. in 1530, which prohibited, under penalty of death, the printing in England of any book not approved by the authorities. Three years later, at the time of the importation of Tyndale's translation, the law was extended to prohibit the importation of any book printed and bound abroad, but forbidding printers to raise their prices on that account.

STOLEN PEEPS.

From the Washington Star.

"I HAVE my opinion of a certain class of people," said an up-town newsdealer not long ago.

He was one of those churlish newsdealers who have a sign on their news-stands like this:

GENTLEMEN
ON THE STAND.
BUY PAPERS IF YOU WANT TO READ THEM.

"I call them 'peepers,'" continued the newsdealer. "They come in here regularly, I know them as well as I know my mother's face. I should recognize them if I met them at the front door of hades. I know all these fellows who come in here and paw over the papers without buying. But the 'peepers' I know best of all. I never see one that does not fascinate me. I can't keep my eyes off of him. He holds me spellbound. I can look at one of these ordinary free readers when he comes in and fingers over all the dailies and eight or ten dollars' worth of illustrated weeklies and magazines, and after noticing who it is, I can go on with my writing or other work. But the 'peeper' commands my whole attention. Did you ever see one? No? Well, he is an individual who seems to have plenty of time and very little money. He goes over the papers and magazines systematically. He knows just what days we get each magazine, and he is here promptly to look at them. He is especially fond of pictures, and is as greedy as a child for them. It is his mania that distinguishes him from the common news-stand sponge. He is so thoroughly controlled by his evil habit that he is not content to look at the pictures on the open and cut pages of a magazine. He must see those that are inside the folded pages. He dare not take out his pocket-knife and cut the leaves, and I have not yet provided my counter with free paper-knives. So he tips the magazine up and peeps down in between at the folded leaves, and takes a slanting look at the pictures within. Now and then in his surreptitious enjoyment of what is not costing him a cent he tears the pages just a little accidentally. Then with a start he shuts the magazine, slaps it down on the counter and gets out of the shop as fast as he can—probably to go to some other place and continue his enjoyment of stolen delights."

THE FRENCH BOOK TRADE.

M. HENRI BELIN, the president of the Cercle de la Librairie (Booksellers' Club), at the annual general meeting held in Paris on the 2d ult., read a report on the work of the club and on the state of the French book trade, containing passages of more than local interest.

M. Belin referred, amongst other matters, to the crisis in the French book trade, the existence of which, he said, cannot be denied. To remedy the deplorable condition of the retail booksellers, two syndicates (or, as we should perhaps say, trades unions) had been formed; one of retail booksellers, the other of publishers. These two unions, without revolutionizing the relations between publishers and booksellers, have succeeded in gradually formulating arrangements satisfactory to the reasonable wishes of the retail booksellers. Still much remains to be done; but one fact of the greatest importance to the welfare and future prospects of the trade is the good feeling and readiness shown by the publishers to meet the wishes of the retailers and to assist them in reducing the ruinous discounts allowed to the public. M. Belin announced that an international exhibition of books will be held in Paris from July to November of the current year, at which the Paris Booksellers' Club will show a specimen of each of the French book products of the present day, methodically classified according to the various kinds of works exhibited. This exhibition promises to be one of the most brilliant of its sort that has hitherto been attempted.

THE AMERICAN CONQUEST OF ENGLAND.

From the London Figaro.

A LITTLE book is to be published here on "First Editions of American Authors." From this one may fairly assume that the popularity of trans-Atlantic writers in England is now considerable. Not very many years ago Longfellow, Poe, Emerson, Hawthorne, Lowell, "Mark Twain," "Artemus Ward," and "Josh Billings" were almost all the American authors in whom the British public took any interest. How different is the situation now! American books swarm in our literary markets, and their writers, like so many English men and women, have a reputation on both sides of the Atlantic. Every day the rapprochement between the two great literatures and the two great reading publics grows closer and closer.

G. W. CHILDS AS AN ADVERTISER.

FEW men of his time, excepting possibly the great showman, P. T. Barnum, recognized the value of, and understood how to arrange a "boom" that would tend to bring his business prominently before the public as did Mr. Childs. As an illustration of this we quote the following incident related by a prominent Philadelphian and intimate friend of Mr. Childs:

"It is a curious fact and one which has, perhaps naturally, been left out of the obituary notices of Mr. Childs, that the first great success which he ever made in the business of publishing was through his cleverness in arranging and 'booming' a funeral, or rather a series of funeral ceremonies.

"It has been widely published that one of the first conspicuous hits he made as a publisher was with the volume on Arctic exploration written by Dr. Elisha K. Kane, and it so happened that just about the time the book was issued the author died, either in Havana or while returning from that city to New Orleans.

"Mr. Childs at once saw the value of making as much of a public event as possible out of the return of the deceased explorer's remains to Philadelphia, and he interested so many men of prominence and influence in the plan to honor Dr. Kane's memory that the progress of the body to Philadelphia was made a pub'ic event, and not only was there a demonstration in New Orleans, whence the funeral car started, but memorial ceremonies were held at a number of other cities along the route to the Quaker City, and the final funeral held there was one of the most imposing and elaborate which had ever been seen in the United States.

"The civic authorities joined hands with the State militia in doing honor to the dead voyager into Arctic seas, and there were in the line of the procession both soldiers and sailors of the national government, firemen, Free Masons, and other secret societies. As it was exploited far and wide in the newspapers the resulting advertising of the dead explorer's book was prodigious, and its sales increased to an extent which taxed the capacity of Mr. Childs' publishing house for several months."

OBITUARY NOTES.

ROBERT CLARK, the senior member of the well-known Edinburgh firm of publishers and printers, R. & R. Clark, died on the 17th ult., aged sixty-nine.

PROF. WILLIAM ROBERTSON SMITH, librarian of the University of Cambridge, died in Cambridge on the 31st ult., aged forty-eight years. He was one of the most famous "heretics" of modern days, and a foremost exponent of the "higher criticism" of the Bible.

CHARLES EDOUARD BROWN-SÉQUARD, the eminent physiologist and physician, died at Paris on Sunday, April 1. He was born in the Island of Mauritius in 1817. He visited the United States several times. His writings are dispersed in a great number of pamphlets and memoirs. His most important works in book form are "Lectures on Paralysis of the Lower Extremities" and "Lectures on Functional Affections."

MRS. JANE G. AUSTIN, whose best-known novels — "A Nameless Nobleman," "Standish of Standish," "Dr. Le Baron and His Daughters," and "Betty Alden"— have gained her an enviable literary reputation, died in Boston on Friday, March 30. Mrs. Austin's ancestors on both sides came over in the Mayflower, and she has shown in her books how thoroughly she understood Puritan character and life and customs. Her mother's great-grandfather was the "nameless nobleman" of her most artistic work. From 1860 to 1870 she lived in Concord, and was intimate in the Alcott coterie. Mrs. Austin was about fifty-five years of age. Almost all her published works are now on Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s list.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

PAUL LEICESTER FORD has edited a new and, as far as possible, complete edition of the writings of John Dickinson, the "Penman of the Revolution."

FREDERICK HILL, a brother of Rowland Hill, the English Post-Office reformer, who is now in his ninety-first year, has just issued an interesting autobiography. He took part in the Royal Jubilee of George III., in 1810.

GEORGE EGERTON, whose acquaintance with Scandinavian literature is indicated in "Keynotes," has in hand a translation of Ola Hausson's "Tolke og Seere," a volume of critical essays, which will appear under the title of "Interpreters and Seers." George Egerton is engaged also on a vocabulary of fishing terms in four languages.

"BRICK" POMEROY tells how he discovered "Peck's Bad Boy" in the writer of clever paragraphs in an obscure country newspaper. Mr. Pomeroy was then working on The Democrat at La Crosse, Wis., and he wrote to George W. Peck (now the Governor of Wisconsin) and offered him $25 a week to go to work for him. The next day he received this telegram: "I accept your offer quicker than instantly. For Heaven's sake don't withdraw it!"

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, whose new book, "The Religion of a Literary Man," has caused him to be much talked about of late, has English, French, Scotch, and Irish blood in his veins. He was born in Liverpool, was educated at the college there, and at sixteen was articled to a firm of accountants of that city. He balanced books by day and wrote verses in the evening; and while an accountant's clerk published at his own expense "My Lady's Sonnets." Becoming known to Mr. Wilson Barrett, the actor offered him the post of secretary, and so the youth reached London and a congenial literary atmosphere. He is now devoting himself to literature, having published, besides "The Religion of a Literary Man," two volumes of verse, a series of studies on the "Characteristics of George Meredith" and the really delightful "Book Bills of Narcissus."

KANSAS CITY, MO. — The Buxton & Skinner Stationery Company, of St. Louis, has opened a branch here at 607 Delaware Street, with E. A. Burnton, manager, who is well known to the trade, having been connected with it in Kansas City for over ten years.

LOUISVILLE, KY. — The Louisville Book Company, booksellers and stationers, have had their stock burned. Loss, 50 per cent., and insurance, $17,000.

NEW YORK CITY.—Franz Hanfstaengel, publisher of fine art books, etc., will remove May 1 from Twenty-third Street to 114 Fifth Avenue.

RICHFIELD SPRINGS, N. Y.—A. L. Brockway, bookseller, has been succeeded by W. H. Blauvelt.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

BANGS & CO. will sell on the 16th inst. an invoice of English remainders, including many desirable books in quantities consigned for absolute sale by John Grant, of Edinburgh.

THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION of Portland, Oregon, is trying to gather copies of all books and pamphlets, descriptive and historical, relating to Oregon and to Oregon institutions. Any information as to the whereabouts of such material will be thankfully received by Daniel F. W. Bursch, the librarian.

EDWIN L. SHUMAN, of the Chicago Journal staff, has in press a volume entitled "Steps into Journalism," which treats of newspaper work as a more or less exact science, and lays down its laws in an informal way for beginners, local correspondents, and reporters. It attempts to answer, among other things, the burning question of the would-be contributor—why editors reject manuscripts.

A COUPLE of months ago it was alleged that the invoices of Raphael Tuck Sons' Company, limited, importers of lithographs, required investigation. It was stated at the time that these invoices indicated undervaluation. Collector Kilbreth instituted a rigorous investigation. The special agents inquired into the matter, and so did Assistant Secretary Charles S. Hamlin. It turns out now that there was no foundation whatever for the reports against the firm.

ELDON E. HAHN, with A. C. McClurg & Co., of Chicago, has patented what he calls "The Perfect Book and Paper Cleaning Powder," which must certainly prove a boon to the bookseller and librarian. It is claimed for this powder that it will clean engravings, photographs, prints, etc., and clean and restore all white or light-tinted mounts, parchment, or vellum. The powder has been used at McClurg's during the fall and winter, and has given entire satisfaction.

DORCHESTER, MASS., according to the Literary Weekly, can claim the proud distinction of being the home of the first American novel, "The Power of Sympathy," by Sarah Wentworth Morton, published by Isaiah Thomas, Boston, in 1789. It is a forcibly told story of a painful domestic tragedy. Pulpit and press denounced it roundly at the time of its appearance, and succeeded in suppressing it, so that for years not a single copy could be found. One was recently sold at auction by Libbie & Co., of Boston.

FREDERICK WARNE & CO. will immediately commence the publication of the Library of Natural History, the first instalments of which will compose "The Royal Natural History," to be edited by Richard Lydekker, who is already well known to naturalists as an able scientist and the author of several works on mammalia, etc.

VITAL economic questions of the day are treated by recognized authorities in "A Policy of Free Exchange," shortly to be issued by D. Appleton & Co., edited by Mr. Thomas Mackay, editor of "A Plea for Liberty," which was introduced by Mr. Herbert Spencer. Among the chapters of this important work are: "The Coming Industrial Struggle," by William Maitland; "National Workshops," by St. Loe Strachey; "The State in Relation to Railways," by W. M. Acworth; "The Principle of Progression in Taxation," by Bernard Mallet; and "The Law of Trade Combinations," by the Hon. Alfred Lyttelton.

JOEL MUNSELL'S SONS, Albany, N. Y., have just issued a work entitled "The German Allied Troops in the American Revolution," by J. G. Rosengarten. The author describes, among other subjects, the winter campaign in New Jersey, battle of Brandywine, occupation of Philadelphia, battle of Germantown, Canadian campaigns, campaigns in Long Island, New York, Staten Island, etc., capture of Forts Clinton and Montgomery; accounts of Generals Burgoyne, Riedesel, Carleton, Clinton, Howe, Kuyphausen; march of prisoners to Virginia, and the later history of Germans serving in America; original reports, letters, etc.; regimental lists, lists of officers under Generals Howe, Clinton, and Carleton, carefully compiled from all sources, are also included.

IRVING P. FOX, Boston, Mass., has put upon the market two new devices intended to facilitate and systematize the labors of book-keepers throughout the American commercial world. One is "Fox's Complete Draft-Book," with an appendix containing a list of banks and banking towns throughout the United States; and the other, "The G and F Daily Cash Balance Slip." In the draft-book are united under one cover the draft, letter to the cashier of the bank, and a complete list of banks alphabetically arranged, the drafts, letters, and stubs all on the same sheet, lithographed on the best quality of superfine paper. Six of the cash-books will cover the year, and in neat and handy shape give a valuable reference memorandum of the exact state of the cash on any specified day. A great improvement in the usual method of figuring on any old scrap which is thrown away, lost, or mislaid when most needed.

FOREIGN NOTES.

BLACKWOOD & SONS will publish at once a new volume by Miss Beatrice Harraden, entitled "In Varying Moods." The book will be uniform in size and price with "Ships that Pass in the Night," by the same author. Miss Harraden will contribute a short story to Blackwood for April, entitled "A Bird of Passage."

THE most powerful work of the Parisian literary season just passed has been "Demi-Vierges," by M. Marcel Prévost, a young novelist brought out by M. Brunetière, the new editor of the Revue des Deux Mondes. The book has even been compared with the works of M. Alphonse Daudet—rather high praise for a beginner to receive.

PUTTKAMMER & MÜHLBRECHT, Berlin, have published a reprint of an article by Otto Mühlbrecht on bibliography, which appeared in the Börsenblatt, entitled "Die Bibliographie im Dienste des Buchhandels" (Bibliography in the service of the book trade), in which the author gives his opinions and the reasons for them upon the most practical methods of compiling catalogues to be in constant use among booksellers.

T. FISHER UNWIN, London, has decided to issue a library parallel with the Pseudonym Library, in which the contributors will not disguise their names. The title of this new series will be The Autonym Library. In size and price it will be similar to its contemporary; but the cover and get-up will be different, and the edges will be cut. The publisher thinks that a certain number of the authors whom he would like to have included in the Pseudonym Library object to sinking their real names. The first volume of The Autonym Library, which will be issued shortly, is by F. Marion Crawford.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & CO. will shortly publish a semi-humorous account of a hunting-trip among the Red Indians of the Sioux Nation, by Price Collier, of Boston, now resident in England. The author, and also the artist who furnishes the illustrations, lived for several months on the plains of the Northwest, riding, shooting, and becoming familiar with the daily life of the Sioux Indians, who are almost the sole inhabitants of this particular part of the prairies. The book is written from the standpoint of one who has no political or sectarian prejudices, and pictures the Red Indian from the rather unusual point of view of the man of the world of literary tastes.

H. LE SOUDIER, Paris, hoping to remedy the misfortune of the French book trade in having had no year-book since the year 1888, when the "Annuaire de la Librairie Française" was discontinued, has begun the publication of "Agenda-Annuaire de la Librairie Française" (A yearly memorandum-book of the French book trade), that would seem a very handy book of practical information. It begins with the calendar for 1894, followed by a list of societies connected with the book trade arranged by locality; then an alphabetical list of publishers and booksellers with street addresses, repeated under localities, and again classified under the subjects of which the booksellers make specialities. Then follows a department of valuable information on money, postage, tariff, practical recipes, etc., then the advertisements, which are encouragingly numerous, and then about a fourth of the neat little volume is a blank memorandum-book in calendar style.

BERNHARD QUARITCH'S "Contributions toward a Dictionary of English Book-Collectors," pt. 5, embraces upwards of half a dozen collectors, and has a large theme in the famous Hamilton collection whose dispersal was the talk of 1883–84, and whose MSS. were bought by the Prussian government for $350,000. Some of these were afterwards disposed of in England, and of one, "a magnificent volume of the eighth century, written in gold uncials upon empurpled vellum, . . . formerly a gift to Henry VIII., and bearing the proofs of his ownership," Mr. Quaritch says: "It is now in a private library in Oswego, on the margin of Lake Ontario; in a comparative obscurity which does not alter the fact that Henry VIII.'s Golden Gospels is the most precious book in the whole New World." The MS. of the "Divina Commedia" of 1460, with Botticelli's illustrations, in the same collection, and now one of the treasures of the Berlin Museum, was valued at $25,000. A Scottish binding executed for James V. is the frontispiece of the present brochure.

PICK-UPS.

FROM THE WRONG SIDE OF THE COUNTER.—A bookseller somewhere in northern New York, who was trying to sell a Chambers' "Encyclopædia" instead of a "Britannica," which he did not have in stock, said that the American edition of the latter was nothing but a photograph anyway, and that the matter, compared with the original, was very poor indeed.—ALEPH.

BOOKS POSITIVELY GUARANTEED.—"You—you keep books here?" she asked as she entered a Detroit book-store and timidly glanced around.

"Yes'm, we keep books," replied the clerk as he softly rubbed his hands together and wondered if they had sold the last copy of "Bashful Bessie, or, the heroine of Harper's Hills."

"I—I want a book," she continued, "but I want to look at the last page before I buy it."

"Certainly miss—certainly. We have no objection to your looking at all the pages if you wish. Have you bought a book here in which something was wrong with the last page?"

"No, sir; but a friend of mine bought a book in Chicago which ended by advising the reader to try somebody's liver purifier, and you don't know how dreadful she feels about it. Have you 'Paradise Lost'?"

"Yes'm."

"And will you guarantee that it doesn't refer to somebody's sarsaparilla?"

"I can't possibly believe that it does."

"How is Dickens? I want his 'Dombey & Son,' but I'm afraid he's got in something about corn-cures or porous plasters. Are you sure he hasn't?"

"Why, I never heard of such a thing in a standard book."

"Nor I, until lately. Shakespeare wouldn't be apt to have anything in about stomach bitters or headache cured in five minutes, now, would he?"

"I've read him a great deal, and I never came across any such thing. However, you might glance over that set and satisfy yourself."

"It would take too long," she sighed, as she glanced at the backs of the volumes. "I have sometimes thought I would like to read Homer's 'Iliad.' There is such a book, I believe?"

"Oh, yes."

"And can you guarantee it?"

"I can, ma'am—positively guarantee that you will find nowhere in that book the slightest reference to germs, microbes, bacteria, consumption, asthma, bronchitis, curvature of the spine, varicose veins, or indigestion."

"If there is—?"

"You can return it and get your money."

She took it and went away smiling and happy.—The Detroit Free Press.

NEW YORK CITY, March 21, 1894.

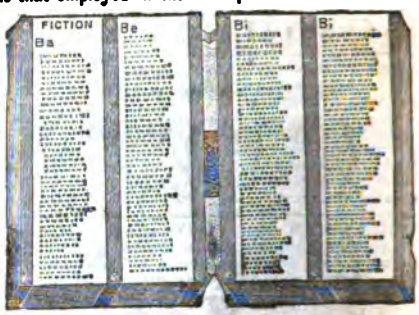
The Rudolph Indexer Book.

(Patented in the United States and all Foreign Countries.)

Method of Indexing is the same as that employed in the Rudolph Continuous Indexer.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER BOOK consists of a number of card-holders of heavy card-board with one or two columns on both sides. On the back edge of each card-holder are two double hinges by which means other card-holders may be flexibly connected or disconnected.

Independent book-covers are furnished, and a book may thus be formed of one card-holder and later increased as desired. If the book becomes too bulky it may be separated and by adding covers two or more independent books formed.



The Rudolph Indexer Case.

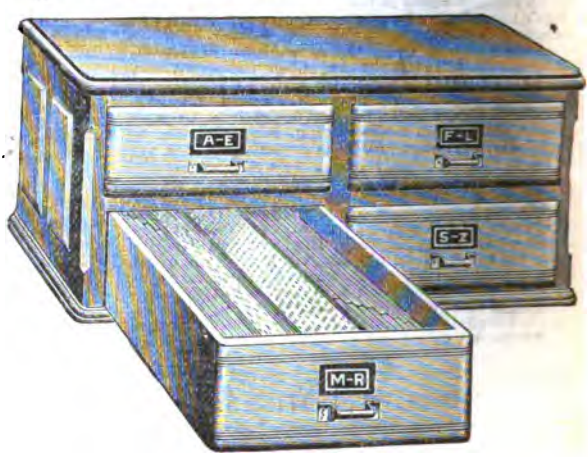
(Patented in the United States and all Foreign Countries.)

Method of Indexing is the same as that employed in the Rudolph Continuous Indexer.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER CASE consists of a series of card-holders placed on their edges in a drawer, and they may be turned as the pages of a book, exhibiting at each view 272 single-line entries.

We furnish the INDEXER CASE in one, two, four, six and eight drawers.

The capacity of each drawer is thirty card-holders. As both sides of the card-holders are used it is equal to 8160 single-line entries.



The Rudolph Card Cutter.

This invention is for the purpose of cutting the entries or cards for insertion in the card-holders, but can also be used for many other purposes.

It is very important that all the slips to be inserted in the card-holders be cut at perfect right angles, in order that each entry will fit exactly to the others.

An unnecessary margin of only 1-32d of an inch on the top and 1-32d of an inch on the bottom of each entry will amount to 3⅛th inches of waste space on each card-holder.

The cutter will cut cardboard where spacing between the printed or written lines is 1-64th of an inch.

THE

(FRONT VIEW, SHOWING GLASS LID RAISED.)

THE MOST PERFECT INDEXER.

The RUDOLPH INDEXER SYSTEM possesses many advantages which recommend it to Publishers and Booksellers—in fact, to any one who has occasion to use lists of books, names or samples of goods, photographs, etc.

It is entirely flexible, allowing any number of entries to be placed in the INDEXER at any point.

It presents to the eye at one time as many entries as six pages of the American Catalogue.

Entries are protected from being soiled by exposure or handling.

Economy of space and economy of expenditure of both time and money.

The INDEXER stands 42 inches high and is 20 inches wide by 30 inches broad.

We shall be pleased to give further information and list of testimonials from leading librarians.

RUDOLPH INDEXER CO., 606 Arch St., Philadelphia.

THE ENGLISHMAN AT HOME:

His Responsibilities and Privileges.

By EDWARD PORRITT,

Formerly London Editor of the Manchester Examiner.

The author's aim has been to make the book not only of use and interest to students of civics and of English history and contemporary politics, but also of value to American visitors to England, and to readers of English news in the American press. His accuracy and carefulness of statement may be subjected to the most critical test. The style is good and entertaining. The book cannot fail to be a welcome addition to every library. 1 vol., cloth, 12mo, xiv.+379 pp. Appendices, index, $1.75.

"No adequate book has been easily procurable which briefly and simply has told how the Englishman is governed, and what are his responsibilities and privileges. Mr. Porritt has endeavored to supply this sort of book, and has succeeded admirably. He has told about everything an American needs to know, and has told it according to a method which leaves hardly anything to be desired."—New York Times.

"A valuable book, and one that ought to be read by all who seek to be well informed."—Chicago Times.

"A highly welcome volume."—Philadelphia Press.

"Of rare interest and great value."—Boston Advertiser.

"A better account of the working institutions of England than is elsewhere accessible to American readers."—Boston Herald.

The Annual American Catalogue

will please notice that our stock of this valuable biographical help is rapidly decreasing. Of the volume for 1890 only 33 copies remain; of that for 1891 only 6 copies; and of that for 1892 only 25 copies. As these volumes are printed from type which is distributed after printing, they cannot be reprinted, and those who wish to complete their sets are therefore cautioned to place their orders before it is too late.

The price per volume, bound in half morocco, is $3.50 net.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY

HAVE JUST ISSUED:

A Man of To-Day.

By HELEN MATHERS, author of the famous story "Comin' Thro' the Rye." Bound in paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

A brighter story has seldom found its way from an English author into American covers. The tale is a diverting one, but it is borne along by the liveliness of the text until the reader forgets that it is a made-up story at all, so much of actual reality does it possess.

History of the Consulate and the Empire of France.

VOLUME VII.

By L. A. THIERS, ex-Prime Minister of France. Translated from the French, with the sanction of the author, by D. Forbes Campbell. An entirely new edition, printed from new type, and illustrated with thirty-six steel plates printed from the French originals. To be completed in twelve octavo volumes. Cloth $3.00 per volume.

Pain.

By J. LEONARD CORNING, A.M., M.D. 8vo, cloth, $1.75.

"The author of this valuable work, which treats of pain in its relation to disease, is a physician who has already commanded respect and gained repute because of earlier publications, which embody the results of his own experiences and that of the ablest physicians of the day. His book, therefore, is sure to be received with interest by medical men and create something of popular interest as well. The doctor's experiments with compressed air have caused much discussion in medical circles."—New York Letter in Philadelphia Press, April 1.

For sale by all Booksellers, or will be sent by the Publishers, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

NOTES IN SEASON.

HURST & CO. have just issued a cheap edition of "A Yellow Aster," by "Iota."

D. APPLETON & CO. announce a new edition of Kossuth's "Memoirs of My Exile," in which is told the patriot's own story of his life.

THE postmaster at New York has given notice that all outgoing domestic and Canada mails will close thirty minutes earlier than heretofore, between the hours of 5 P.M. and 8 P.M.

MEYER BROTHERS & CO., who have succeeded Amblard & Meyer Bros., are the American agents of Jordell's "Catalogue Annuel de la Librairie Française," described in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY March 24.

THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS COMPANY has just issued "Adela's Ordeal," by Florence Warden, a very delightful story in the best style of the clever writer of "The House on the Marsh;" and "For My Own Sake," translated by Mary Stuart Smith from the German of Marie Bernhard.

SUBSCRIBERS to "The English Catalogue of Books for 1873" will be pleased to learn that the volume is now ready for delivery. Those who have not yet placed their orders are requested to do so as early as possible—especially those who wish the Annual American Catalogue and the English Catalogue bound together—in order that delay at the bindery may be avoided.

HENRY HOLT & CO. have just ready "The Prisoner of Zenda," by Anthony Hope, describing three months in the life of an English gentleman, highly romantic and exciting, but treated with fine literary art. The book has the same pretty buckram cover that made "John Ingerfield" so attractive, and also contains a frontispiece by Wechsler. A second edition of "John Ingerfield," Mr. Jerome's little masterpiece, which has received praise from the most exacting critics, is now in the market.

DUPRAT & CO., New York, will publish shortly a literary curiosity of the 18th century, with an introduction by a member of the Grolier Club, entitled "Crazy Book-Collecting or Bibliomania, showing the great folly of collecting rare and curious books, first editions, unique and large paper copies, in costly bindings, etc., by Bollioud Mermet, Secretary to the Academy of Lyons, first published anonymously in 1761, and now done into English and republished for the perusal and delectation of the members of the Grolier Club of New York et amicorum."

CHARLES EITEL, 18 and 20 Broadway, has become sole agent for Calmann Lévy and Paul Ollendorff, the great Paris publishers. Georges Ohnet's new novel, "Le Droit de l'Enfant," will be issued simultaneously here and in Paris, probably toward the end of May. Among the newer books now ready for distribution are: Gyp's "Le 13ème;" Abel Hermant's "La Carrière;" Pierre Maël's "Femme d'Artiste;" Edouard Delpit's "Marcienne;" Jeanne Schultz's "Ce Qu'Elles Peuvent;" N. Notovitch's "Vie Inconnue de Jesus Christ;" and Alphonse Allais' "Gaîtés du Chat Noir."

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish on April 21 a new book by Beatrice Harraden, entitled "In Varying Moods." Her little work of art, "Ships that Pass in the Night," gave promise of rare treats to come. Among other publications for the immediate future are announced "A Modern Wizard," by Rev. R. Ottolengui, author of "An Artist in Crime;" and "Red Cap and Blue Jacket," a story of the French Revolution, by a new writer. There will be a Popular edition of Waldron K. Post's "Harvard Stories," tales of the undergraduate, and also a cloth edition. F. Marion Crawford has written the initial story for the Autonym series, and it will appear in May, under the title "The Upper Berth."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no prices, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); (Q. 4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fs. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

American Library Association. Catalog of "A. L. A." library: 5000 volumes for a popular library, selected by the American Library Assoc., and shown at the World's Columbian Exposition. Wash., D. C., Government Printing Office, 1893 [1894.] 592 p. O. (Bureau of Education, no. 200.) pap., gratis. [1089

A catalogue of a model library of 5000 volumes, selected by experts of the American Library Association, and representing as nearly as possible the 5000 books that a new library ought to obtain first for its collection. The volumes catalogued were given by the publishers; the library formed part of the exhibit of the Bureau of Education at the Chicago Exposition, and is now permanently in Washington. The printed catalogue was prepared at the New York State Library, under the direction of Miss Mary S. Cutler, and the work done by Louisa S. Cutler and assistants. The Bureau of Education, which issues it, has a limited number for gratuitous distribution. It does much more than show a desirable list of books. It is an excellent object lesson in the two systems of classifications, the decimal and the expansive—the Dewey and the Cutter—and gives also a perfect illustration of a dictionary catalogue, including in one alphabet, author, title, and subject. There are also sample pages of an author-index and a subject-index, a list of publishers' addresses (7 pages), directions for purchase and arrangement of "A. L. A." Library, the library abbreviations, etc. Coming before the class and dictionary catalogues, are separate alphabetical lists of biography and fiction. Publishers' names, dates of publication, and retail prices are given throughout.

Iota, [pseud. for Mrs. Mannington Caffyn.] A yellow aster: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1894. 307 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 139.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c. [1130

The heroine is as rare a specimen among women as a "blue chrysanthemum or a yellow aster" is among the flowers—hence the title. She is a woman apparently without a heart, and is the result of her training and inheritance. Her father and mother are scientists, whose whole time is occupied in researches and studies for a book they are writing together. Gwen and her brother are more an annoyance to their parents than a pleasure. They are trained by tutors, and are not allowed any religious education until their intellects are sufficiently matured to judge of the truth or falsity of the doctrines of Christianity. Gwen enters society a great beauty and a brilliantly intellectual woman, but seems without the power of loving. Her awakening under the influence of marriage and motherhood is the story.

The heroine will not consent to her lover's obtaining a divorce, and though the actress finally dies, it is then too late to avert the final tragedy. Most of the characters are American, and the scene is chiefly in New York.

The hero is a Russian, born and educated in England; in spite of his English training he remains a Russian to the core—a fatalist and a pessimist, and strong for good or evil. He and a French governess, who has committed a crime, work all the mischief. The story is a domestic one, dealing with the family of Tom Denison, a rich English manufacturer. It is his daughter, Easter, whose life is spoiled by the "man of to-day" after she has married one entirely worthy of her.

The object of this essay is to set forth the essential differences, while tracing the relations, between the alchemical and the chemical conception of the elements. The development of the modern notion of the elements, as definite kinds of matter incapable of mutual transformation, is traced, and the questions suggested by this conception are noticed. Incidentally it is shown how dangerous to progress any attempt must be to return to the loose alchemical ways of thinking about natural occurrences.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 14, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

"LIVING PICTURES" AND COPYRIGHT.

A CURIOUS phase of copyright ownership has recently been suggested apropos of the exhibitions of "living pictures" now given by various theatrical managers. In these "pictures" the figures are living persons—generally women—and the tableaux vivants simulate famous sculptures or paintings of more or less renown. The question has been raised, whether in the case of copyrighted pictures such living "reproductions" constitute infringement of copyright. It will be seen that such a situation calls for fine discrimination and involves novel precedents. In fact, its practical perplexities have already been tested. Only a month or so ago a Munich publisher of photographs and engravings brought suit in London against the management of a variety show called the "Empire Palace," charging them with infringement of copyright in exhibiting tableaux vivants, exactly reproducing five pictures protected by copyright according to the articles of the Berlin Convention with Great Britain. The chief difficulty confronting the publisher was presented by the law itself. It is provided that the aggrieved party may seize the pirated reprints and destroy or dispose of them as he sees fit; in the case of living "reprints," even the plaintiff's counsel confessed himself puzzled. Neither could the worshipful justices see any solution of the problem, and the Munich publisher lost his case. He then promptly brought the same charge against a London daily which had given sketches of the pictures in question. In this case he was more successful, as it was proved that the artist had undoubtedly made use of the art photographs published by the Munich house. The moral of the tale seems to be that managers of "living pictures"—notwithstanding their recent escape—had best confine themselves to masterpieces that are unprotected by the trammels of copyright, and not test too far the extensible qualities of that elastic law.

THE Congressional Record is scarcely what would be called a "popular" periodical, and yet the legislators make occasional efforts to enliven its columns. A few days ago, through the ingenuity of Senator Dolph, a literary department was added, which may have great possibilities for publishers.

During a recent debate on the financial situation, Senator Dolph said that he held in his hand a little volume entitled "Cheap-Money Experiments" and he desired to insert a page and a half of the opening chapter in the Record. This, he said, "is devoted to the proposition that no government can create money out of anything which it may choose to call money, but money must have intrinsic value or be convertible into that which has intrinsic value."

As Senator Dolph went along, requesting that page after page of the book be put into the Record, several of the Populists, became uneasy.

Finally Senator Harris interrupted the speaker by demanding to know what the book was.

MR. DOLPH: It is a little pamphlet called "Cheap-Money Experiments."

MR. HARRIS: Published by The Century Company?

MR. DOLPH: Yes.

MR. HARRIS: Does the senator mean to put a library in the Record?

MR. ALLEN, another Populist, from Nebraska, objected "to these extracts going in the Record without being read, because the book is notoriously a falsehood from its opening to its closing." He further said that the book "is a republication of a series of articles in The Century Magazine, which every Populist recognizes to be false. It does not state a solitary doctrine in which the Populist party believes."

After a fight, that was continued for some time, and on the following day, Senator Dolph carried his point, and was allowed to print what he chose in the Record.

If members of Congress desire to make the Record more welcome to their constituents, and to ensure the reading of their speeches, they might occasionally quote a chapter from J. M. Barrie's latest work, or from Mark Twain's "Pudd'nhead Wilson." Then there might be such a demand for the Record as in the days when Proctor Knott delivered his immortal Duluth speech.

A NEWSDEALER'S ACCOUNT-BOOK.

GEO. W. THOMS, of Mankato, Minn., uses as an account-book sheets 16 inches long by 11 inches wide and printed on one side only. If a dealer has, say five hundred newspaper customers, he can have five hundred of these sheets printed and bound together at a cost not exceeding seven dollars. This book will do his bookkeeping in a simple way, and dispenses with other forms of receipts. We present only three months, the full sheet having the twelve. When Mr. Jones paid his two dollars the slip was cut from the book and given to him as a receipt, while Mr. Thoms used his side of the sheet as a reference guide. The page is perforated to allow the quarterly receipts to be torn from the main body of the book. An index to customers should precede the account-book proper.

HALF A CENTURY OF BOOKSELLING.

A RECORD of fifty years in the book business at one stand only, is seldom credited to a member of our fraternity in these changing days, but next Saturday, April 14, S. E. Bridgman rounds out a half century of honorable mercantile life at the old "Hampshire County Book-store," as it is still called in Northampton. Beginning as a lad of seventeen he was at twenty-one admitted to the firm by his appreciative employer, E. H. Butler, the firm-name becoming Butler & Bridgman. Their successors were Hopkins, Bridgman & Co., and they in turn were succeeded by Bridgman & Childs. Since 1883 the firm-name has been S. E. Bridgman & Co. The house published John Todd's works, many of which, like the "Student's Manual," "Lectures to Children," and the "Index Rerum," have had a large sale. It has had extensive dealings with various literary institutions in the Connecticut Valley, such as Mt. Holyoke College and Northfield Seminary, and since Smith College was established in Northampton, Mr. Bridgman's store has been a favorite resort of its 700 young women students, thus gaining for it the title of "The College Book-store." Mr. Bridgman has also developed the mail order department of his business, supplying many Sunday-schools and public libraries with the material they desire, as well as individual buyers in New England and in distant points of the country.

Throughout all these years Mr. Bridgman has been a useful and public-spirited citizen, prominent in Christian activities, and holding positions of honor and responsibility. He is thoroughly posted on all branches of his business, and what is better, he has won hosts of friends by his sunny, genial disposition. He has enjoyed the personal friendship of the late Dr. J. G. Holland, and of Bishop F. D. Huntington, not to speak of many others like Prof. Drummond, Dr. James Stalker, and Geo. W. Cable, whom he has entertained in his hospitable home.

The career of Mr. Bridgman exemplifies in a marked manner the type of the old New England bookseller—one who, by his integrity and devotion to his chosen profession, has been an honor, not only to himself, but to the trade at large. He is to-day one of the sprightliest of men, thoroughly posted on all that is going on, has one of the finest book-stores in New England, and is always courteous and honorable in his dealings. It is with the greatest pleasure that THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY extends to Mr. Bridgman, at this time hearty congratulations from ourselves and from the trade at large, and also the very best wishes for the future.

DODSLEY AND OTHER OLD LONDON BOOKSELLERS.

From "At Tully's Head," by Austin Dobson, in Scribner's.

DODSLEY could scarcely have chosen a more favorable moment. Before the year 1735 was out, died Jacob Tonson the Younger, to be followed only a few months later by Jacob Tonson, the Elder—the famous old Jacob of Dryden and the Kit-Cats. Early in 1736, too, died another survivor of the Augustan Worthies, Bernard Lintot. In each of these cases relatives of the same surname continued the business, but the old prestige was gone. And if the moment was favorable, so was the locality selected. No one of the other booksellers, either notable or notorious, was very near to Pall Mall. Edmund Curll, of disreputable memory, at the "Pope's Head" in Rose Street, Covent Garden, was closest. Of the rest, Andrew Miller was in the Strand, Dodd by Temple Bar, Lawton Gilliver of the "Homer's Head"—

> "Vendit hunc Librum Gilliverus > Cujus insigne est Homerus—"

in Fleet Street, Cooper at the "Globe" in Paternoster Row, Wilford at the Chapter House, Roberts in Warwick Lane, Thomas Osborn (not yet knocked down by Johnson) in Gray's Inn. As far as can be judged, their new rival of the "Tully's Head" must have opened his campaign as a publisher with considerable vigor.

In the first month of 1736, he issued a memorial ode by John Lockman, later known as the "herring poet," following it up shortly afterward by a reprint of Sackville's old tragedy of "Gorboduc." Poetry and the drama, as may be gathered from these items, were his chief attraction. He did not indeed put forth the effusions of Queen Caroline's thresher minstrel, Stephen Duck, to whom "A Muse in Livery" had contained an effusive tribute, and with whom he might be supposed to be in especial sympathy; but he received subscriptions for the "Works" of Richard Savage, and he issued the "Leonidas" of Glover. Pope also entrusted him with two of his wonderful imitations of Horace, and made over to him the sole property in his sophisticated letters.

THE CONTEMPORARY LITERATURE OF ANARCHY.

LITERARY anarchism was born in 1840, on the day when Proudhon's now famous work "Qu'est ce que la Propriété?" ("What is Property?") was given to the world. For thirty years after its birth the doctrine flourished and languished alternately in the Latin countries and in Germany and England. In 1870 it bore fruit in France of the deadliest sort—raised and nursed and finally extirpated with blood. Since 1870 literary anarchism has become anarchistic literature, which during the past ten years has taken root in as many countries, and within a few years has developed, though for the greater part a surreptitious, a restless, and fecund existence. Stammhammer, in his excellent "Bibliographie des Socialismus und Communismus," recently issued by Gust. Fischer, of Jena, notes over a hundred journals issued under the auspices of anarchist societies all over the world. Of these probably sixty are at present in existence, namely, twelve in the Italian language, eleven in French, eleven in Spanish, ten in German, six in English, five in Czechish, two in Portugese, two in Jewish dialects, and one in Dutch. Only one of the ten German papers is published in Germany, viz., The Socialist of Berlin. The two Jewish papers are printed in Hebrew letters, but are really in the Jewish-German and Jewish-English dialects respectively. The last-mentioned organ is the Workers' Friend, published in London. The former paper, Die Freie Arbeiterstimme, or the Workmans' Free Voice, is published in New York.

TENNYSON'S "MUNGO THE AMERICAN."

5 East 19th Street, New York, April 3, 1894.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

Dear Sir: In your issue of 31st ult., I notice you mention the autograph sale last year of an early MS. by Tennyson, entitled "Mungo the American," which was written in 1823, when the poet was quite a boy.

This tale was once the property of Robert Roberts, Esq., of Messrs. Roberts Bros., Boston, and in a paper containing some interesting recollections of Tennyson published in The Bookman, November, 1892, Mr. Roberts furnished the following data, which will amplify your note for those who are curious to learn more about this early evidence of a poet-laureate's taste for literature.

"It consisted of about half a dozen octavo leaves stitched in a piece of brown wrapping paper, with the title "Mungo the American" written on the cover in a boyish hand, and at the bottom was given the name of the publishers, Longman & Co." !—an amusing instance of the child being father of the man. It is many years since I glanced through it, and therefore my recollection is somewhat misty; but plot there was none; it was merely an incident, and related how Mungo was traversing the mighty prairie and lost his sword (a rather unusual thing, one would think). He wandered about in great agitation, searching for it amid poetical surroundings, but all in vain. A considerable time elapsed, and again Mungo was journeying in a wide waste land, when he espied a hut, towards which he hastened for guidance or for water. As he stood in the doorway, he beheld his sword hanging upon the opposite wall. He started, but recovered himself, and asked the solitary inhabitant whence he obtained that sword. The answer did not prove satisfactory; or, as this was long anterior to the advent of the modern "interviewer," Mungo's question was naturally resented as an unwarrantable intrusion into the privacy of domestic life. But whatever the cause, there ensued a short and sharp conflict—the sudden crack of a pistol, "alarums and excursions;" finally Mungo snatched the weapon from its place and "slew him with the sword." So he regained possession of his long-lost trusty blade. The sun set; or threw its slanting beams over the prairie—or something of that sort—as Mungo departed from the scene of the fray. Beyond the slight touches indicated above, there were no Tennysonian characteristics, unless a somewhat inflated style may be considered one.

Yours truly, James MacArthur.

OBITUARY NOTES.

Edwin Fleming, probably the oldest member of the bookbinding trade in New England, while on his way home (West Newton, Mass.) from Florida, died in New York City on the 2d inst. Mr. Fleming was born in Bristol, Eng., about 73 years ago, and after learning his trade there, went to Boston, and worked for a time with a Mr. Kitfield, whom he later succeeded in business. Afterward the firm was known as Fleming & Haskell, and later as E. Fleming & Co. He enjoyed the respect and confidence of the leading publishers, as well as of the business community at large. The book trade was represented at his funeral by Dana Estes and W. W. Jackson, of Estes & Lauriat, Willam Lee, of Lee & Shepard, George H. Ellis, and Thomas R. Shewell.

In Theodor Lampart, whose sudden death was announced a short time ago, the German book trade lost one of its most representative men, a man who was conspicuous not only for the energy with which he managed his own business, but also for the interest he took in the organization of the German book trade and in matters of local and municipal interest. Lampart came of an old bookselling family, his father being the much-respected bookseller, J. G. Lampart, of Augsburg. Lampart received his school education in his native town, Augsburg, and was then apprenticed to the book trade in Würzburg, afterwards filling posts in Salzburg and Bremen. From Bremen he returned to his father's business, which he managed as his father's trusted assistant for ten years. The family's business is one of the oldest bookselling houses in Germany, having been established in 1680 under the firm of Veith & Rieger. In 1838 the last representative of the family ot Veith transferred the business to J. G. Lamparf and E. v. Jenisch. Jenisch died in 1849, Lampart in 1870, when the firm passed into the hands of Theodor Lampart. Lampart enlarged the retail branch of the business and reformed the publishing department, adding a special branch of his own — Alpine literature. In addition to his trade activity, Lampart was an enthusiastic "turner" or gymnast, and Alpine climber, being the president of the Augsburg Gymnastic Society and of the Augsburg section of the German-Austrian Alpine Club. Nor was he without influence in political matters. He was a member of the committee of the Liberal Club of his native town, and his voice was ever raised in support of national ideas. His efforts in the book trade itself were also not without importance. He founded the local union of Augsburg booksellers, and to his energetic intervention the action taken a few years ago by the Börsenverein against underselling was largely due. Ten years ago he was elected a member of the council of that body, and did good service on the finance committee. Unhappily, this many-sided and vigorous activity was too much even for his vigorous nature, and he succumbed to an affection of the brain on October 21, 1893, deeply regretted by all his colleagues.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Mr. Paul Meyer, of the firm of Meyer Brothers & Co., sailed for Europe on the 7th inst., expecting to make new arrangements regarding translations and reproductions of French works.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

METHUEN & Co., London, have in press a volume of "Cricket Songs," by Norman Gale, who is an ardent follower of the game.

IT has just been remembered that the odd title which Mr. Du Maurier has given to his new novel and its heroine has been used before. "Trilby" is the name borne by a French classic —a charming little fairy tale by Charles Nodier.

WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN will shortly publish a new novel of "The Yellow Aster" and "A Superfluous Woman" type. It will be published anonymously or under a pseudonym, but it is by a new writer, and an Irishwoman. The title will in all probability be "A Sunless Heart," though this is not finally fixed.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish on April 15 a new book by Stanley J. Weyman, entitled "Under the Red Robe," with illustrations by R. Caton Woodville. The author of "A Gentleman of France" and "The House of the Wolf" again seeks his materials in French history, and Cardinal Richelieu occupies the stage during a great part of his new story.

"A MORAL BLOT" is the title of a new novel of theatrical life by Sigmund B. Alexander, of Boston, which the Arena Company announce for immediate issue. The book is to be brought out in handsome form, with an exceptionally artistic cover designed by Abbott Graves. The story is said to deal with a vital social problem of the day, which is treated in a decidedly novel and original manner.

A. L. BURT, 66 Reade St., N. Y., who has already done much in the interests of low-priced and good literature, has begun the issue of a new paper-covered series, entitled The Manhattan Library. The series will include the most popular fiction and will be issued semi-weekly at 12 cents net or 25 cents retail. Corelli's "Romance of Two Worlds" and Blackmore's "Lorna Doone" are the first issued.

LOVELL, CORYELL & Co. have just ready "Mr. Bailey-Martin," by Percy White, said to teem with bright sayings and graphic characterizations and which the London Athenæum has pronounced a success; "How Like a Woman," by Florence Marryat, the story of a charming but wayward English heiress; and "Mademoiselle Miss," by Henry Harland (Sidney Luska), a collection of short stories.

ARTHUR HINDS & Co., New York City, have just issued "Three Minute Declamations for College Men," containing telling extracts from the speeches of popular orators, including Chauncey M. Depew, William Gladstone, Carl Schurz, Bishop Potter, and many others. A few facts regarding the author, and an explanation concerning the occasion on which the quoted speech was spoken, precede every selection.

ELKIN MATHEWS & JOHN LANE, having decided to issue further volumes of fiction in the form in which George Egerton's "Keynotes" appeared, have arranged a Keynotes Series, of which two volumes are now passing through the press. The first to be ready will be "The Dancing Faun," by Miss Florence Parr, the actress who has been associated with several Ibsen productions, and who has just opened at the Avenue Theatre in Dr. Todhunter's "Comedy of Sighs." Later a translation, by Miss Lena Milman, of Dostoievsky's "Poor Folk" will appear, and to this volume George Moore has written a preface.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY and also the Union News Company refuse to handle W. T. Stead's book, "If Christ Came to Chicago." The reasons for this action seem to be various. The manager of the Union News Company, according to newspaper report, claims "that the book is not proper reading to go into the family." George C. Tyson, Jr., of the American News Company, according to the same authority, claims that "the risk in handling the book would be too great to assume. If a single one of the places named by the author as disreputable could show that it had been misrepresented, we would be liable for heavy damages. One little error of that kind might lose us thousands of dollars."

CHARLES L. WEBSTER & COMPANY will issue, April 15, Mark Twain's new story, "Tom Sawyer Abroad," by Huck Finn, edited by Mark Twain. It is a continuation of the adventures of Tom Sawyer, Huck Finn, and Nigger Jim, and will, no doubt, be received with delight by their many admirers. They will also shortly issue "Joanna Traill, Spinster," by Miss Annie E. Holdsworth, associate editor of the Woman's Signal, the English temperance organ, of which paper Lady Henry Somerset is editor-in-chief. Miss Holdsworth has long been interested in charitable work of all kinds, especially among women, and the present volume, which has been warmly endorsed by Mr. W. T. Stead, gives her idea of the moral responsibility of woman.

EMILE BRUNOR, New York City, has issued "The Practical Electroplater," by Martin Brunor, a comprehensive treatise on electroplating, with notes on ancient and modern gilding and formulas for new solutions. This work has the advantage over several other volumes published in the same line in being largely the result of the personal researches and experience of the author, many of the processes described being here for the first time given to the public. In Paris, as well as in this country, the author addressed himself to mastering all the details of electroplating as exemplified in the workshop rather than as theoretically set forth. It is, therefore, a book for practical men, giving some 200 articles and formulas for solutions, describing process for gilding with and without a battery, for oxidizing, fire gilding, etc.

DAVID BRYCE & SON, of Glasgow, expect to issue Clouston's "History of Hieroglyphic Bibles" in the course of the next fortnight. Mr. Clouston has traced the first English version of those curious children's picture-books through a Dutch version to an Augsburg source—"Geistliche Herzens-Einbildungen," or "Spiritual Heart-Fancies" (1687). The bulk of the volume, as originally designed, has been nearly doubled by including an account of the principal block-books of the fifteenth century, and a fuller description of Lord Denbigh's unique MS. Bible in Rebus (or Mnemonic Bible, as it may also be called), written probably about 1460, and of European books of emblems. The volume contains upwards of thirty fac-simile plates, and fifty-six quaint cuts, printed from the original blocks employed in a "Hieroglyphic Bible," published at London in the first decade of the present century.

D. APPLETON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

A Journey in Other Worlds.

A Romance of the Future. By JOHN JACOB ASTOR. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

In this romance the author develops the possibilities of science in the year 2000. He describes a new force which enables the hero and his friends to visit Jupiter and Saturn, where they make some remarkable discoveries and have various surprising adventures. As a romance the book is most interesting, and it is also most stimulating in its suggestiveness regarding the possible results of the science of the future. The author has devoted himself to the study of scientific subjects, and the ingenious use which he makes of his knowledge will be certain to enlist the interest of readers. Mr. Dan Beard, working in perfect sympathy with the text, has produced a series of unusually effective illustrations.

A Short History of the Crusades.

By J I. MOMBERT, D.D., author of "Charles the Great," etc. With two maps. 12mo, 300 pages, cloth, $1.50.

This work presents to busy people a narrative of the grand drama of the Crusades. It traverses the whole ground, depicting on contemporary authority, and in the light of impartial criticism, the character and motives of the actors, the kernel and worth of their deeds.

The Trespasser.

By GILBERT PARKER, author of "The Translation of a Savage," "Pierre and his People," etc. No. 141, Town and Country Library. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

"Mr. Parker is in a very high degree vigorous and fresh both in subject and manner of writing, and it is to these qualities solely that his success is due and is deserved."—The Outlook.

"Mr. Gilbert Parker is one of those fortunate writers who leap into estimation at a single bound."—London Literary World.

"Mrs. Higginson's story is full of the warmth and sensuous romance and the bright coloring of the East. It is a book which every one will read with pleasure. It is redolent of the East and of its romance, its poetry, and its fervor. The story which it tells might have been taken from the pages of Hafiz or Khamyan."—Philadelphia Item.

CHEAP JACK ZITA.

By S. BARING-GOULD, author of "Mehalah," etc. 12mo, cloth. Illustrated by D. B. Keeler. Price, $1.25.

"The skill which went to the shaping of the heroine Zita is as great as, if not greater than, that which went to the shaping of Mr. Hardy's "Tess," and her womanly nature is of the highest order. The descriptions of the Fen country, which is the background of the story, are vivid, and through every scene, especially through the remarkable scene of riot towards the close, there is an intense feeling of actuality. It is a remarkable and rememberable novel." —Mail and Express.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE MERRIAM COMPANY, New York City, will publish shortly a new book by the author of "A Little Game with Destiny," to be entitled "Two Bad Brown Eyes."

THE Receiver's sale of the Worthington plates, books, and stock has been very well attended, the crowds and general interest reminding us of the old trade sale days. Satisfactory prices have been obtained, and the spirit of the sale has been exhilarating and exciting.

BRENTANO'S have now ready "Modern Scientific Whist," by C. D. P. Hamilton, a digest on practical whist, which will be appreciated by the beginner for its simplicity and clearness and by the expert for its comprehensiveness. Brentano's have a long line of whist-books, to which this will make an important addition.

J. SELWIN TAIT & SONS have just ready "Athletics for Physical Culture," by Theodore C. Knauff, describing the advantages of cycling, pedestrianism, boxing, wrestling, fencing, etc., finely illustrated with characteristic and interesting figures. The recent books in the Illustrated Library, Kenilworth Series, and Idler Series have been great successes, notably "Cheap Jack Zita," which has received appreciative notices throughout the country, and also from the most critical English papers.

MACMILLAN & Co. announce the second edition of S. R. Crockett's "The Raiders;" the third edition of Mrs. Humphry Ward's "Marcella;" and the fourth edition of F. Marion Crawford's "Katharine Lauderdale." Other works of fiction in active preparation are "The Flower of Forgiveness, and other stories," by Flora Annie Steel; "A Modern Buccaneer," by Ralph Boldrewood; and "A Valiant Ignorance," by Mary Angela Dickens. They also have in press "The Friendship of Nature: a chronicle of New England birds and flowers," by Mrs. J. O. Wright.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. publish to-day "Samuel Longfellow's Memoir and Letters," edited by Joseph May; "Poems," by Langdon Elwyn Mitchell; "The White Crown, and other stories," by Herbert D. Ward; "Folk-Tales of Angola," by Hell Chatelain, who has exceptional opportunity to study African life; and two valuable books for the business world in the new editions of "Jones on Mortgages" and "Money Trade and Banking." On May 5 "The Mistress of Beech Knoll," by Clara Louise Burnham, will take its place in the Riverside Paper Series.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. have recently purchased from Lee & Shepard the plates, stock, and copyright of Colonel Higginson's "Young Folks' History of the United States," "Young Folks' Book of American Explorers," "Hints on Writing and Speech-Making," and all works of the author heretofore on the list of Lee & Shepard, and are now prepared to furnish them to the trade. Last year Longmans, Green & Co. published Colonel Higginson's "English History for American Readers," written in co-operation with Professor Channing, of Harvard, which proved a most encouraging venture for them.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just ready a romance by John Jacob Astor, who makes his debut as a novelist in a story entitled "A Journey in Other Worlds." It is a romance of futurity, depicting the scientific possibilities of the year 2000, and describing a voyage of discovery to Jupiter and Saturn. It has been effectively illustrated by Dan Beard. They also publish "Ladies in the Field," a volume of articles on the sports in which the women of to-day engage, written by a "symposium" of women and edited by Lady Greville; "A Short History of the Crusades," by J. I. Mombert; and, in the Town and Country Library, a new novel by Gilbert Parker, entitled "The Trespasser."

The background is the town of Saltwich, in Cheshire, England, whose chief industry is the manufacture of of salt. A realistic picture is given of the lives of the workers in the salt factories, and of the unique character of the land which they occupy. "The queen of love" is a pretty little circus girl, who is deprived of a father's care, through the falling of the circus tent. Another character study in line with "Dodo" Eva Grampound stands for the very modern young Englishwoman, who is either born without emotions, or has them so deeply dormant in her that it needs exceptional events to bring them to the surface. Life is a great bore to her, and she marries Lord Hayes, hoping his wealth and social position will make existence more bearable. The climax in her story is reached when she discovers she can love, and the object, unfortunately, is not her husband.

Written for that numerous class of readers, "who, while they have received a good education and feel much interest in the history of the earth on which we live, have neither the leisure nor the inclination to master the technicalities or to enter into the minute details of any one branch of science." But in trying to tell "the story of our planet" in fairly plain words, the author has not shrunk from dealing with some of the more difficult questions which it involves. In short, the plan on which the book has been framed is generally similar to Sir C. Lyell's "Principles of geology." Glossary. Index.

A bar-sinister in the lineage of Rudolf Rassendylls, a young Englishman of to-day, accounts for his having the long nose and red hair of the German house of Elphberg, the reigning family of Ruritania. Wishing to make the acquaintance of his unknown cousins, he sets out for Ruritania to witness the coronation of Rudolf the Fifth, at Strelsau. By accident he meets the king at Zenda the night before the coronation, and has a drinking bout with him. In the morning the king cannot be aroused for the coronation, and the English Rudolf is persuaded to personate him, in order to save his throne and intended bride from the wicked designs of his brother, Black Michael. The incidents from here are rapid and romantic and delightfully improbable; they include love intrigues, political plots, and counterplots; the imprisonment of the real king at Zenda, and many attempts at rescue; midnight rides, sudden attacks, and numerous murders. By the author of "Half a hero."

It is a romance of French provincial life, and is of high moral purpose. The author is the eldest daughter of François Guizot, the distinguished historian and statesman, and has written many stories for the young.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF COMMERCIAL BOOKBINDING IN AMERICA.

THE exhibit of "commercial bookbindings" recently opened at the Grolier Club is one of the most interesting of recent book exhibits. In connection with it the club has issued a brief sketch of the history of this branch of binding in America, showing the remarkable changes wrought during the past twenty years. It is certainly true that to American readers of the present day it is a matter of course that a book shall be made externally attractive by artistic design, harmony of color, and excellence of finish; it is equally true that there are few who would accept without demur the statement that cloth book covers were generally unknown a generation ago, yet those who have "come to forty year" can realize this fact by mentally contrasting the juveniles of their childhood — sombre, squat volumes in speckled leather or black cloth, scant of illustration, severe of type — with the children's books of to-day, in their dainty covers, artistic in design and color, their lavish illustration, and careful workmanship.

In view of this contrast, it is interesting and suggestive to look back over the last few decades—as the Grolier Club exhibition enables one to do—and to note the gradual development of commercial bookbinding. Before all the world set madly to work making literature, each purchaser bound his books to suit himself, and the sober volumes were brought out in plain boards, waiting more seemly attire. With the spread of the reading habit and the rapid increase in publishing came the desire to make books externally attractive, and the evolution of the commercial binding began. It has already been said that cloth book covers are essentially a modern product; but even as far back as sixty years ago there were found occasional examples of commercial covers bearing evidence of attempted ornament. Boards were first used for this purpose; sometimes paper sides were imposed upon them and a paper label pasted on the back; later bookbinder's muslin, so-called, was used; and in the earliest examples of the art, paper, muslin, and sometimes leather title labels were stamped in gilt and affixed to the backs. The important departure of stamping covers in ink and combining black and colored inks with gold, does not seem to have appeared until between 1865 and 1870. The first step towards such work was the use of blind stamps upon cloth covers and the occasional making of elaborate designs in gilt, and examples of such treatment are to be seen in the books published between 1845 or 1850 and 1860. One of the books shown at the Grolier Club exhibition, as an illustration of the earlier cloth covers, is a volume entitled "The Sphere and Duties of Woman," by George W. Burnap, printed and published in 1847 at Baltimore, by John Murphy. "This book," according to the handbook already mentioned, "is evidently intended to circulate in polite society. It is covered with black cloth. The back has ornamental stamping and lettering in gold, and the front cover has a blind stamp in the shape of a rococo picture-frame, enclosing, supposedly, a portrait of what the author calls 'an American female' in a ball-dress and pearl necklace, all stamped in gold. The back cover has the same design, except that no gold is used." The trade will also remember a method of ornamenting cloth bindings, dating from an equally early period, and exemplified by Peter Parley's "Faggots for the Fireside," published by Appleton in 1855, in which colored arabesque designs in paper are "appliquéd" to the front cover and back of the book and fastened and finished with an elaborate scrollwork in stamped gilt.

The real beginnings of the modern decorated book cover in this country may be said to date from the time of the popular "blue and gold" editions of 1850 to 1860. The next noteworthy departure in the field is exemplified by Holt's Leisure Hour Series, in their attractive covers of drab linen. By this time (1870–74) the commercial cover of the first class was fairly launched on its successful career. All these designs, as well as their immediate successors, were the united work of the binder and the die-cutter. It is less than twenty years ago since it occurred to any publisher to employ the services of an artist in designing commercial covers. Although from 1865 continual effort was made to improve the appearance of covers, it was not until 1875 or 1880 that artists' designs were used in any appreciable numbers. The pioneer in this line of designing was Mrs. Sarah M. Whitman, of Boston, whose work is chiefly shown on the books of Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Since then the number of artists who have taken up this work incidentally or primarily has increased until now there are few illustrators who have not at some time designed one or more book covers. The list of designers whose work is shown at the Grolier Club exhibition includes the names of many of the leading artists of this country, and the work they have accomplished, together with the increasing desire of publishers to clothe their books fittingly and artistically, prove that the making of commercial bookbinding, in this country at least, has become an art instead of a mechanic craft. He would be a bold prophet who should venture to predict what the next decade may show in this direction.

POSTAL MATTERS.

NEW PROVISO CONCERNING "LIBRARIES."

THE Post-Office Appropriation Bill, which will probably come before the House next week, has a "rider" attached, which, if adopted, will enact most important legislation that will strike a serious blow at the interests now involved in the publication of "libraries" and serial issues in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Paul, St. Louis, etc., which interests represent fully $6,000,000 of capital. The "rider" referred to proposes to change all this—to compel these libraries and serial publications to pay third-class or full book rates.

A meeting of New York publishers was held on April 14, in the offices of the American News Co , in Chambers Street, to discuss the question of the proviso, and decide upon what steps to take in opposition to it. Among those present were Patrick Farrelly, general manager of the American News Co., Robert Bonner's Sons, J. Sullivan, of M. J. Ivers & Co., J. S. Ogilvie, and representatives of the firms of Beadle & Moss and Edward Brandaus & Co. It was decided to energetically oppose the proviso, and to send at once a committee of two to Washington for that purpose. This committee was immediately appointed, and consisted of M. Victor and John Elderkin, of Robert Bonner's Sons. The committee was instructed to proceed at will to Washington.

The following communication of M. J. Ivers & Co., addressed to Senator Hill, was informally read at the close of the meeting, and received this indorsement:

We understand that the Post-Office and Post Roads Committee of the House has had inserted in the Appropriation bill for the Post-Office Department a proviso requiring publications of books in serial parts, novels issued, periodicals, etc., bound or unbound, to pay postage at third-class rates for transmission through the mails.

The effect of this will be to empower the postmaster to arbitrarily decide what is and what is not a book, and thus destroy many serial periodicals which have been established in this city and elsewhere at a large outlay of capital for the purpose of supplying the people with the best standard literature at nominal prices. The series which we now publish could not be sold at the popular prices at which they are now offered if taxed for transportation as third-class matter, which in some cases would be as much as the public now pay for the publications.

Should the new proviso go through, these publishers will be compelled to send their publications by express, as the rates are less than

"BIBLIOGRAPHICA."

THE first number of Bibliographica, the new English magazine of bibliography (London: Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co.), has just been imported by Charles Scribner's Sons, the American agents of the publication. The magazine will be published quarterly, the last number appearing at the end of 1896. It treats of bibliography in its historical and artistic aspects, and its object is to present a series of papers on various points of book-lore, by writers of authority, in a form which, while allowing of serial publication, will also be complete and final. To do this, the novel plan of publishing the magazine for three years only has been adopted, as it is believed that in the course of twelve quarterly numbers the contributors will be able to write on most of their special topics, and it is not desired that the magazine should be continued after the freshness of its first impulse has been exhausted. A notable list of contributions has been secured for the various topics. The subject of "Manuscripts" will be handled by E. Maunde Thompson, principal librarian of the British Museum; Mr. Warner, of the Department of Manuscripts of the British Museum, and Falconer Madan, of the Bodleian. "Early Printed Books" will be described by Gordon Duff, Russell Martineau, J. P. Edmond, W. Copinger, and others; contributions to the history of "Book-Collecting and Libraries" will be by Mr. and Mrs. Elton, W. Y. Fletcher, Austin Dobson, and Messrs. Tedder and Macray; while "Book Illustrations" will be dealt with by William Morris, Dr. Paul Kristeller, C. Fairfax Murray, A. W. Pollard, and Laurence Housman. "Book Prices and Book Sales," "Book-Plates," and "Bookbindings" will be treated of by authorities in each of these fields; there will be a paper on "Early Printed Music;" articles by R. C. Christie, Dr. Garnett, Andrew Lang, H. B. Wheatley, and other well-known writers; and there will be several noteworthy French contributions by Octave Uzanne, Henri Béraldi, and others.

The first number of Bibliographica is a sufficient indication of the importance and beauty of the completed work. It is a large imperial octavo of 128 pages, finely printed on hand-made paper, with wide margins and rough edges; the typography is unusually bold and clear. The cover is of gray-blue cartridge-paper, with a conventional frame design in black, enclosing the list of contents. There are numerous cuts in the text, besides several full-page illustrations, the frontispiece being a beautiful colored reproduction of a copy of Celsus from the library of Grolier, which is described at length by W. Y. Fletcher. The articles in this first number comprise "Christina of Sweden and Her Books," by Charles I. Elton; "Raoul Lefevre and Le Recueil des Histoires de Troyé," by H. Oskar Sommer; "Names and Notes in Books," by Andrew Lang; "The Accipies Wood-cut," by R. Proctor; "Le Bibliophile Moderne," by Octave Uzanne; "Thoinau's Les Relieurs Français," by S. T. Prideaux; "The Stationers at the Sign of the Trinity," by E. Gordon Duff; and "The Books of Hours of Geoffroy Tory," by Alfred W. Pollard.

The magazine is issued in a limited edition, and the editions for England and America are identical in imprint and all other particulars. Subscriptions are taken only for the entire

COMMERCIAL BINDINGS AT THE GROLIER CLUB.

An exhibition of commercial bookbindings was opened at the Grolier Club on April 5, to continue until April 28. The exhibition is a most interesting one and excellently comprehensive, including also a selection of the stamps used in printing the cloth bindings, and many of the original drawings. The committee in charge has arranged the exhibit so as to present an object lesson, showing the development of the art in recent years. This is effectively accomplished by a case of old books dating from the '50s, their dingy, unattractive covers forming a striking contrast to the artistic and dainty creations of to-day. The "blue and gold" editions of 1850–60 mark the first beginning of decorated book-covers in this country; then comes Ik Marvel's long-forgotten volume, "The Lorgnette" published in 1853 by Scribner, in what was then considered an ambitious and pretentious cover of claret-brown cloth, with blind stamped "rustic" border and a central stamp of a gilt thistle. The "linen duster" cover of Holt's Leisure Hour Series, of the early '70s, is an excellent example of the gradual development of attractive bindings, and further steps in the process are marked by Richard Watson Gilder's "The New Day" in 1876 and "My Lady Pokahontas" in 1885. The collection of latest examples of artistic bindings is comprehensive and excellently representative of modern American work, including, as it does, bindings from almost all the leading publishers. The Century Company, Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and Scribner are especially well represented; Harper, Cassell, Macmillan, Appleton, Roberts, Putnam, Little, Brown & Co., Lippincott, and Dodd, Mead & Co. also have many excellent examples. The covers of the "Century Dictionary," of the "Century Gallery," and the charming design for Richard Watson Gilder's "Great Remembrance" are among the most notable examples shown by the Century Co.; Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have Walter Crane's designs to the "Wonder-Book" and to Mrs. Deland's "Old Garden." F. H. Smith's design for his "Well-Worn Roads," and several of Mrs. Whitman's artistic covers; Macmillan & Co. show Irving's "Sleepy Hollow," Christina Rossetti's "Goblin Market," and Winter's "Shakespeare's England;" Scribners have a number of artistic books, and Harper and Appleton show some very attractive designs. A number of original drawings are shown, notably those of Walter Crane and Mrs. Whitman. Among the artists whose work is represented in the collection are Miss Guiney, Miss Alice C. Morse, Miss Margaret Armstrong, Stanford White, George Wharton Edwards, Harold B. Sherwin, George Fletcher Babb, Walter Greenough, Edwin Abbey, Elisha Vedder, Howard Pyle, W. H. Gibson, F. Hopkinson Smith, Reginald Birch, and Otto Toaspern. Juvenile books are well represented, and they are among the daintiest and most attractive of the collection. There is a pretty full showing of English lithographed covers in this line—the delightful Caldecott covers, the quaint Kate Greenaway designs, and the charming work on the Nister color-books; these chiefly bear the imprint of Routledge, Dutton, and the Cassells. Space is also given to French and German commercial bindings, but these seem only to emphasize the [illegible] French cloth covers are few in number, commonplace in design, and crude in color; their paper covers are delightfully characteristic, fresh, and interesting. The German examples, however, are unrelieved by any merit, save an occasional excellence in drawing; they are heavy in design, cumbersome in detail, and dull in tint. Neither country shows any advance over the work of twenty or even fifty years ago.

APROPOS OF BOOKWORMS.

"While I have never seen a live bookworm in my experience," said Edward E. Levi, the well-known dealer in old books to a Pittsburg Despatch man recently, "I have come across a number of them dead. But I have seen much of their work. Now, look at this book. You see that although it is fully six inches thick, yet a worm has made a hole from the first page to the last. There must have been something in the make-up of the covers that did not suit his æsthetic taste, for you see he has steadily made his way in a diagonal line so as to allow himself to come out at the hinge of the cover. These worms are most industrious. I remember receiving a set of books, six volumes, which had stood on a shelf of a library for scores of years untouched. The bookworm had actually commenced at the corner of the first volume and eaten his way straight through the six. The pathway of the worm was almost perfectly straight. Of course here, where the books are being constantly handled, it would be impossible for anything like that to occur. It is a peculiar fact that these bookworms, like their namesakes in the human family, have only a fondness for fine, rare volumes. You will never find a bookworm in a common book. While we escape the devastation of these animals in cheap books, there is an insect which attends to the lower grades and does its work persistently and well.

"I refer to a small louse, which a prominent entomologist designated as a 'sulphur louse.' This little insect is somewhat smaller than a fly and has in every way the appearance of what it is called. It is unlike the bookworm in that it has no use for finely-bound books, but devotes all its attention to the cheap cloth bindings. And I might say that the little fellow does his work well. It also differs from the worm, as it does not require the books to be long undisturbed for him to begin operations. Last summer these insects became so numerous here that they were a pest. It was quite interesting to study them. They feed upon the cheap cloth bindings, seeming to eat the coloring. They leave a book all covered over with spots as if water had been sprinkled upon it. The little insects seem to have a liking for brightly-colored bindings. We killed a great many of them, a mere touch of the finger being sufficient to smash them. We noticed that when their outside shell was broken they seemed to be filled with a powder resembling that on the wings of a butterfly. The peculiar feature, however, was that this powder was always the color of the book-cover upon which the insect had been feeding. So that we found some with red powder inside, others with blue, and still others with green. The sulphur louse is an interesting [illegible]

CAPTURE OF A BOOK-THIEF.

A CLEVER book-thief, who has been conducting operations among the up-town book-stores of New York for many months past, was arrested in this city on Friday, April 13. His capture was due to the successful amateur detective work of Charles A. Burkhardt, head of the stationery department of E. P. Dutton & Co. Among the firms victimized were E. P. Dutton & Co., G. P. Putnam's Sons, J. W. Bouton, A. D. F. Randolph & Co., The Methodist Book Concern, and several others. On April 3 S. F. McLean, of 13 Cooper Union, brought to Mr. Burkhardt a volume of Lamb's "Essays of Elia," extra illustrated, bearing the imprint of E. P. Dutton & Co., which Mr. McLean suspected had been stolen. Mr. McLean had bought the book the day before of a man from whom he had purchased many volumes for six months or more. This person was well dressed, seemed well educated, and had represented himself as the owner of a fine library, compelled by financial circumstances to sell his books; he always had some plausible excuse for withholding his address, when it was suggested that his library be examined and an offer made for it en bloc. Mr. McLean's suspicions were first aroused by the low price asked for the "Essays of Elia," and by the fact that the book was extra illustrated, and was also the first volume of a two-volume set. It was submitted to Mr. Burkhardt for identification, and he recognized it at once as a book that he had himself extra illustrated and extended from one to two volumes. A detective was immediately put on the case, but, after working for two days, he reported that he was unable to locate the thief. Mr. Burkhardt then undertook a little personal detective work, which proved eminently successful. He found at McLean's a copy of "Ben-Hur" in full seal, and Winter's "Life of Booth," in three-quarter levant, both stolen from Dutton's, also several books belonging to A. D. F. Randolph & Co., whom he furnished with a description of the thief, asking them to notify him on the latter's reappearance. On Friday Mr. Burkhardt was informed that the thief had again appeared at Randolph's; he was allowed to depart, followed by Mr. Burkhardt and Mr. G. C. Whitworth, of A. D. F. Randolph & Co., and, after visiting the Methodist Book Concern, started down Fifth Avenue, where he was arrested as soon as a policeman was found. He was arraigned at Jefferson Market Court on Saturday, April 14, where he pleaded guilty, and was remanded for the General Sessions in default of $1000 bail. He is known as George Bennett, alias George B. Dennett, and was also recognized by the police as "Miss Madge," a skilful and dangerous shoplifter; he has served two terms for similar offences. When arrested, he had on his person two copies of "Prue and I," half calf, stolen from Putnam's; "Ben-Hur," two volumes, half calf, stolen from Randolph's; Cary's poems, half calf, and a volume of Wordsworth, full morocco, from the Methodist Book Concern. Bennett's address was finally located at 322 West 18th Street. Among the dealers who bought his plunder were S. F. McLean & Co., W. J. Casey, 123 Fourth Ave., and F. W. Farnell, Fourth Ave. and 19th Street. Several books in the possession of these booksellers were unidentified by the publishers known to have been victimized.

Well, let me gratefully acknowledge your courteous letter, with proof of article so kindly written. I am touched most sincerely by the deluge of letters and telegrams from the "trade" and others, that kept me busy yesterday. I take this early opportunity of thanking you for your pleasant tribute to an old-fashioned bookseller, who in the fifty years of his experience has gone on the principle of "live and let live," and who has sought to "live peaceably with all men."

ASSIGNMENT OF C. L. WEBSTER & CO.

SAMUEL L. CLEMENS ("Mark Twain") and Frederick J. Hall, composing the firm of Charles L. Webster & Co., 67 Fifth Avenue, New York, filed an assignment in the County Clerk's office on the afternoon of Wednesday, April 18. The assignee is Bainbridge Colby, of 40 Wall St., and the assignment is without preference. The failure came as a surprise to the trade, and there is as yet no definite information as to assets, liabilities, or future plans. Mr. Hall has made a brief statement regarding the failure, in which he says: "The assignment was very sudden and unexpected. We had expected to get money from certain sources, which we had counted upon to meet certain maturing obligations, but we were very much disappointed in not obtaining this money, and consequently could not meet the obligations referred to; we therefore thought the best course for all concerned was to make an assignment." He did not think that the liabilities would amount to over $250,000. Mr. Clemens could not be interviewed, and Mr. Colby, the assignee, was unable to give more than a general idea of the matter. He could give no estimate of the liabilities, but said they were probably not more than $250,000. According to his statement, "The cause of the assignment is the usual general cause prevailing in business nowadays, and is entirely confined to the business." "Mr. Clemens," he said, "is individually liable for the debts of the firm, as well as the other partners. How much individual means he has I do not at present know. He signed the deed of assignment in New York City, but he lives in Hartford."

The business was started on May 1, 1884, under the firm-name of C. L. Webster & Co., by Charles L. Webster and his wife's uncle, Samuel C. Clemens. The firm was organized to publish Mr. Clemens' works, but it afterward added the works of other authors, principally subscription-books, and still later handled miscellaneous books. The financial strength of the firm was centred in Mr. Clemens, who was supposed to be worth several hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Webster withdrew from the firm in 1888, and died on April 26, 1891. He was succeeded in 1888 by Mr. Hall, who became the active manager of the business.

Besides the works of "Mark Twain," the firm published the memoirs of General Grant, a life of Pope Leo XIII., and other books. In 1891 the publication of the "Library of American Literature" was begun, in which, it was understood, $100,000 was invested, and which took up a part of the firm's capital. This part of the business was sold to William Evarts Benjamin in October, 1893. Mr. Hall stated that last January the firm had sold a part of its subscription-book business, and was making a feature of issuing trade-books.

TYPOTHETÆ ANNUAL MEETING.

THE annual meeting of the New York Typothetæ was held on Tuesday, April 10, at the society's headquarters, No. 19 Park Row. Officers were elected as follows: President, Theodore L. De Vinne; vice-presidents, Douglas Taylor and Joseph J. Little; secretary, E. Parke Coby; recording secretary, W. W. Pasko; treasurer, Horace G. Polhemus; executive committee, Peter De Baun, B. H. Tyrrel, and James A. Rogers.

Among the important members who had died during the year were mentioned Joseph Keppler, of Puck, Hermann A. Rost, the German printer of New York, whose office ranked among the model ones of the country, and the Rev. Charles F. Deems, of the Church of the Strangers. Mr. W. W. Pasko reported as follows upon the library provided by the will of William C. Martin:

"The library of the society has now received the books provided for by the will of William C. Martin. They have been carefully selected by Mr. De Vinne, your president, and embrace almost all the most valuable works upon the practice of the art, as well as many illustrating its origin, history, or development. The library also contains lexicons of Greek, Latin, French, Spanish, and German, concordances, and English dictionaries, among the latter the 'Century Dictionary,' probably the largest and most difficult book, looked at from a printer's standpoint, ever issued from the American press. Among other masterpieces which are now among the collection are Barlow's 'Columbiad,' the chief work of the greatest American printer of the early part of the century, William Fry, and Bodoni's Lord's Prayer in one hundred and fifty languages, and the Specimen Book of his printing-office. Mr. De Vinne has supplemented the books he has purchased with others from his own collection, and Mr. S. P. Avery, an enthusiastic lover of good books, has given us a large number."

The society will shortly move into more commodious and more suitable quarters in the Downing Building on Fulton Street, where its meetings will no doubt continue as helpful as ever.

OBITUARY.

DAVID DUDLEY FIELD.

THE world-renowned lawyer, David Dudley Field, died on Friday morning, April 13, at the residence of his daughter-in-law, the widow of David Dudley Field, Jr. Mr. Field returned on April 11 from a voyage abroad in excellent health, landing in a fearful storm. He caught cold and died of pneumonia.

David Dudley Field was born in Haddam, Conn., February 13, 1805. He was graduated at Williams College in 1825. He studied law in Albany first with Harmanus Bleecker, but after a few months returned to this city, where he completed his studies. In 1828 he was admitted to the bar, and became a junior partner in the law firm of Henry & D. Sedgwick. Mr. Field until 1885 was continuously engaged in the active practice of his profession. As early as 1839 Mr. Field wrote a "Letter on the Reform of the Judiciary System," and afterward addressed a committee of the New York Legislature on the subject. In 1846 he wrote a series of articles on "The Reorganization of the Judiciary," which were widely distributed in pamphlet form. In September, 1847, he was appointed Commissioner on Practice and Pleadings, and as such took part in the preparation of the codes of procedure. The commission reported the first instalment to the legislature in February, and it was enacted in April, 1848. The remainder was reported in four sections at different times until January, 1850, when the completed "Codes of Civil and Criminal Procedure" were submitted to the legislature. Both these codes have been enacted into law. In 1857 Mr. Field was appointed by the State of New York head of a commission to prepare a political code, a penal code, and a civil code. These, with the two codes of procedure previously made, were designed to supersede the unwritten or common law. They were completed in 1865, and covered the entire province of American law, and presented to the people in compact form the whole law by which they were governed. In 1873 Mr. Field presented to the Social Science Congress his "Outlines of an International Code," which attracted the attention of all jurists, and has been translated into French, Italian, and Chinese.

During the Civil War Mr. Field delivered numerous addresses and contributed very largely to current literature on political topics. His "Sketches Over the Sea" appeared in the Democratic Review at the time of his first trip abroad in 1836, and he published "Speeches, Arguments, and Miscellaneous Papers."

David Dudley Field was a brother of the late Cyrus W. Field, to whom the world owes the Atlantic cable.

THE firm of M. Calmann Lévy has sustained a heavy loss in the death of M. Louis Wouters, who had been thirty-three years in the service of the great publishers. For the last twenty years M. Wouters filled the post of chief of the service of publicity. He was a Dutchman by birth and was distinguished for his linguistic attainments. His courtesy and obliging disposition will make him widely regretted. He was 58 years of age.

COUNT ADOLPHE FREDERICK VON SCHACK, the millionaire author, died at Munich on April 16. He was in his seventy-ninth year Count von Schack bequeathed his large picture gallery to Emperor William, with the stipulation that it be added to the Berlin Museum. He was the author of a "History of Dramatic Literature and Art in Spain" (1840), which has a high reputation, and of several translations from the Persian.

THE death is announced in Paris of Henri Charles Georges Pouchet, the naturalist, professor of comparative anatomy in the Museum d'Histoire Naturelle. He was born at Rouen in 1833, and graduated as a physician in 1864. He wrote many books and pamphlets in the course of his busy life.

A DESPATCH from Bowling Green, Ky., says that "Ben" King, the poet, better known as the "Michigan Bard" and by the pseudonym of "Bow Hackley," was found dead in bed on the 7th inst. at a hotel there.

JONES WARREN WILDER, one of the founders and for many years president of the Butterick Publishing Company, died at No. 123 West Seventy-seventh Street, April 10, after a lingering illness.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MISS BEATRICE HARRADEN, who wrote "Ships That Pass in the Night," will arrive in this country from England shortly.

AUBREY BEARDSLEY, the artist whose fantastic drawings are just now a "fad" of English bookmakers, is not much over twenty years old.

WILLIAM JOHNSON, whose novel, "My Dead Self," has received praise in England, is ambitious to write what he calls "the Uncle Tom's Cabin of the land question."

MRS. CLARA SIDNEY DAVIDGE, a daughter of Bishop Potter, of New York, is a very philanthropic woman, and has made a special study of the working girls' clubs in this city and its vicinity. She is thoroughly informed on this subject, and has, after much persuasion, consented to write a story on it for publication, which will shortly appear in print.

RUDYARD KIPLING disposes of the innumerable paragraphs which are being circulated about him as follows to a friend:

SIX LIES.

I am not going
To read from my writings;
To start a periodical;
To be an editor, except of my own work;
To "write up" Vermont and Vermonters;
To start a publishing house;
To do any insane thing.

TWO TRUTHS.

I am going
To England, for a brief visit;
I have been
To Bermuda.

THOSE stirring articles on woman suffrage, which have appeared of late over the name of Elizabeth Burt Gamble, have caused considerable discussion as well as animosity, and have led many to believe that the author must be a woman long past middle life, with a great deal of experience, to advance such ideas. But this is wrong, the Putnams say, as she is a young married woman, and resides with her husband in Detroit, where he is engaged in a private business. She has printed two books. Her first was on the "Evolution of Woman," and the last "An Inquiry into the Dogma of Woman's Superiority to Man." The last book has just been issued by the Putnams, and is having a very large sale. Mrs. Gamble began her career by attempting to write a pamphlet, but finding the subject so extensive she decided to write a book. The success of the first venture prompted the writing of the second one.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The American Horseman and Sportsman is the title of a new weekly. Trade price 7 cents, and is returnable.

Harper's Weekly for April 21 contains an article on "The Congressional Library," by Nannie Belle Maury.

The Argosy, formerly a weekly, is now issued in magazine form as a monthly at 10 cents. Trade price 8½ cents.

The Ladies' Home Journal has discontinued its rate for reading notices, and in the future will accept none but display advertising.

Walden's Life and Commercial Traveller are the titles of two new monthlies, which retail at 10 cents each. Trade price 7 cents. Both are returnable.

The International Journal of Ethics for April contains reviews of important works recently published on ethical subjects in English and foreign languages which are of particular value.

THE last of Miss Constance Fenimore Woolson's stories will appear in the June Harper's Magazine. Its title is "The Waitress," and its scene, like that of all her latest work, is in Italy.

IN the April number of Blackwood's Magazine (The Leonard Scott Publishing Company) an article describing a meeting between De Quincey and Emerson in Edinburgh is of exceptional interest.

THE first place in The English Illustrated for April is given to an interesting article on "Women Poets of the Day," written by Richard Le Gallienne, and enriched with many extracts and photographs.

A ST. PETERSBURG editor has hit upon the notion of printing his journal on paper suitable for making cigarettes. It is said that its circulation has been largely increased by this means, as the Russians are largely given to smoking cigarettes, which they make themselves.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S new poem, "The Last Rhyme of True Thomas," is quite a long one, and has to do with the knighting of a literary person. It has been published in Jerome K. Jerome's London weekly, To-Day, and the American copyright is held by D. Appleton & Co.

THE Laurenziana Library at Florence is enthusiastically and pleasantly described by Miss Helen Zimmern in The Leisure Hour for April. There are few collections of which we should find the loss so irreparable, and the illustrations prove that the treasures have such a habitation as they deserve.

W. D. HOWELLS will begin the account of his "First Visit to New England" in the May Harper's. This trip was undertaken when he was a young newspaper writer in Columbus.

Ohio, and in the course of it he met most of the men who, thirty-five years ago, made Boston the literary centre of America.

THERE is a good portrait of Mr. S. R. Crockett in The Bookman, with an interesting sketch of his career. Mr. Crockett first wrote under the pseudonym of Ford Bereton. There is, in the same issue, a sharp reply from Thomas J. Wise to Mr. Roberts' article in the March Fortnightly on "The First Edition Mania."

PROFESSOR CORSON, of Cornell, prints in this number of The Critic a hitherto unpublished letter of Edwin Booth's, in which the famous impersonator of Shakespearian characters makes his appearance in a new rôle—that of a Shakespearian commentator. Dr. Bartol, of Boston, sends an interesting note on "Emerson as a Poet."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY will publish immediately "The History of the English Bible," by Professor T. Harwood Pattison.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have in preparation a volume of short stories by Edith Wharton, which have almost all appeared in Scribner's Magazine.

"THE PLAYERS," the club which Edwin Booth founded for actors, is at luncheon-time almost entirely given over to authors and publishers, and the literary element has quite elbowed the theatrical to the wall.

OVER $3000 were stolen from a safe in the store of A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago, on Friday night, April 6. The money had been drawn for the purpose of paying the employees of the house on Saturday morning.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS add to their list of volumes for summer reading "Peak and Prairie," by Anna Fuller, author of "Pratt Portraits" and a "Literary Courtship." Mr. Post's "Harvard Stories" will be issued for popular sale in paper covers.

ROBERTS BROTHERS will publish April 28 two new instalments of their Columbian Knowledge Series: "Public Libraries in America" and "Library Classification," both by W. I. Fletcher. They will also issue a pleasing out-door book, by Eben J. Loomis, entitled "Wayside Sketches."

INDIVIDUAL copies of the new limited edition of "Walpole's Letters" cost $400. This is not remarkable, since the nine volumes of former editions have been increased to eighteen by the addition of seven hundred portraits and views of places referred to in the letters. Only a hundred copies have been printed.

D. APPLETON & CO. have leased for ten years the six upper floors of the newly completed seven-story building at the northwest corner of 5th Ave. and 13th Street, New York City. The building is fire-proof, well equipped, and desirable for publishing purposes, and the location is in the heart of the new publishing district.

THE stock of "Annual American Catalogues" for 1890, 1891, and 1892 is rapidly giving out. The volume for 1891 cannot be supplied any more. Of 1890 there remain twenty-nine copies, printed from type and immediately distributed. They cannot be reprinted, and intending purchasers should order at once, or may find themselves left without complete sets.

THE most beautiful volume in the Congressional Library at Washington is a Bible which was transcribed by a monk in the sixteenth century. The general lettering is in German text, which could not be matched in perfection of type in the best equipped printing office. The parchment is in perfect preservation. There are two columns on a page, and nowhere is traceable the slightest irregularity of line, space or formation of letters. Even under a magnifying-glass it seems flawless.

WHAT author has written the most perfect picture of a battle in the English language? Lord Wolseley says that high honor belongs, not to any of his own countrymen, but to the American, Captain Charles King, instancing Captain King's description of the cavalry fight at Gettysburg, in "Between the Lines." With equal truth it may be said that no one has written so well about life at West Point as Captain King in the story called "Cadet Days," in which that delightful "Corporal Pops" reappears. It has just been announced in book form by Harper & Brothers.

WHILE preparing for the Columbian Exhibition our government applied to Pope Leo XIII. for photographic copies of documents in the Vatican archives showing the papal action in regard to America during its early history. Mr. J. C. Heywood, a graduate of Harvard College in 1855, and now one of the Pope's chamberlains, has issued an edition of these photographs, with the text printed on the opposite page. Only twenty-five copies of this most valuable publication are printed, "for presentation to the more illustrious libraries." We do not as yet know the favored libraries, beyond that the British Museum is booked for one of the treasures.

HARPER & BROTHERS have brought suit against Edgar S. Werner for an infringement of the copyright of "Ben-Hur," by using and changing the order of certain portions of that book in his volume entitled "Werner's Readings and Recitations." Mr. Werner asserts that he gave full credit to the publishers by printing (without knowledge or consent of Harper & Brothers, however) the following notice: "We are indebted to the following publishers: Harper & Brothers, for Carleton's 'The Convict's Christmas Eve,' Wallace's 'Ben-Hur's Chariot Race,' and 'The Death of Montezuma.'" Mr. Werner insists that his intentions were not piratical, and claims that he has advertised instead of injuring the book.

PETER ECKLER, New York City, has reprinted the little pamphlet, written by Charles Dickens in 1836, while the bill was pending regarding the observance of Sunday. This trenchant argument in favor of personal liberty, entitled "Sunday under Three Heads," was published under the pseudonym of "Timothy Sparks," with illustrations by "Phiz" (Hablot Knight Browne). J. W. Jarvis & Son, London, published in 1884 a reproduction in fac-simile of the very rare original, which was sold first at two shillings, but which collectors are now delighted to procure at $50. The present publishers have been encouraged to reproduce last year regarding the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday.

THERE are scores of business men, says the Building Journal, who when told that the circulation of a trade paper is 1000 to 2000, are inclined to ridicule its claim as an advertising medium, not knowing that a single edition of a trade paper having a circulation of 1000 copies reaches more persons whom they wish to reach than the issue of a daily paper of 100,000 copies. Those who may be surprised at this statement and imagine that the figures are incorrect may easily convince themselves of their error by referring to the commercial agency reports. To reach the consumer of general merchandise the daily papers are a valuable medium; to reach those particularly interested in trade, the trade papers alone cover the field.

BANGS & CO. will sell on April 25, 26, and 27 the library of the late John Wolfe, with additions from other consignments, forming an interesting, sumptuous, and valuable collection of books in English and French literature, comprising many and beautiful art publications, many scarce and curious volumes of humorous and light literature, and a complete set of the Grolier Club publications. A curiosity in the sale is a portion of "The Vedas," very neatly written on palm leaves in the form of a fan, more than two hundred years old. On the 23d the auctioneers will sell a collection including unusual works on crime and criminals, and rare Americana pamphlets; and on the 24th they will handle a collection of miscellaneous books, comprising new publications, illustrated works, Americana, and good medical books.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have imported an edition for the American market of "The Autobiography of Theobald Wolfe Tone" (1763–1798), edited with an introduction by R. Barry O'Brien. In 1826 the "Life of Theobald Wolfe Tone," edited by his son, was published in Washington. The work consisted of two short autobiographical sketches; of an account of the Catholic Convention of 1793; of Tone's diaries, letters, and political writings; concluding with an account, by his son, of the last French expedition to Ireland, and of the fate of Tone's family after his death. The political writings of Tone are of little interest or importance now, but the man has a distinct place in Irish history. His disciples are the founders of the Fenian organization. The work is published in two large volumes, and contains many portraits of the Tone family. They have also an edition of Herbert P. Horne's "The Binding of Books," an essay in the history of gold tooled bindings.

FOREIGN NOTES.

MR. BARRIE'S new novel—about two-thirds of which may be said to be completed—is so far a study of child-life.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER have nearly ready for publication Dr. Leyman B. Sperry's "Confidential Talks with Young Men."

MR. THOMAS J. WISE has completed his monumental bibliography of the writings of John Ruskin. It has been compiled with great care and thoroughness.

THE manuscript of Sir Walter Scott's "Life sheets, mostly written on both sides, was recently sold in London for £208.

JOHN MURRAY has ready for immediate publication a new and revised edition of Sir William Smith's "Classical Dictionary of Mythology, Biography, and Geography," edited by S. E. Marindin.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO. have in the press for early publication an important new novel in two volumes, entitled "Sarah, a Survival," by Sydney Christian, whose recent story, "Lydia," met with a very favorable reception by the press.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH & CO. have nearly ready Joseph Knight's biography of David Garrick. It is to contain, as frontispiece, an etched portrait by W. Boucher of the celebrated actor, from a painting by Gainsborough in the possession of Mrs. Kay, which has never before been engraved. A few large-paper copies printed on hand-made paper will also be issued.

THE son of Count Tolstoï, who is now in Paris, has been questioned as to his father's book on the Franco-Russian fêtes, which has been announced for publication. It appears that the novelist has seized this episode of patriotic ebullition as an excuse to exploit his ideas on patriotism, which, according to his son, he thinks inconsistent with the spirit of Christianity. This is to be the general theme of the new book.

THE Archduke Rainer's collection of 10,000 Egyptian papyrus documents was recently on exhibition at Vienna. These documents are written in eleven different languages, and have all been deciphered and scientifically arranged. They cover a period of 2500 years, and are said to contain evidence that printing from type was known to the Egyptians as far back as the tenth century A.D. They were discovered at El Fayoum several years ago.

ELLIOT STOCK will soon have ready in The Book-Lovers' Library a work by a noted "brother of the angle," Mr. R. B. Marston, entitled "Walton and Some Earlier Writers on Fish and Fishing," which will give all who are fond of "fyshynge wyth an angle" an account of a number of rare works on their favorite subject. While giving prominence to Walton's "Angler," it will deal with some of old Izaak's predecessors much more fully than does any similar work. The chapters treating of Walton will include a biographical notice, a general account of "The Compleat Angler," the secret of its success, the more notable of its many editions, and some contemporary and other opinions about it and its writer. The work, in fact, will be a popular history of the best literature of angling.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & COMPANY,

4 Park Street, Boston; 11 East 17th Street, New York,

WILL PUBLISH WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25:

Samuel Longfellow: Memoir and Letters.

Edited by JOSEPH MAY. With a portrait. Crown 8vo, gilt top, $1.50.

Samuel Longfellow: Essays and Sermons.

Edited by JOSEPH MAY. With a portrait. Crown 8vo, gilt top, $1.50.

To not a few the announcement of these two volumes will be peculiarly welcome. Samuel Longfellow's genius was of a very undemonstrative kind, yet very genuine. He had a passion for sincerity of thought, and corresponding sincerity of speech; so that his essays, sermons, and poems have a quality of intense truthfulness quite uncommon. They are also characterized by fine scholarship, deep thoughtfulness, and the kind of optimism which a wise good man is altogether justified in cherishing. These two volumes may safely be ranked among the very best this season will produce.

The White Crown, and Other Stories.

By HERBERT D. WARD. 16mo, $1.25.

A collection of bright, fresh, readable stories, which ought to entertain a host of readers the coming season. They are not weighted with too serious a purpose, and they have the great merit of seizing and holding the attention.

The Story of Dan.

By M. E. FRANCIS. 16mo, $1.25.

This is a strong, well-written, readable story of Irish life. The characters are very distinctly Irish of course, but are clearly defined; and the dramatic incidents, while treated with uniform good taste, will cause the story to be read with eager interest.

Folk-Tales of Angola.

By HELI CHATELAIN, late United States Commercial Agent at Loanda, Angola, West Africa. With two maps and several melodies. 8vo, $3.00, net.

Mr. Chatelain during a stay of several years at Loanda possessed exceptional opportunities for observation of African life. As a result of his labors, he has been able to make a gathering of fifty Angolan folk-tales, which will represent the traditional lore of the West Coast in the same manner as the Zulu collection of Bishop Callaway represents that of South Africa.

Poems.

By LANGDON ELWYN MITCHELL. Crown 8vo, gilt top, $1.25.

This is a book of fine variety—including dramatic power, a sense of nature, imagination, and fancy; and readers will find it distinctly superior to the average of current books of verse.

Money, Trade, and Banking.

By JOSEPH H. WALKER. New Edition. 16mo, 50 cents.

Mr. Walker's vigorous advocacy in Congress of a thoroughly sound currency will attract attention to this new edition of his very good and clear book on Money, Trade, and Banking.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' NEW BOOKS

JUST PUBLISHED:

Overheard in Arcady.

By ROBERT BRIDGES (Droch). With 65 illustrations by O. Herford, F. G. Attwood, and A. E. Sterner. 12mo, $1.25.

DIALOGUES ABOUT: Howells, James, Aldrich, Stockton, Davis, Crawford, Kipling, Meredith, Stevenson, and Barrie.

Mr. Bridges' book has a delightful originality both of form and of substance. In each of his chapters the characters created by the novelist discuss his works with knowledge, sympathetic appreciation, wit, and humor. The illustrations add materially to the novelty of the volume.

Ardis Claverden.

By FRANK R. STOCKTON. 12mo, $1.50.

Charles Scribner's Sons have recently acquired the rights of this volume and now issue it in uniform style with the author's other famous books. The heroine, Miss Ardis Claverden, is as charming as the whole story is characteristic, in its delicious humor, of the author.

The Incarnation of the Son of God.

Bampton Lectures for the Year 1891. By Rev. CHARLES GORE, editor of "Lux Mundi." New edition. 12mo, $1.50.

A new and cheaper edition of a book which has aroused nearly as much discussion as its famous predecessor, "Lux Mundi."

READY APRIL 28:

Recollections of a Virginian.

In the Mexican, Indian, and Civil Wars. By General DABNEY H. MAURY. With portrait. 12mo, $1.50.

General Maury has written a very racy and entertaining narrative of his experiences and adventures during a long and active life. He is a witty story-teller, and his book contains many amusing anecdotes as well as some tragic and pathetic episodes. Its serious value lies in the unreserved picture which it gives of the life of a Virginian of the old school who took part in the Mexican, Indian, and Civil Wars, leaving the service of the United States and casting his fortunes with the Confederacy, and after many vicissitudes rounding out his public career by serving as United States Minister to Colombia.

New Popular Edition of Ik Marvell's Country Books.

My Farm of Edgewood.
A Country Book. Small 12mo, 75 cents.

Wet Days at Edgewood.
With Old Farmers, Old Gardeners, and Old Pastorals. Small 12mo, 75 cents.

Mr. Mitchell's two well-known books have a fresh odor of the fields and gardens which make their re-publication in a new and attractive dress peculiarly appropriate at this season of the year.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE RODGERS CO., Philadelphia, announce to the trade that they have obtained control of the plates for the 16mo series of books formerly published by The Woodward Co., of Baltimore, and propose to improve the line very much.

CHARLES H. SERGEL COMPANY, Chicago, will publish at once the authorized edition of George Moore's new novel, "Esther Waters," which so good an authority as Mr. Quiller-Couch has pronounced the most important novel published in England since Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

HENRY W. BRAGG, assignee, announces that on Wednesday, May 2, at 2 P.M., at the rooms of the Russell Publishing Co., Boston, will be sold at public auction the original wooden blocks and illustrations and electrotypes of illustrations and electrotype plates of Our Little Ones and the Nursery and of The Whole Family, and other personal property heretofore used by the Russell Publishing Co. Terms cash.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have among their latest importations a beautifully printed little volume by Mr. Herbert Horne, entitled "The Binding of Books." It belongs to the dainty series of Books about Books. The introduction treats on the craft of binding, and is followed by three chapters devoted respectively to English, French, and Italian binding. The book is dedicated to D. M. T. J. Cobden Sanderson, and is a useful and artistic contribution to bibliographical literature.

THE Receiver's sale of the Worthington plates, books, and stock will cause many perennially popular books to find themselves in the lists of new publishers. In next week's issue we shall give a full statement of where the bookseller shall now direct his orders for books formerly published by Worthington Co. As there are upwards of 400 books in the Worthington sale catalogue, it has been impossible to get them properly listed and their various buyers verified for this number. We intend to make an alphabetical list of the books sold, which the bookseller may keep on hand for ready reference.

CASSELL & CO. have just ready "The Man in Black," a story of love and politics, written with all the fire and life of the author of "A Gentleman of France" and "Under the Red Robe." It is another story of the olden times which Stanley J. Weyman makes so fascinating. The Unknown Library will receive an entertaining addition, entitled "My Two Wives." It is in two parts: part 1, My first wife, by her second husband; part 2, My second wife, by her first husband; a catchy way of putting a mystery that solves itself satisfactorily. Mrs. Alexander has also prepared another of her always popular novels under the name of "Broken Links" — a love-story. A new edition of Baronne Staffe's "My Lady's Dressing-Room" is also ready at reduced price.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready "In Varying Woods," Beatrice Harraden's new novel; "A Modern Wizard," by that clever writer of "detective" stories, R. Ottolengui; "Red Cap and Blue Jacket," a tale of the French Revolution, by George Dunn; and a new Popular edition of W. K. Post's capital "Harvard Stories." The Autonym Library, a new series, somewhat similar in style to the successful Pseudonym Library, has for its first issue "The Upper Berth," by F. Marion Crawford, to be followed by a story of adventure by Louis Becke, entitled "By Reef and Palm;" this series will comprise short representative works by established writers. The first volume in the new Incognito Library is "The Shen's Pigtail," by "Mr. M——," to be followed by "Young Sam and Sabina," by the author of "Gentleman Upcott's Daughter." The volumes in this series will form the later issues in the Pseudonym Library, published by Unwin of London.

Afterwards she makes no opposition to a scheme to murder him, and is forced to fly from England, being made to believe the deed is accomplished. This treatise on whist is based upon the system of leads known as "American leads." The principle underlying these leads is the invention of N B. Trist, of New Orleans; and as now extended and simplified the whist world is indebted to Mr. Henry Jones ("Cavendish") of London. The purpose of this volume is to present to the student of the game the rules and maxims of play as laid down by the authorities and practised by the strongest players; and an effort has been made to simplify and render clear the applications of the many rules and maxims by copious analyses and numerous illustrations. Much space is devoted to the play of second hand, the intricacies of end-play, the department of inference, and to the management of trumps.

The nun was a novice in a Dominican convent. She fled, dressed in man's clothes, travelled, robbed, gambled, fought battles and duels, and led the wildest life, remaining a wholly chaste woman. When she returned to Spain she was famous and revered, and was the only woman privileged to wear men's clothes. The original editions of this story are very scarce and others are not accurate.

Mr. Jesse ably and critically discusses Richard's personal appearance, his acts and the motives that prompted them, and with the biographies of his chief contemporaries has produced a work that gives an accurate picture of those stirring times.

He endeavors to force her to become a member of his harem, but is brought to justice by the Kirghiz at last. Military life as seen in the Russian army is well described.

A trial for murder follows; the evidence, which is sensational and dramatic being given at length. Medjora is the "modern wizard," and though not proven guilty of the crime at the time, is soon implicated in others. His powers come from his knowledge of hypnotism and science; he inoculates his victims with the germs of disease, or forces them to obey his will, even to their own destruction. The scene is laid in New York City.

When Gaston Belward is twenty-seven years old he travels from Canada to England to claim his heritage. His father, the younger son of a noble house, had fled from home before Gaston's birth, on account of trouble with his father, and had spent the remainder of his days in the wilds of North America, leading a half-savage life with his wife, a half-breed of mixed Indian and French blood. Gaston, the issue of this marriage, is wholly unconventional, but dashing and attractive. He creates a sensation at Ridley Court after his identity is made clear to his grandfather. His career is full of striking contrasts illustrating his mixed inheritance.

The Biltmore estate is in North Carolina. The attempt to treat Biltmore Forest systematically derives a certain interest from the fact that it is the first practical application of forest management in the United States. This little book, by the consulting forester, contains a description of the forest, when work upon it was begun, and of the operations carried out during the first year of management. The result of this first year's work is stated, both as regards the forest itself and the returns and expenses in money. The outline of the working plan is added, and a word is said as to the experiments in forest-planting and arbor-culture which have been begun. Finally, the possible value of the work is briefly noted. Furnished gratis on application to Mr. Pinchot.

The body of a young waiter, the well-known attendant of the card-room at the Patrician Club, is found early in the morning, evidently murdered in the streets of London. Who murdered him, and why, are the questions the story solves. There seems to be no reason for connecting his death with the members of the club, all men of high rank and character; but suspicion finally attaches to one of them. He is hunted down through many exciting scenes by a man whose good name he had ruthlessly destroyed, who successfully plays the detective. The story has many complications. The author wrote "The Englishman in Paris," so much talked about.

An audacious arraignment of the prejudice, cant, snobbishness, and lack of poise of the English society of to-day. Mr. Bailey-Martin is the son of a tradesman, who at school meets Lord Righton, a specimen of all that is worst and most vulgar in inherited rank of the present day. By persistent effort the hero wins as his wife the daughter of an earl, who has cut loose from her family, and is conducting an unconventional paper devoted to all the undigested religious and political theories of the hour. The book is full of keenest satire, and although a novel, is probably written with an artistically hidden purpose.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

SUMMER READING.

AFTER sixteen years of existence it can hardly be necessary to enlarge upon the value of the Summer Number of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY to publishers, booksellers, and the reading public. Its steady growth in quality and quantity is its own endorsement of recognized usefulness.

All booksellers know that as the summer approaches, and their customers begin making plans and laying aside the belongings they intend taking with them to mountains, lakes, and seashores, books are thought of as one of the most important additions to the yearly provisions for relaxation, recreation, and entertainment. It is one of the great opportunities of the year for the wide-awake bookseller. Many prepare lists themselves to tempt their customers, and throughout the summer send them from time to time to the spots in which their buyers are resting and reading. But the preparation of a tempting catalogue takes time, inclination, and experience, and year by year the booksellers tell us that they prefer we should undertake the task for them. Our "Summer Reading" is specially prepared to place in the booksellers' hands exactly what he needs to call his customers' attention throughout the summer to the classes of books specially suited to the hot season. Booksellers in summer resorts who have no regular customers also find this catalogue a great help in letting summer visitors know that there is a store at hand where they may find everything new in the market.

This year we are making a special effort to make our catalogue so attractive that booksellers will see at once how important it would be to place such a number with their own imprints in the hands of every customer. We shall again put a new cover on the number, which will speak of freedom, rest, and travel, and the contents will be made up of extracts from the publishers' newest preparations for summer trade, supplemented with book-lists of literature of travel, sport, out-door pleasures, and a specially full list of fiction. To derive the full benefit of the trade that may be drummed up through "Summer Reading," publishers and booksellers should help us to issue the number strictly on time, which they may do by letting us know at once how far we may look to them for advertising patronage and orders for imprint editions.

"Summer Reading" should be as good an investment to publishers and booksellers as the "Christmas Bookshelf," and might be made so if they would carefully turn their attention to its great possibilities as a trade canvasser. And not only publishers of novels and light literature should feel called upon to make this a representative book-list for booksellers to push actively throughout the summer. Summer travellers are "many men of many minds," and these minds crave for many different kinds of mental food. All books should be advertised in summer that can be packed in small compass and that can tempt readers of every character, taste, and hobby. Publishers can encourage booksellers by offering them plentifully of their best in the advertising columns, and booksellers can convince publishers that such advertising pays by doing their share of it in circulating generous imprint editions with discrimination born of enterprise and experience.

AN AMERICAN ACADEMY OF "IMMORTALS."

ON April 21 Representative Black, of Illinois, introduced into the House a bill providing for the organization of a body analagous to the "Immortals" of the French Academy. It provides for a committee of six—three senators and three members of the House—who shall elect five members distinguished in literature, science, fine arts, and invention, who in turn shall elect twenty other persons equally distinguished, the twenty-five to constitute the American Academy. It is to be the duty of the Librarian of Congress to set apart a chamber in the new library building suitable for the occupancy of the twenty-five, and they are to be furnished with pages to answer their calls, while thus engaged. The twenty-five may be a continuous body. They may fill vacancies, however occasioned, and for their better government they are empowered to determine the name of the body, to define eligibility to its membership, and enact by-laws and change them, and if they prescribe lectures by any of their members, the librarian is to furnish them a convenient lecture-room in the library building for such purpose.

This plan is said to have been originally suggested by Librarian Spofford, who sees no reason why it should not become a reality when the completion of the Congressional Library will give a suitable habitat for this "American Academy."

POSTAL MATTERS.

POSTAL UNION CARDS AND STAMPS.

H. T. FRUEAUFF, of Easton, Pa., has written a letter to The Nation, pointing out the great advantage it would be to travellers if the Postal Union at the next convention would take up the subject of Postal Union stamps and Postal Union cards. There should be International Postal Union five-cent stamps and two-cent postal-cards which could be mailed to and from any country where travellers happen to be, thus avoiding the necessity of seeking the post-offices, changing money, and having unused stamps and cards left upon one's hands. "Another feature of importance," says Mr. Frueauff, "would be that it often happens that persons see books or little things advertised in foreign periodicals that cost perhaps a shilling, a mark, or even a franc. Now it does not pay to go and buy an international postal order for so small an amount, and it would be useless to send stamps to that amount of the country in which you live, because the party receiving them cannot use them or dispose of them. But had we the Postal Union stamps, the recipient could use them in his foreign correspondence, or sell them to some one else who had such correspondence. Altogether the governments connected with the Postal Union will see of how much benefit to the public the proposed issue of stamps would be."

A NEW SCHEME IN POSTAL DELIVERY.

EX-REPRESENTATIVE HEMPHILL, of South Carolina, appeared before the House Committee on Post-Offices, April 19, in support of the bill to further extend the use of the mail service. The bill makes it lawful for postal-cards and envelopes with coupon attached to be carried in the mails, and the postage thereon, at the regular rates, to be paid on presentation of the coupons from them when detached at the office of delivery.

NEW FRENCH POSTAGE-STAMP.

STAMP collectors or "philatelists" as they call themselves, are much interested in the new series of postage-stamps about to be issued in France. The four post-office experts of the French Government were assisted in their preparation by the presidents of two societies of exhibiting artists, two distinguished sculptors, a medallist, an art critic, and the editor of a magazine devoted to the interest of stamp collectors. The result ought to be very elegant and artistic.

A HOME FOR NEEDY LITERARY WORKERS.

The Home Hotel Association of New York held its sixth annual meeting on the 24th inst. at the house of Mrs. A. I. Ludlow, 118 E. 54th St. The object of the association is to establish a free home for needy workers in literature, art, or any of the professions. The meeting was fully attended, and officers for the present year were elected. The home now occupies three four-story dwelling-houses at 146–150 St. Ann's Ave., and larger quarters are needed to accommodate the growth of the association. Last year over sixty guests were received, the majority of whom paid nothing, and this year a much greater number is expected. It is hoped the trade may be interested in this very important undertaking, and give some practical sign that it recognizes the importance of this plan for helping sick and needy literary workers in their hour of distress. Mrs. Mary A. Fisher is president of the association, and among its patrons are the Rev. Arthur Brooks, the Rev. D. Parker Morgan, David A. Boody, Archdeacon Stevens, Abram S. Hewitt, the Rev. Arthur H. Flack, and many others.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A PROTEST.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

SIR: Apropos of the article "Capture of a Book-Thief" in last week's PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, we desire to make a statement. The article, while in the main, correct as to the facts, does us no credit, as we are named with other city dealers as purchasers of the thief's "plunder" (don't like that word). We had not "purchased many volumes for six months or more" from Dennett. All told, we purchased from him, perhaps two dozen volumes. When Dennett brought us a duplicate large-paper copy of Stanley's "Canterbury Memorials" (Randolph) and an odd volume of an extra-illustrated edition of Lamb's "Essays of Elia," having Dutton's binding-mark, instead of refusing to purchase (though satisfied in our own minds that they were crooked) and so scaring the thief off, we bought the books and at once notified both firms personally and gave a full description of the thief.

A copy of "Ben Hur" and Winter's "Life of Booth" with several other volumes, were "found" at our place—but only after our notification to the publishers to that effect. And those books remaining unclaimed, we were at pains to find owners for by taking them to different up-town dealers for inspection. We take emphatic exception, for ourselves and the other dealers named, to the statement that we were purchasers of "plunder." Said statement puts us in a very unsavory light—a light which, as we have become favorably known to many dealers throughout the country, makes us wince. Had we not been at the trouble of notifying the publishers that they were being robbed, and describing the thief minutely, the former would probably have been in ignorance of the fact today, and the latter still at his "profession." We do not ask for any credit in stopping the theft and apprehending the thief—though perhaps some credit is due us. We do emphatically demand that in no sense (however indirect) shall we be connected with his depredations.

Very truly, S. F. MCLEAN & Co.

THE TRADE MAGAZINE AN EDUCATOR.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: I believe many of your subscribers appreciated your instructive and practical articles on what a bookseller should know, and how to keep his magazine accounts, etc.

Reading the article headed "Half a Century of Bookselling," in yours of April 14, it is said of Mr. Bridgman that he had "also developed the mail order department of his business, supplying many Sunday-schools and public libraries," etc. I have no doubt Mr. Bridgman could give us younger struggling members of the fraternity many a pointer we could profit by. Do you think you could prevail upon some of those veterans to contribute some of their valuable secrets, which they have acquired by long experience, to the columns of your journal? I am sure the good would be one that many would appreciatively partake in.

I wish also to say that many a man is behind the bookseller's counter to day that would receive immense benefit to himself by a systematic course of reading in English and American literature.

Leaving out of view the antiquarian and the foreign bookseller (the latter dealing in French, German, etc., books), every bookseller ought to have a "bookseller's library." I do not mean the American lists, the trade annuals and such publications, but a selection of books on literature, covering the English literature of all times and both continents so entirely that he can at any time turn to them, provided he has not mastered their contents by heart, and satisfy his customer by supplying such information as will lead to business. The history of literature should be well in hand by the book-store man, and the trade price-lists should furnish the counterpart in the way of information as to prices and publishers.

Everything tells behind a book-store counter as well as in any other business or profession, and the best-posted man will get the best showing.

I am certain, Mr. Editor, that if you will take hold of this idea and help us to work it out by pointing out such a course of reading in English literature as will lead to the formation of ideal "Booksellers' Libraries" that many in the trade beside myself will greatly appreciate your kindness.

Yours truly,
D. W. MCGREGOR.

ATHENS, GA., April 19, 1894.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MR. KIPLING has come to high honor in that a London suburban street has been renamed after him, and a street, too, whose former name was that of the great Admiral Nelson!

MISS ALICE FRENCH, otherwise Octave Thanet, the Iowa writer, is emulating Mr. du Maurier in illustrating a story from her own pen. It is the camera, however, and not the pencil, that she employs. A story thus ornamented by her is to be printed in a coming number of the Midland Monthly, the new Iowa magazine.

AN English author, G. Robinson Lees, F.R.G.S., has just been banished from Jerusalem. Mr. Lees is well known in Palestine for his intimate acquaintance with the people and holy places of Jerusalem, and is the author of "Jerusalem Illustrated." The attention of the Turkish officials was directed to certain statements in the book, and all discoverable copies were seized and confiscated, and the author ordered to depart.

T. M. CLARK, a Fellow of the American Institute of Architects, and the author of the well-known work on "Building Superintendence," has in press "Architect, Owner, and Builder before the Law." It will be published by Macmillan & Co., who have purchased from Ticknor & Co. the right to it, as well as to "Modern Perspective," by William R. Ware, the professor of architecture in Columbia College, and to "Safe Building," by Louis De Coppet Berg.

JAMES W. SULLIVAN, New York, the author of "Direct Legislation through the Initiative and Referendum," was on the staff of the Standard on its establishment by Henry George in 1887. To the columns of that journal Mr. Sullivan, as "Hagan Dwen," contributed a series of short stories of metropolitan life which attracted wide attention. Selecting from these, and adding some new stories, Mr. Sullivan will publish in May a volume entitled "The World We Live In."

OBITUARY NOTES.

THOMAS W. LUDLOW died at his home at Ludlow-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., on Tuesday, April 17. Mr. Ludlow received his degree of Bachelor of Arts from Harvard in 1882, and the degree of Master of Arts from Columbia in 1893. He began his literary career on the Evening Telegram and the New York Herald. He spent the year 1879 in Greece, and since then he had written largely of architecture and archæology. He was a member of many literary and archæological societies. As a member of the editorial staff of the "Century Dictionary," from its inception to its completion, he had charge of the subject of archæology and art, and never spared any labor to make it a complete and accurate representative of the knowledge of to-day. The colleges of the United States have lost in him a sincere and enthusiastic worker, and the cause of classical learning a devoted friend.

WILLIAM V. KEATING, widely known throughout the United States and Great Britain by his skill as a physician and his various medical works, died in Philadelphia on Wednesday, April 18, of heart disease. He was born in 1823.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Germania, the monthly magazine for the study of German language and literature, has moved its office from Manchester to Boston.

The World's Columbian Exposition has now been removed by its Chicago publisher and has become Campbell's Illustrated Monthly.

The Magazine of New England History is now published in connection with Putnam's Monthly Historical Magazine, and all communications, subscriptions and exchanges should be sent to Eben Putnam, Box 301, Salem, Mass.

THE RAILWAY TIMES CO., New York City, have now ready the first number of The Railway Times A to Z Guide, a semi-monthly in which the information is arranged alphabetically by towns, a new feature in railway guides.

GEORGE W. SMALLEY has committed to paper his recollections of his friend Wendell Phillips, and his article will appear in the June Harper. In the same number will be published the last of Constance Fenimore Woolson's Italian tales.

WITH the end of the present academic year, President Eliot, of Harvard, will complete his twenty-fifth year of service, and President Charles F. Thwing, of the Western Reserve University, himself a Harvard man, has written for the May Forum an appreciative review of his long administration of Harvard.

LITTELL & CO., Boston, are sending out the bound volume of their Living Age for January-March, 1894, the 200th in the series which men in middle life can now look back upon as one which no gentleman's library should be without. It is worthy of remark that this veteran eclectic should have maintained itself for fifty years, in spite of direct competition, and through all the vicissitudes of ever-cheapening literature, piracy, and copyright.

The Critic of April 14 is an Educational Number, containing reviews of seventy text-books and other educational works, classified under half a dozen headings. In an extra edition, sent to thousands of educators throughout the country, the publishers make a special offer to educational workers. Prof. Corson, of Cornell, prints in this number of The Critic a hitherto unpublished letter of Edwin Booth's, in which the famous impersonator of Shakespearian characters makes his appearance in a new rôle—that of a Shakespearian commentator. Dr. Bartol, of Boston, sends an interesting note on "Emerson as a Poet."

THE May issue of Poet-Lore will be the Browning Anniversary Number, containing among other contributions, "Browning Rarities," by William G. Kingsland; a curious note, from Dr. Hiram Corson, of the Cornell University, which might be styled, "Light on a Browning Allusion, in 'The Ring and the Book,' Hitherto Obscured by Dr. Berdoe;" "Sordello: a study of psychology in child-life," by A. Tolman Smith, of the Anthropologica Society; "Browning's Interpretation of Romantic Love," by George W. Cooke, author of the "Browning Guide-Book;" "Browning's 'Luria,'" by the Rev. John W. Chadwick, and "Browning as Poet of the People."

NIKOLA TESLA pauses long enough in his investigations of electric currents of high potentiality to introduce to the English-speaking world the chief Servian poet, Zmai Iovan Iovanovich. He has written a brief sketch of Zmai for the May number of The Century. Zmai, who was born on the southern border of Hungary in 1833, is now a practising physician at Belgrade, beloved by all his compatriots. Besides his poetry, Zmai has written a play, a number of novels, and has founded and conducted with great success several humorous and satirical journals. Indeed, from one of them, Zmai ("the dragon"), he has taken his name. Tesla has given a literal translation of a few of Zmai's shorter poems, and Mr. Robert Underwood Johnson has put them into metrical form.

PERSONAL NOTES.

F. E. GRANT has entirely recovered from the effects of the operation for appendicitis, and may again be found in his familiar haunts.

BIRDSEYE BLAKEMAN, of the publishing house of Ivison, Blakeman & Co., of New York, is to expend $30,000 in the construction of a library in Stratford, Conn. Mr. Blakeman was born there, and the suggestion of the association to call it the Birdseye Blakeman Library has been rejected by Mr. Blakeman, and the name "The Stratford Library" substituted.

MR. H. G. PAINE, who has charge of Harper's Weekly during the illness of the editor, is a handsome young man, not over thirty years of age. He has been on the staff of the Harper's for some time, and has proved himself capable of filling the position. He is a graduate of Yale, and has written a great many short stories, which have won him considerable fame. He was formerly assistant editor of Puck for a number of years, and left there for Harpers.

BUSINESS NOTES.

NEW YORK CITY.—Town Topics has moved from 21 West 23d Street to 208 Fifth Avenue.

SELMA, ALA.—Walter S. Butler, who as a wee, fatherless tot entered the ranks of the book trade as a carrier on an afternoon paper in Selma, has just purchased the interest of his partner, E. S. Gatchell, in the book business. Mr. Butler has for many years been prominently connected with the book trade of central Alabama, and richly deserves the success he now enjoys.

TRAVERSE CITY, MICH.—C. W. De Zoete is to open a book-store here.

TROY, N. Y.—Shivler & Frothingham, booksellers, have compromised at 25 cents on the dollar, cash.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

HARRISON S. MORRIS is preparing his first volume of verse, "Madonna, and other poems," for publication by the Lippincotts early in the fall.

PAUL LEICESTER FORD has edited a new and, as far as possible, complete edition of the writings of John Dickinson, the "Penman of the Revolution."

A. J. BUTLER, the Dante scholar, has made a translation of the correspondence of Cavour, just issued in Italy. It will be published by the Cassell Publishing Co., New York.

MACMILLAN & CO. have in press the following volume, completing the series of Rulers of India, "Earl Amherst," by T. W. Richmond Ritchie and Mrs. Richmond Ritchie (née Thackeray).

FREDERICK WARNE & CO. announce a new edition of Silas K. Hocking's latest work, "One in Charity." This successful book has reached in England a sale of 20,000 copies in six months.

GINN & CO. will have ready next month "First Steps in Algebra," by G. A. Wentworth, written for pupils in the upper grades of grammar schools. Nearly all the problems will be original.

THOMAS WHITTAKER announces "Fra Paolo Sarpi," the greatest of the Venetians, by Alexander Roberts. The author has been a resident of Venice for many years, and has studied closely the subject of his monograph.

THE Department of Library Economy of the Amherst Summer School is to open on July 2 and close on August 4, under the direction of Mr. William I. Fletcher, who will lecture daily as if to beginners. He should be addressed at Amherst for particulars.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., who contributed a full tenth of the model library of 5000 volumes exhibited by the American Library Association at the World's Fair, have now made a "Descriptive List" of this part of the publications of their firm in a neatly printed pamphlet of 78 pages. It includes 548 titles.

THE estate of George Gebbie, the subscription-book publisher of Philadelphia, who died in August, 1892, has now been settled up by Judge Hanna in the Orphans' Court. The business is to be turned into a stock company named "The Gebbie Publishing Company," and to be carried on for his widow and children.

D. APPLETON & CO. state that all the illustrations as well as other contents of Mr. John Jacob Astor's new book, "A Journey in Other Worlds," are copyrighted. There has already been, according to the publishers, an unauthorized reproduction of four pictures, ascribed to the book, two of which do not appear in the work at all.

CHARLES H. SERGEL COMPANY will soon publish a new novel by Marian Crawford, author of "Mam'zelle Beauty." Since the publication of this latter story, now in its fourth edition, Miss Crawford has become Mrs. John Bevington, having been married to the well-known attorney, and all of her works will hereafter bear on the title-page the name of Marian Bevington.

D. VAN NOSTRAND COMPANY will have ready shortly "New Roads and Road Laws in the United States," by Gen. Roy Stone, who has enjoyed unequalled opportunities for obtaining information on this subject; and "The Electrical Transmission of Energy," a manual for the design of electrical circuits, by Arthur Vaughan Abbott, chief engineer of the Chicago Telephone Co.

"JOE JEFFERSON" is hard at work on the illustration of a new volume of "Rip Van Winkle," made up of his text, which will be brought out in the fall by Dodd, Mead & Co. Jefferson will do all the illustrating, and will also furnish the text, which he has been heard to declaim so many years. He will do most of this work while at Buzzard's Bay this summer, during the time which he can spare from fishing.

SIDNEY S. RIDER, Providence, R. I., proposes to reproduce the Digest of Rhode Island of 1719, which bears the title, "Acts and Resolves of His Majesty's Colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations in America, Boston in New England, 1719." A fac-simile reprint of this very rare digest will be prepared, to which Mr. Rider will prefix a historical introduction. The edition will be strictly limited to fifty copies.

IT is probable that a plan will soon be submitted to the creditors of the firm of Charles L. Webster & Co., with a view to the resumption of business by the firm. The assets are said to fully cover liabilities. It is also stated that Mr. Samuel L. Clemens, although liable for the copartnership debts, will not be obliged to surrender much of his personal property. This will be pleasant news to the trade, which has always had a most kindly feeling towards "Mark Twain."

THE C. A. NICHOLS COMPANY, Springfield, Mass., have just issued the first volume of J. N. Larned's important reference work, "History for Ready Reference and Topical Reading." The second volume will be brought out in May, and it is expected that the five volumes, completing the work, will be issued before the close of the year. This noteworthy work of reference was fully described in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of December 2, 1893; it is sold by subscription only.

D. C. HEATH & CO. have just issued a "Laboratory Manual in Elementary Biology," being an inductive study in animal and plant morphology, designed for preparatory and high schools, by Emanuel R. Boyer, instructor in biology, Englewood High School, Chicago, and lecturer in biology at the University of Chicago. A synopsis of the classification of animals and plants is appended to the book, thus furnishing full apparatus for the elementary study of biological science.

ARTHUR HINDS & CO. have just published a new interlinear translation of "Horace," including the odes, epodes, satires, and epistles, and Ars Poetica. This makes the 11th volume in the series, of which the "Greek New Testament" is one. All the volumes of this Classic Interlinear Series are uniform in price, size, and style of binding. "Friendship and Old Age" and Xenophon's "Memorabilia," included in this series, have never before been published in the interlinear form.

THE MUNICIPAL LEAGUE, Philadelphia, has just issued the "Proceedings of the National Conference for Good City Government," which was held at Philadelphia in January last. The book deals separately with the municipal government of Boston, Brooklyn, Baltimore, Chicago, New York, and Philadelphia, and contains signed articles on various methods of reform. A valuable bibliography of municipal government and reform and a brief statement concerning the objects and methods of Municipal Reform Associations in the United States make the book of lasting importance.

GEORGE BARRIE, Philadelphia, sends us the first two parts of his great subscription publication, "Yankee Doodle at the Fair," the most captivating effort yet made to produce a parlor-table souvenir of the World's Fair. It preserves within limited compass and in superb style the description and accurate illustrations of the best portions of the fair and the exhibits. The opening numbers redeem all the publishers' promises. The text has been committed to many hands. The illustrations, largely in color, are at their best in some of the vignettes, initials, and head-pieces. There will be twelve numbers.

CONSIDERABLE interest is awakened by the deliverance of the Griswold-Moore-Poe Papers, owing to the death of Dr. Moore. The old Lenox librarian had jealously hoarded them for half a lifetime, refusing them to the inspection of Mr. Stedman, Mr. Woodberry, and all other critics and biographers, imagining that he would in time utilize them for some report of his own. As the executor of Dr. Griswold he was enabled to do this, and his course, in fact, was quite in keeping with his methods at the Lenox Library. At his death, however, it was decided that all the Griswold papers (Poe's included) legally passed to young Mr. Griswold, now resident at Cambridge, Mass. These relics have been submitted by him to the inspection of Professor Woodberry, who will prepare some articles based upon them for a leading magazine.

FOREIGN NOTES.

A SCHOOL for booksellers is to be opened in St. Petersburg by the Russian Society of Booksellers and Publishers.

J. M. DENT & CO. will shortly begin the publication of the complete works of Sterne. The edition will be similar to that of Miss Austen, previously issued.

THERE is a prospect that Macaulay's diary will be published this year. The extracts communicated to the world by Sir George Trevelyan show how full of vivid interest the whole journal must be.

LOPEZ DE VEGA, among his voluminous writings, has five novels. The first is without the letter a, the second without e, the third without i, the fourth and fifth purposely omitting o and u respectively.

IT has been decided that in 1896, 1898, and 1900 there shall be no Bampton Lectures. The reason is that the property which provides the endowment will in those years itself need the income for improvements.

A LONDON second-hand bookseller recently advertised a little book of religious consolation. It was published in 1630, and bears the consolatory title, "A Handkerchief for Parents' Wet Eyes Upon the Death of Children."

WILLIAM ARCHER is translating for Mr. Heinemann, Gerhart Hauptmann's "Hannele," which will first appear in the New Review, with illustrations, and then be published in book-form. Mr. Heinemann intends to try the taste of the British public with translations of other plays of Hauptmann's, such as "Die Weber."

THERE is announced in England a new novel called "The Green Bay Tree," by Herbert Vivian and H. Wilkins, in which all the good characters come to hopeless grief and all the wicked ones flourish like the green bay tree of Scripture. A new feature in collaboration is also seen, as the authors distinguish their portions of the work.

THE BRONTÊ SOCIETY AND MUSEUM at present has its headquarters at Idel, Bradford, where Mr. J. Horsfall Turner, the corresponding secretary, resides. Lord Houghton is president, and among the vice-presidents are the Duke of Devonshire, Sir Isaac Holden, M.P., Mr. Wemyss Reid, Mr. A. Birrell, M.P., Drs. William Wright and Peter Bayne, Mrs. Darmesteter, and Mr. George Smith.

THE official list of new publications in India is very significant of the great change in that country within the last half century. While, forty years ago, in Madras the publications of a year were but a handful, now they number a thousand in twenty different languages. The total for the whole of India, according to the last report, was 7045. Of these, 1580 were on religion, 989 on language, 928 on poetry, and 336 on science; fiction, medicine, law, and the drama each numbering between two and three hundred. The smallest numbers were travel 17, and politics 14. The native librarians, in their quarterly reports to the government, complain, however, that works of merit are very rare, although they do find evidences of improvement, both in the talent and the moral tone of the works submitted to them.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

INFORMATION is wanted about a book entitled "Proper Words in Proper Places," which thus far we are unable to trace to a publisher. The author's name is said to be Swift, but his initials are not known.

THE MAN IN BLACK.

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN, author of "The Story of Francis Cludde," "A Gentleman of France," etc. Illustrated by Wal. Paget and N. M. Paget. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Like the other works of this author, which have given him his reputation, this is "a story of the olden time." To the reader wearied with the milk-and-water stories of "society," or the "purpose" novel so often produced only to gratify the vanity of a crank, the publishers recommend this virile production as an antidote. It is full of fire and life, with not too much love and politics to spoil the effect.

My Two Wives.

By ONE OF THEIR HUSBANDS. In two parts. Part I—My First Wife, by her Second Husband; Part II—My Second Wife, by her First Husband. With an editorial preface by Eldon Phewfees, Esq., etc., etc., and an authorial introduction by Mr. Timothy Moleskin, husband of the two Mrs. Moleskins. In Cassell's "Unknown" Library. Cloth, 16mo, 50 cents.

This bright effort, it is hoped, will not be one of the least interesting of the popular "Unknown" Library, of which it is No. 30.

My Lady's Dressing Room.

A Manual of the Toilet, adapted from the French of the BARONNE STAFFE. With introduction and notes by Harriet Hubbard Ayer. 12mo, with portrait, dainty binding. New edition, price reduced to $1.00.

A manual of the toilet, especially adapted to the needs of American women. Instructions for the care of the wardrobe are given with unusual particularity, together with hints for fitting up "my lady's dressing room." The book contains a portrait of Mrs. Ayer as a frontispiece.

BROKEN LINKS: A LOVE STORY.

By Mrs. ALEXANDER, author of "The Snare of the Fowler," "The Wooing O't," "Her Dearest Foe," etc., etc. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Mrs. Alexander is a name to conjure with. The simple announcement of a novel from her pen is sufficient. Her books are always extremely well written, depicting to the life the men and women of the upper middle class in England. This latest work of her pen shows no falling off in her powers, and will please every one who appreciates a clean, cleverly worked-out, old-fashioned love story.

The Story of Our Planet.

By T. J. BONNEY, D.Sc., LL.D., F.R.S., F.S.A., F.G.S., Professor of Geology in University College, London; Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge; and Honorary Canon of Manchester. With six colored plates and maps and about 100 illustrations. One vol., large 8vo, $5.00.

The author has aimed at rendering the main principles and results of geological reasoning intelligible to non-scientific readers of ordinary education, technical terms being, if possible, avoided, and, if not, explained. Some theoretical questions, such as the age and duration of the globe, the permanence of oceans and continents, the cause of the glacial epoch, etc., are briefly discussed.

"This volume is a most valuable addition to the none too many good popular works on geological science."—Boston Advertiser.

LIFE AND LATER SPEECHES OF CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

One vol., 8vo, extra cloth, gilt top, with new portrait by Sarony, $2.50. Edition de luxe, limited to 100 copies, half leather, $6.00.

"Foremost among our living American orators is Chauncey M. Depew, and in the volume of his speeches, just published, we have American oratory at its best. Mr. J. B. Gilder, in his introduction to this volume, gives a most appreciative biographical sketch of the orator, and the volume, as a whole, has a marked historical and biographical value as well as that which comes from its illustration of American oratory at the present day."—Boston Daily Advertiser.

PRINTERS OF

The Publishers' Weekly, Literary News,

"Summer Reading," 1894.

To RETAIL DEALERS:

The SUMMER CATALOGUE, issued for sixteen years, has been found so useful and profitable by enterprising dealers, that it has become a regular feature of the trade. The seventeenth issue, with an entirely new cover, in a special pamphlet adapted for imprint circulation all through the summer, will be published in connection with THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY about the first of June.

The imprint editions will contain, in addition to a catalogue of guide-books and light literature for summer reading, an entirely new selection of reading-matter both of a practical and entertaining character, chiefly intended for the use and amusement of tourists, pleasure-seekers, and visitors of summer resorts.

Booksellers should remember that, while summer is usually a dull time, the sales of light literature, etc., can be pushed to make a successful business even in this season. The classes who travel are of course those who have money to spend, even in dull times, and the summer is the time when very many bookbuyers do the greater part of their reading. Booksellers at or near summer resorts should especially avail themselves of this publication, while city dealers should remember that it will also be useful to tempt stay-at-homes to make investments, or to follow up customers otherwise out of reach.

A New Book by STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

UNDER THE RED ROBE.

A Romance. With 12 full-page illustrations by R. Caton Woodville. 12mo, linen cloth, ornamental, $1.25.

"Mr. Weyman is a brave writer, who imagines fine things and describes them splendidly. There is something to interest a healthy mind on every page of his new story. Its interest never flags, for his resource is rich, and it is, moreover, the kind of a story that one cannot plainly see the end of from Chapter I. . . . the story reveals a knowledge of French character and French landscape that was surely never acquired at second hand. The beginning is wonderfully interesting."—New York Times.

"As perfect a novel of the new school of fiction as 'Ivanhoe' or 'Henry Esmond' was of theirs. Each later story has shown a marked advance in strength and treatment, and in the last Mr. Weyman . . . demonstrates that he has no superior among living novelists. . . . There are but two characters in the story—his art makes all other but unnoticed shadows cast by them—and the attention is so keenly fixed upon one or both, from the first word to the last, that we live in their thoughts and see the drama unfolded through their eyes."—N. Y. World.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

A GENTLEMAN OF FRANCE:

Being the Memoirs of Gaston de Bonne, Sieur de Marsac. With frontispiece and vignette by H. J. Ford. 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.25.

"The story is full of quick movements and abounds in dramatic situations; as it proceeds the plot thickens, and one hairbreadth adventure succeeds another with almost bewildering rapidity. . . . In many respects this book is so noteworthy that it places Mr. Weyman at one stride in the front rank of living novelists. . . ."—London Spectator.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD, author of "She," "Allan Quatermain," "Nada the Lily," etc. With 24 full-page illustrations and vignette by Maurice Greiffenhagen. Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.00.

Nothing in all American history is more romantic or more picturesque than the tale of the Conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards, and it is into this that Mr. Haggard has woven the strange adventures and escapes of Thomas Wingfield, Englishman, married to the daughter of Montezuma. Mr. Greiffenhagen's original and striking illustrations have been drawn especially for this volume.

WHAT NECESSITY KNOWS.

A Novel. By Miss L. DOUGALL, author of "Beggars All." Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.00.

"Miss Dougall, in this, her latest production, shows a ripeness of thought, fertility of invention, and surety of method even superior to those qualities as they were exhibited in 'Beggars All.' . . . 'What Necessity Knows' is one of the novels that must be read. It is easy to predict for Miss Dougall a very distinct place among the writers of English fiction."—Boston Beacon.

Aerial Navigation.

By J. G. W. FIJNJE VAN SALVERDA, late Administrator of Public Works of the Netherlands. Translated from the Dutch, by GEORGE E. WARING, Jr. With Notes concerning some Recent Developments in the Art. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

The author states that the important question of aerial navigation has taken on a more and more scientific character, and has enlisted the increasing interest of serious minds; and that among competent experts the opinion is held that a brilliant future is before it. To recent meteorological observations, and numerous investigations as to the movements of birds, are mainly attributed the remarkable advances toward the solution of the problem, detailed accounts of which are comprised in this interesting volume.

A System of Lucid Shorthand.

Devised by WILLIAM GEORGE SPENCER. With a Prefatory Note by HERBERT SPENCER. 12mo, cloth, 50 cents.

This system, devised by Mr. Herbert Spencer's father, has been in manuscript since 1843. It is now published, as explained by the writer of the Prefatory Note, not because it possesses advantages over existing phonographies for reporting and kindred purposes, but "from the conviction, long since formed and still unshaken, that it ought to replace ordinary writing." It is claimed that, as it possesses the brevity of shorthands in general, and greater legibility, the use of it by men of business, journalists, authors, and people at large, would achieve a great economy of life.

Hume.

With Helps to the Study of Berkeley. By THOMAS H. HUXLEY. The sixth volume of the author's Collected Essays. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

CONTENTS.—Early Life of Hume: Literary and Political Writings. Later Years: The History of England. The Object and Scope of Philosophy. The Contents of the Mind. The Origin of the Impressions. The Classification and the Nomenclature of Mental Operations. The Mental Phenomena of Animals. Language—Propositions concerning Necessary Truths. The Order of Nature: Miracles. Theism: Evolution of Theology. The Soul: The Doctrine of Immortality. Volition: Liberty and Necessity. The Principles of Morals.

Bishop Berkeley on the Metaphysics of Sensation. On Sensation, and the Unity of Structure of Sensiferous Organs.

A Journey in Other Worlds.

A Romance of the Future. By JOHN JACOB ASTOR. With 9 full-page illustrations by Dan Beard. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"An interesting and cleverly devised book. . . . No lack of imagination. . . . Shows a skilful and wide acquaintance with scientific facts."—New York Herald.

"The author speculates cleverly and daringly on the scientific advance of the earth, and he revels in the physical luxuriance of Jupiter; but he also lets his imagination travel through spiritual realms, and evidently delights in mystic speculation quite as much as in scientific investigation. If he is a follower of Jules Verne, he has not forgotten also to study the philosophers."—New York Tribune.

NOTES IN SEASON.

LLOYD POCOCK & Co., Chicago, have just issued a new cheap edition, in paper covers, of Sarah Grand's "The Heavenly Twins."

GINN & Co. have just issued "The Technique of Sculpture," by William Ordway Partridge, instructing in the whole process, from the working of the clay to the final execution in bronze or marble, made clear by many illustrations. A brief history of sculpture from prehistoric times adds to the value of this useful book.

E. L. KELLOGG & Co. have issued "A Class in Geometry," by George Iles, which is full of hints for both teacher and pupil. It describes three boys who became interested in geometry by observing plants, insects, rocks and sand, and other common things, and were then led on to the laws of space and form binding all these together. Their invention and judgment were educated, and they were led to clearly think out the principles of astromony.

THE CENTURY COMPANY has ready the promised edition of the writings and addresses of Lincoln, as prepared by Lincoln's biographers, Messrs. Nicolay and Hay. They appear as two volumes, and are in binding uniform with the biography. As the matter is closely printed and there are nearly 1500 pages in all, the material is large in amount. It ranges from the year 1832, when Lincoln was twenty-three years old, down to the month in which he died. An exhaustive and careful index is given.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just ready "Aërial Navigation," a scientific investigation of recent developments in this interesting problem, by J. G. W. Fijnje Van Salverda, translated from the Dutch by George E. Waring, Jr.; "A System of Lucid Shorthand," devised by William George Spencer, father of the great scientist, Herbert Spencer, who furnishes a prefatory note; and the sixth volume of Prof. Huxley's "Collected Essays," comprising "Hume" and "Helps to the Study of Berkeley." The new issue in the Town and Country Library is "The Rich Miss Riddell," by Dorothea Gerard.

MACMILLAN & Co. have ready Mrs. John Richard Green's new work, "Town Life in the Fifteenth Century," in two volumes; "Santa Teresa," being some account of her life and times, together with some pages from the history of the last great reform in the religious orders, by Gabriela Cunninghame Graham, in two volumes, with two autogravure frontispieces; "Rectorial Addresses of the University of St. Andrews, 1863–1893, Sir William Stirling-Maxwell to the Marquess of Bute," edited with an introduction by Prof. William Knight, of the University of St. Andrews; "The Natural History of the Christian Religion," by William Mackintosh; and "The Readings on the Inferno of Dante," chiefly based on the "Commentary of Benvenuto da Imola," by Hon. William Warren Vernon, in two volumes. Among their most recent works they call attention to "Sources of the Constitution of the United States," by C. Ellis Stevens; Hegel's "Philosophy of Mind," translated by William Wallace, and a new edition of "The Logic of Hegel;" "The Diary of a Cavalry Officer," by the late Lieut.-Col. William Tomkinson, edited by his son, and a new volume in "The Periods of European History," "Period V., 1598–1715," by H. O. Wakeman. The May number of The Psychological Review is also ready.

POSTAL MATTERS.

THE House has defeated the ill-considered attempt to shut books out of the cheap postal rate by limiting the 2 cent a pound rate to what the Post-Office Department authorities considered a "periodical."

A., E. V. In maiden meditation. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1894. c. 8–217 p. S. cl., $1. [1375

A quotation on the title-page from Montaigne—"I have gathered a posie of other men's flowers, and nothing but the thread that binds them is mine own"—strikes the keynote of this volume. The writer, a woman seemingly, divides her thoughts and dreams on all sorts and kinds of themes into five parts, namely: After the ball, After dinner, After church, After a wedding, and After one summer. Love and marriage, dress and flirtation, youth and old age, literature and religion, all claim her attention.

The scene of the story is Andrew Carrick's house, built on the summit of a bluff overlooking the Irish Sea—the Mull of Galloway at the extreme end of the western coast of Scotland. Andrew Carrick is a shoemaker deeply interested in Dr. Chalmers and the Free Kirk movement. His daughter is the heroine of the story; her romance and her father's opposition to her suitor bring about the chief events.

The general introduction to this volume is from the editor, Henry Craik. It gives a brief account of the literature of the period and traces the sources which influenced it. The general introductions to authors are from the pens of such men as Henry Craik, William Minto, A. W. Ward, George Saintsbury, Alfred Ainger, E. K. Chambers, J. H. Overton, and others. The authors represented begin with men whose life belonged in part to the reign of Elizabeth; they end with those who had reached manhood before the close of the commonwealths. The names of Bacon, Hayward, Donne, Ben Jonson, Sir Thomas Overbury, William Drummond, George Herbert, Sir Thomas Browne, Izaak Walton, Milton, Jeremy Taylor, Richard Baxter, and others famous in the world's literature are included, being represented by six and often a dozen excellent excerpts from their writings.

Davis, R: Harding. The exiles, and other stories. N. Y., Harper, 1894. c. 3+221 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1385

"The exiles" tells of a New York district attorney, whose life had been devoted to "reform," who went to Tangier in search of health; here he met other "exiles," not like himself, but mostly in hiding for some unexpiated crime—two in particular being men he had helped to prosecute. The influence the lawless life has upon him and the influence he exerts upon others is most effectively related. That man may be excused for sometimes being a law unto himself seems to be the moral. The other stories are: "The writing on the wall," "The right of way," "His bad angel," "The boy orator of Zepath City," "The romance of the life of Hefty Burke," and "An anonymous letter."

Dickens, Mary Angela. A valiant ignorance: a novel. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1894. 3–383 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1. [1386

When Julian Romayne is about six years old his father commits suicide at the Hôtel Florian, Nice: a telegram had informed him that a long career of crime carefully hidden under a respectable outward life had been discovered, and he prefers death to arrest and punishment. His young wife and Julian are thrown penniless upon the world, but London relatives care for them, and after some years Mrs. Romayne is again a rich woman, through the unlooked-for inheritance of a large fortune. Hoping to preserve Julian from his father's fate, she keeps him in ignorance of his father's history, and indulges him in every way. His mistaken education and hereditary tendencies find a striking illustration in the sequel. There is a romance and several other well-defined characters besides Julian and his mother.

Dream City (The): a portfolio of photographic views of the World's Columbian Exposition; with an introd. by Halsey C. Ives. St. Louis, Mo., N. D. Thompson Pub. Co., [N. Y., Fleming H. Revell Co.,] 1893–94. 17 nos., obl. 8°, (Educational art ser.) pap., ea., 10 c. [1387

Fletcher, W: I: Library classification; reprinted with alterations, additions, and an index from his "Public libraries in America." Bost., Roberts Bros., 1894. 32 p. O. flex. cl., $1. [1391

"There are already in the field many rival schemes of classification for libraries. The present publication is not intended to add one to the number, but rather to offer a way of escape for those who shrink from the intricacies and difficulties of the elaborate systems, and to substitute for painstaking analytical classification a simple arrangement which it is believed is better adapted to be practically useful in a library, while doing away with most of the work involved in carrying out one of these schemes."—Introduction.

Francis, M. E. The story of Dan. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1894. c. 3+290 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1392

A pathetic story of Ireland. The characters belong to the peasant class. The ambition of a vain woman, who discards a faithful lover on account of the attentions of a richer man, hoping he will make her his wife, is the cause of a distressing tragedy.

Gardner, C: W. The doctor and the devil; a startling exposé of municipal corruption. N. Y., Warren Pub. Co., 67 Warren St., 1894. 80 p. il. 12°, pap., 25 c. [1393

Seven stories by the author of "Ships that pass in the night." They are all of a somewhat sombre tint and several are quite fantastic. The opening tale, "At the Green Dragon," gives a charming picture of domestic life in Shropshire; Hieronymus Howard, a literary man, is detained by an accident at the "Green Dragon"—a pleasant country inn—and a story grows up around him, which has an unconventional heroine and a sad ending; it is not, however, devoid of a certain grim humor. Besides this story are: "The painter and his picture," "The umbrella-mender," "A bird of passage," "The clockmaker and his wife," "Sorrow and joy," and "An idyl of London."

King, C: Cadet days: a story of West Point. N. Y., Harper, 1894. c. 4+293 p. il. D. cl., $1.25. [1403

Knauff, Theo. C. Athletics for physical culture. N. Y., J. Selwin Tait & Sons, [1894.] c. 7-422 p. il. D. cl., $2. [1404

These interesting and valuable volumes are indispensable supplements to Nicolay and Hay's biography of Lincoln. They are in size and binding uniform with the biography, but the page is in a smaller type. The editors have added neither notes nor an introduction nor a table of contents. There is, however, an exhaustive index covering ninety pages, and the headlines to each page epitomize its material. Everything almost that Lincoln has written may be found here—the Gettysburg address, the Emancipation Proclamation, his debate with Douglas, his early love-letters, with all the many and wonderful speeches and state papers called forth by the exceptional conditions through which he lived.

A story of English home-life in a large family. The "devoted couple" are the parents of six sons. The story opens with Mr. and Mrs. Vernon's return, with their two youngest children, from long residence in India, to settle in England and renew home-life with the four boys whom they had left in the mother country twelve years before. The quiet fortunes of the Vernons are followed through successive years of happiness, separation, and reunion. Of course most of the young people have their little romance, and several daughters-in-law are inducted into the home. The mutual devotion of husband and wife, and the affection and confidence between parents and children are pleasantly pictured.

Matthews, Ja. Brander. This picture and that: a comedy. N. Y., Harper, 1894. c. 5-76 p. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c. [1414

The time is an evening in the spring of 1864; the heroine is a handsome young widow, who says she will "never marry again." A doctor and a soldier are her suitors, and a pretty comedy is evolved. Was acted at the Lyceum Theatre in New York in 1887.

Merriman, H: Seton. With edged tools: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1894. c. 4+340 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1416

The scene changes back and forth, from London to the heart of Africa. Two young men of good families, both impelled by love for the same woman, who is flirting with one, though engaged to the other, and who has deceived both, engages in a scheme with a third man, expecting to make great fortunes that will enable them to marry. The scheme is to take an expedition to the heart of Africa and secure a quantity of a valuable plant called "simiacine," which has rare medicinal properties. Opportunity is thus given for many fresh scenes from African life in the jungle, with its dark side of vice and misery, and its risks and adventures. Two elderly titled friends in the London "swim" are sketched with a Thackeray-like cynicism.

Part 2, My second wife, by her first husband; with an editorial preface by Eldon Phewfees, esq., etc., etc., and an authorial introduction by Mr. Timothy Moleskin. N. Y., The Cassell Pub. Co., [1894.] c. 26+170 p. nar. D. (The unknown lib., no. 30.) cl., 50 c. [1419

The husband who tells the humorous and often pathetic story of his matrimonial ventures is a retired grocer who confesses to "a grocer's heart and mind." The first Mrs. Moleskin was a widow of great self-esteem, energy, and strong evangelical tendencies; the second is a gentle, loving woman, in whom her much-married husband finds all he had dreamed of home love and happiness. The grocer's comments on the habits and religion of his neighbors are full of worldly wisdom and common sense.

Robertson, Rev. Alex. Fra Paolo Sarpi, the greatest of the Venetians. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1894. 22+196 p. por. D. cl., $1.50. [1423

The distinguishing characteristics of Fra Paolo Sarpi were freedom of thought and love of country; he was one of the great patriots and religious reformers of his time, and earned the enmity of Pope Paul v. through his writings and his spoken criticisms directed against his acts and policy. He was born at Venice in 1552, and died in 1623; he entered the monastic life when about thirteen, in which he remained until his death, in spite of his efforts to have the Protestant religion openly tolerated in Venice. He wrote on many subjects—history, religion, and science—and made many discoveries in astronomy and anatomy. He was a statesman and a student of constitutional government. His chief published works are: "History of the Venetian Inquisition," "History of the Council of Trent," and "History of the interdict." This biography, a labor of love with the writer, gives all these facts and others.

Weyman, Stanley J. The man in black; il. by Wal Paget and H. M. Paget. N. Y., The Cassell Pub. Co., 1894. 3+212 p. D. cl., $1. [1440

Mr. Weyman has again chosen seventeenth century France as the setting for a story. "The man in black" is Solomon Nostradamus, of Paris, astrologer and dealer in philters, potions, and poisons. Into his clutches falls little Jehan de Bault, a lost child of good family. A poison given by Nostradamus to one of the ladies of the court, at her husband's instance, is, through the lad's interference, administered to the husband instead. His death, and his wife's arrest follow. There is a graphic description of the trial for murder, and in the dramatic climax little Jehan is restored to his estates and home.

Wilbur, Mrs. R. M. Lassie of Glengarry. Phil., American Baptist Pub. Soc., 1894. 192 p. 12°, cl., 90 c. [1441

Wilkins, Miss Mary E. Pembroke: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1894. c. 3-330 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1442

Pembroke is the name of the New England village in which the events of the story take place. The characters are nearly related, and have strongly-marked peculiarities. The slight plot turns upon an opening scene. Cephas Barnard, a self-willed old man, quarrels about politics with Barnabas Thayer, an obstinate young man, and his daughter's intended husband, and orders him out of his house. Although Charlotte Barnard and Barnabas are to be married in a month's time, the efforts of the united families fail to bring peace. The conflict of the two strong wills, and a secondary story of the prolonged courtship of Charlotte's Aunt Sylvia constitute the story. The exceptionally good pictures of New England of fifty years ago are by Clifford Carleton.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 5, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

THE ABUSE OF RECEIVERSHIPS.

THERE is an old proverb that the receiver is worse than the thief. This was not intended to apply to receivers in the modern sense, that is to say, the worthy gentlemen who, as officers of the court, are put in charge and in absolute control of bankrupt estates, pending the settlement of accounts. But it is true that creditors are beginning to feel that the losses which are the direct result of bankruptcies are sometimes less than the losses which accrue under receivers' control of the estate of the bankrupt.

The case of the United States Book Company is fairly in point. When this company and the satellite concerns in its orbit were forced to confess bankruptcy, the court appointed as receiver one of the most esteemed business lawyers in New York, who had had large experience in the handling of bankrupt estates. A clear-headed business man of this sort was needed to unravel the tangle and hold the property under protection of the court until such time as the assets could be figured and some arrangement made for a division among the creditors of what was left. This has proved to involve the practical continuation of the business at the expense of the creditors. The receiver was not a man acquainted with the book trade, and he could only rely upon such agents as he found to carry on the business. A large and complicated business is not likely to be continued in this way without continuing losses, notwithstanding the honest and accurate handling of accounts which may be expected from a receiver like Mr. Gould. As a result, the assets of a concern are likely to diminish steadily until, in despair, the creditors who have real interests at stake are only too willing to let what remains of the good-will, or the ill-will, go back into the hands of those who were originally responsible for the wrecking of the business. In the present case, we cannot learn that the creditors' committee of five, Messrs. John I. Waterbury, Manhattan Trust Co., chairman; Schuyler Quackenbush, banker, 38 Broad Street; F. W. Hopkins, broker, 72 Broadway; Austin W. Fletcher, lawyer, 29 Broadway, and D. G. Garabrant, of Buckley, Dunton & Co., 75 Duane Street, none of whom are practical publishers or booksellers, have done anything effective, and the results of drift, in the publishing business, in hard times, are not likely to be altogether satisfactory to creditors.

We take this as an example of what is a present and pressing evil in the business world. A receiver, as an officer of the court, cannot settle previous debts, and in one sense stands in the way of an early settlement. He is there to see that no more losses occur, but, nevertheless, this very process sometimes invites new losses. It is difficult to see quite the best way out in such cases, and we have done our present duty in calling this matter to the attention of those concerned. One useful reform might be a quarterly report of a receiver to the court, which the receiver would also send to the creditors.

THE receiver of the Worthington Co., Hon. J. J. Little, has taken some such course—and it is "greatly to his credit" to have done it so boldly. It is evident that the path of the receiver who undertakes to do positive instead of negative work is not always a happy one. We print elsewhere the letter addressed by him to the creditors of the Worthington concern, the most trenchant contribution yet made to the literature of trade bankruptcy. Mr. Little is certainly entitled to hearty thanks for hard work and fearless rigor, whether his charges are right or wrong, and his endeavors to clear the air of the book trade should be appreciated.

THE failure of the "Elzevir Co.," of which Mr. John B. Alden is a leading spirit, is recorded this week. A valuable chapter of trade history could be written of the bankruptcies of the successive and protean enterprises with which Mr. Worthington, Mr. Alden, and Mr. Lovell have been associated.

THE WORTHINGTON FAILURE.

RECEIVER LITTLE has issued the following statement to creditors of the Worthington Company:

OFFICE OF THE RECEIVER,
747 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, May 1, 1894.

To the Creditors of Worthington Company.

GENTLEMEN: Although there is no law directing the receiver of a corporation to make a report to its creditors, yet, there being no law, so far as I know, against such action, and so long a time having elapsed since my appointment, it appears to me that a statement explaining why it has not been possible to pay a dividend sooner would be acceptable, I therefore address you.

Had I known at the beginning what days and nights of labor were in store and what unpleasant duties were to be forced upon me, I could not have been induced to accept the position. Having accepted it, however, and realizing that I was the personal representative, not only of every creditor of the corporation, but of the Supreme Court itself, I have not failed to do my full duty as it has appeared to me, in spite of threats or of pleadings.

I was appointed temporary receiver on January 26, 1893. Mr. Richard Worthington, who, from the organization of the company, had been its business manager, and was its secretary and treasurer, and in whose integrity I had confidence, even if I may have questioned his business judgment, was of course and almost of necessity kept as one of the chief advisers.

The schedules of assets and liabilities filed with the court at the time of asking for a receiver had been made up under his personal direction and supervision, and was sworn to by each of the trustees (himself, Mr. Doman, who was a nephew of his wife, and a Miss Sproule, of whom you will hear again). No member of his household was included in these sworn lists as a creditor.

After awhile rumors reached me to the effect that property of the company had been taken to a distant State, shortly before the appointment of the receiver, and not properly accounted for. I demanded of Mr. Worthington a full explanation, if any such thing had been done. His answer was a most positive denial. Perhaps no better explanation can be made of what was said regarding these shipments of books out of the State than by inserting here a letter, written at the time, concerning his statement.

"NEW YORK, April 27th, 1893.

"MR. R. WORTHINGTON, New York.

"DEAR SIR: After our conversation of yesterday afternoon, during which you stated that certain books had been sold to R. Worthington & Co. and shipped to Chicago, months before my appointment as receiver; that the transaction appeared regularly upon the books of the company; that the goods had been paid for by notes; that the East River Bank had discounted these notes; that the Worthington Company had received the proceeds of said discounted notes; that these notes had subsequently been paid by Mrs. Worthington; and that everything regarding the transaction was perfectly regular and in order; I looked over the books to verify these statements, that I might be prepared to answer inquiries at the court proceedings on Monday next, and was greatly shocked to find that apparently the statement made by you was not correct, but rather that within a few days past you have had numerous entries made in the books, which entries are fictitious, the purpose of them being to bear out as correct the statements above narrated.

"If this apparent mutilation of the books be verified, it is a very important matter. Not only is it a gross abuse of my confidence and an unpardonable discourtesy, but is no doubt a very serious contempt of court. Moreover, it would appear to be a concealment of the assets of the Worthington Company.

"I hope you may be able to satisfactorily explain the apparent contradiction of the books to your statement, as otherwise you and I cannot longer continue our present relations, and it will be for the court and the creditors to say which shall retire.

"I shall be very glad to receive, at the earliest moment possible, any statement you desire to make regarding this matter, and request that it be in writing, that no misapprehension may hereafter arise as to what is said.

"Do not send by mail, but hand your communication, sealed, to Mr. Metcalf, who will at once forward to me, should I be away from the store.

"Very truly yours,
"JOSEPH J. LITTLE, Receiver."

A long letter was received in reply, denying that he had made or authorized the false entries in the books. Personal interviews, in which it was stated that there had simply been careless book-keeping, and that the entries referred to had been made by book-keepers to correct their own faults, led to no satisfactory conclusions. The statement of the book-keeper, together with the report of an expert accountant regarding those particular entries, convinced me that they had been wilfully made, by direction of Mr. Worthington. In the meantime, however, the creditors held a meeting, and efforts were being made by Mr. Worthington looking to a settlement with them. In view of the deplorable business situation then existing throughout the country, and the fact that complicated litigations would need to be carried on—for Mr. Worthington still maintained the integrity of the entries above referred to, and claimed, by the showing of these entries, to be a creditor of the company for $2555.62, his wife for $7336.00, and Miss E. Sproule for $1870.00, although, as before stated, none of them appear as creditors in the sworn list presented to the court. I looked with favor upon his efforts, believing that it would be to the advantage of the creditors to accept the cash offer he made.

Miss Sproule has lived in Mr. Worthington's family ever since she came to the United States. Testimony was given before Referee Willis in the case of Mrs. Worthington's claim, just finished, that she was the housekeeper; also that for about one year she had served in the store in a minor position, for which she was paid eight dollars per week. Mr. Worthington himself swore that she was not related to himself or his wife, although in the proceedings before Referee Odell, in the spring of 1893, he swore she was his sister-in-law; and several years ago, while under examination in supplementary proceedings, he swore that she was a cousin either of himself or his wife. In the present proceeding she was made to appear by the minutes of the secretary (Mr. Worthington) as the president of the Worthington Company, although it could not be shown that she had ever performed any official act as president, while we did show that Mrs. Worthington had signed hundreds of check as president during the particular time that Miss Sproule claimed to hold that office. She also appeared as a capitalist, it being asserted that she loaned tens of thousands of dollars in a single transaction.

You will readily understand that if I undertake to inform you in detail why all those things were attempted to be shown, a large book would be necessary, as there were several volumes of testimony taken regarding those monstrous claims of the Worthington household; you will be content for me simply to say it was deemed necessary, if they were to substantiate the claims they had presented.

To increase the perplexity and difficulty surrounding the investigation, Mr. Worthington claimed the right to act in several capacities at the same time. As the business manager of the Worthington Company, he would assume to sell property to himself as the agent of his wife and Miss Sproule, whether with or without their personal knowledge or presence.

The efforts of Mr. Worthington to compromise with the creditors were not successful, and on the 13th of October the court appointed me as the permanent receiver of the company, ordering the dissolution of the corporation, the assets to be disposed of and the proceeds distributed among the creditors.

Shortly thereafter Mr. Worthington presented to me sworn claims on behalf of his wife and Miss Sproule, aggregating more than $71,000, as well as laying claim to the larger portion of the book stock, electrotype plates, office furniture, etc., remaining on hand, and in my possession as receiver.

You may imagine the task then before me when I state that the claims were made upon the theory that, after the failure of Mr. Worthington in 1885, his wife had advanced him more than $40,000 to pay his creditors, and for this he had given her bills of sale of all property turned back to him by Mr. Jenkins, the assignee, upon the completion of the compromise with his creditors after that assignment. That all of this property had been left by her for sale and use by the Worthington Company, and must be accounted for. Upon my application the court, on the 8th of December, appointed a referee, William H. Willis, Esq., of 115 Broadway, to hear and determine the validity of those claims, I having rejected them all, and for four months he has been taking evidence regarding the same, and has just rendered his report to the court, finding that all the claims presented were fictitious.

Mr. Worthington produced bills of sale (?) to Mrs. Worthington, and maintained that unless the receiver could show title, all the property still belonged to her. It was no easy task for a receiver to produce invoices of many years ago, when the interests of those who had been the custodians required that they should not come to light. However, important invoices were discovered and annual inventories were critically examined, with favorable results; papers offered as evidence of title against the company were proved to be simply manufactured at a recent period; and finally, the case was so thoroughly exposed that it broke down, even before we had placed our expert accountant on the stand, on the 14th of April the attorney for the Worthingtons stating to the court his surprise at the situation, and withdrawing from the case, thus abandoning all the claims presented.

Mrs. Worthington was unable to explain where she got the large sums of money which it was claimed she loaned to her husband and the company. The only money of her own that she could account for, previous to the failure of 1885, was one thousand dollars, which she had in the Bleecker Street Savings Bank, notwithstanding she was named as a preferred creditor for a large amount at the time of the failure in 1885.

We are able to show that, previous to the failure of 1885, very large quantities of books were sent out of the State, but sold after the assignment, the proceeds being turned over to Miss Sproule instead of to the assignee, and thus her apparent wealth was accounted for.

Much false evidence had been given, documents had been made in secret and sworn to as true before the court, even the secretary's book of minutes being bunglingly altered in attempts to make them uphold these false claims. All this had involved the estate in thousands of dollars of expense, thereby reducing the dividends to the creditors to that extent. Under these circumstances I deemed it my duty to select at least one case from the many, and prefer a charge of perjury against Mr. Worthington, as otherwise I had expended your money simply to prevent his taking what property he had not already taken as an officer of the company while managing it. The report of the expert accountants show that the Worthington household, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Worthington and Miss Sproule, are justly indebted to the estate for more than sixty thousand dollars, instead of it being indebted to them for more than seventy-one thousand dollars. Suits have already been commenced against them for the amounts so shown to be due. I have also secured warehouse receipts for eighty-eight cases of books which were stored in Mrs. Worthington's name, a portion of them being the books shipped to Chicago; and let me here note that twenty-eight cases of these books were shipped to Chicago as early as October, 1892, charged to no one, and no entry whatever made in the books, the carman's receipt who took them to the railroad being the only record found.

The facts of the particular case which I have selected for prosecution are as follows, viz.:

In order to prove title to the books improperly shipped to Chicago, Mr. Worthington testified that they had been sold to his wife, who, he claimed, was doing business under the firm-name of R. Worthington & Co.; that she had paid for the books by giving notes; that the notes had been paid over to Miss Sproule, as the company owed her money; that at their maturity Mrs. Worthington had taken up or paid the notes; he went so far as to produce three notes which he identified as the notes so given; he also produced three checks, drawn on the East River National Bank, of the same amount as the notes, and bearing dates corresponding to the dates when these three notes matured, and testified that these particular checks were paid for these particular notes; whereas the whole statement appeared to be false, the cashier of the bank testifying that the bank had never received the identified checks in payment of the identified notes, and, if possible, worse than all, he testified that at the times the checks bear date Margaret Worthington, whose name was signed to those checks, had no account in the bank from which said checks could or would have been paid had such been presented.

I realize the importance of such a serious charge, but am fully persuaded that I should have failed in my duty to you and to myself had I pursued any other course. This slight outline, which might be continued almost indefinitely, will help you to a correct judgment of the situation, and thus enable you to approve or otherwise what I have very reluctantly determined was my duty in the premises.

A judicial examination of the perjury charge was concluded at the Tombs Police Court today, the judge deciding not to hold Mr. Worthington for the action of the Grand Jury.

I have endeavored to conduct the affairs of this receivership as carefully and as economically as if it was my own business, and hope within the next thirty days to receive the proceeds of the sale just finished, when I shall ask the court for permission to pay it out to you in dividends, my chief regret being that it will be but a very moderate one, probably about twenty-five or thirty per cent., with hopes that later there may be a very small additional dividend derived from the sale of the recovered books above referred to, some slight legal formalities being necessary before I can sell them, and from endowment life insurance policies on Mr. Worthington's life, the premiums of which were paid for by the money of the Worthington Company, and which I hope to obtain by order of the court.

Had not these claims of the Worthington household been successfully resisted, I am of the opinion that the creditors of the corporation would have received but a very trifling dividend, if any at all.

In case any one may think that action looking to criminal prosecution should have been taken at an earlier date, I beg to say that what requires but a few minutes to read and understand, when placed in form of this statement, was slowly developed by months of hard investigation, some of the most important links in the chain of evidence having but recently been brought to light. Early in the autumn of last year I deemed it my duty to entirely dispense with the services of Mr. Worthington, and acted accordingly.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH J. LITTLE, Receiver.

MR. WORTHINGTON DISCHARGED.

RICHARD WORTHINGTON was arraigned in the Tombs Court on Friday, April 27, on complaint of Joseph J. Little, receiver, who charged him with perjury. He furnished bail for examination on Tuesday, May 1. Justice Martin in the Tombs Court on that day discharged Mr. Worthington from custody.

FAILURE OF THE ELZEVIR COMPANY.

THE ELZEVIR COMPANY, booksellers, of 57 Rose Street, New York, and of Orange, N. J., made an assignment Wednesday, May 2, to Frank Tracy without preference. The officers are John B. Alden, president and treasurer, and Leonora Watts, secretary. Mr. Alden incorporated the company under New Jersey laws in July, 1891, with a capital stock of $100,000, of which it was said that $17,050 was issued as full paid. The concern was regarded in the trade as virtually belonging to Mr. Alden. He has been in the book business for twenty years, and has assisted in the formation of several companies. The present company succeeded to a part of the business of the Alden Publishing Company. The attorneys for the company estimate the liabilities at about $30,000. The assets nominally are considerably larger.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

DR. THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH, of Newark, N. J., has two claims to distinction: He is the author of "Ben Bolt," and he once thrashed Edgar Allan Poe.

FREDERIC DIODATI THOMPSON, author of "In the Track of the Sun," published last year by the Appletons, has just returned from a trip to Turkey, which will furnish material shortly for another interesting book.

AMONG Mr. Rider Haggard's treasures at his English home, Ditchingham Manor, is a desk which belonged to Charles Dickens. It was bought by Mr. Haggard at the Gads Hill sale, and now occupies a niche in his billiard-room.

EMILE ZOLA last Friday, April 27, read from his new serial, "Lourdes," now running in the New York Herald in this country, in aid of the pension fund of the Société des Gens de Lettres. M. Zola read several short selections, the first dealing with Bernadette Soubirous' childhood, the second with the first apparition, the third with the effect of the apparitions on the people of the Lourdes district.

GEO. DU MAURIER'S "Trilby" is well known to the author's friends to be largely autobiographical, and several of the characters have already been recognized as portraits of celebrated artists who lived in the Bohemia of Paris while Du Maurier was studying there. A short time ago he told an American friend who some of these were, so there is no doubt that the resemblances are more than accidental.

IBSEN told an interviewer recently that he could not get an inspiration during his writing if there was not a tray before him which contained a little bear in wood, a little black devil holding a wax candle, and several little rabbits and cats made of copper. "This may appear to you to be ridiculous," said Ibsen, "but so it is. As to the use I make of them, that is my secret, and I shall not divulge it to you or any one else."

MR. WILLIAM MORRIS has just brought out from his Kelmscott Press another classic in the shape of an edition of Keats. Mr. Morris' own romance, "The Wood Beyond the World," is in process of printing, as is also his translation from Old French, which he calls "The Story of the Emperor Constance." He announces for future publication an edition of Caxton's translation of St. Jerome's "Vitæ Patrum." Only one other edition was ever published—that of Wynken de Worde.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

THE CATALOGUE OF PRINCE L.-L. BONAPARTE'S LIBRARY.

THE catalogue of Prince Louis-Lucien Bonaparte's library, compiled by Mr. Victor Collins, and just published by H. Sotheran & Co. (718 p. O. bds., one guinea), has long been anxiously expected by philologists and book-lovers. It is a striking exposition of the extent and importance of Prince Bonaparte's remarkable philological collection. In arrangement and execution the catalogue reflects high credit on its compiler, whose work was done under the great disadvantage of limited time. The catalogue was prepared in view of the approaching sale of the library; it records 13,699 volumes, and the work of compilation was completed within a period of eighteen months. The entries—title only—had therefore to be condensed as much as possible, and it is to be regretted that considerable bibliographical data—notably the pagination—was perforce omitted. The collection is classified in three grand divisions: Monosyllabic languages; Agglutinative languages; Inflectional languages. These are again divided and subdivided into many dialects and local groups. Mr. Collins had the help of many philological experts in the revision of the various works, and in the definite classification of the language groups. The richness and variety of the collection, as indicated in the catalogue, is really astonishing, and yet Mr. Collins remarks that it is but the "merest outline of the linguistic treasures contained in the library." He adds that "in the compilation of a perfect catalogue of the Bonaparte library there is several years' work for many experts." In view of this fact, and of the intrinsic value and importance of the library as an epitome of philological literature, no one can fail to echo Mr. Collins' hope that its "ultimate destination will be some learned institution where its linguistic treasures may be studied at ease." It would be most regrettable should this monument of painstaking scholarship and scientific enthusiasm be dispersed throughout the private and public libraries of England, America, or the Continent, and it is therefore pleasant to note that the Messrs. Sotheran, in whose hands it has been placed for sale, desire to receive offers for the collection en bloc only. The library was valued by its owner at £50,000.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—D. Lothrop Co. have made a payment of 25 per cent. and are now making another of 50 per cent. on their indebtedness. Louis D. Brandus, assignee, will make the second payment to the creditors at once.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Lothrop Publishing Company, 114-120 Purchase Street, announce to the trade that it has purchased the entire plant, good-will, accounts, stock, and copyrights of the D. Lothrop Company. The new corporation is now ready for business, and solicits your orders for its well-known publications.

DES MOINES, IA.—R. T. Wellslager, formerly of the Redhead, Norton & Lathrop Company, stationers, etc., which made an assignment last January, has bought the stock of the insolvent concern for George R. Lathrop and Clayton C. Rhoads, both of whom are members of the company. The business will be continued at the old stand under a style not yet decided upon. The creditors of the company have been paid 25 cents on the dollar in compromise of their claims.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Finney Brothers, booksellers, etc., have suffered a loss by fire.

NEW YORK CITY.—A. L. Burt removed on April 25 from 66 to 97-101 Reade Street. Mr. Burt says: "I think a publisher whose books are made to be read should continue to do business in Reade Street rather than move up-town, as is the fashion."

NEW YORK CITY.—The firm of Wilson & Lewis succeeds J. Willson Wilson of 16 W. 125th St. W. Cooper Lewis comes in as equal partner. Mr. Wilson was for many years with Brentano's and is now known as the Brentano of Harlem, where he has a very pretty store.

NEW YORK CITY.—The stockholders of the Hallo Publishing Company held a meeting on April 24, at their offices in the Bible House, and adjourned sine die. The comic weekly paper Hallo will be published as heretofore on Tuesdays, under the copyright of Mr. C. de Grimm.

NEW YORK CITY.—The sheriff has received an attachment for $4261 against Griffith, Farran & Co., publishers, of London, in favor of John McLoughlin, doing business as McLoughlin Brothers, of New York, for merchandise sold to the London concern between January 1, 1893, and January 1, 1894.

NEW YORK CITY.—Judge Gildersleeve, of the Supreme Court, has appointed Albert W. Faulkner receiver of the University Magazine Company, of No. 70 South Street, on the application of a majority of the directors, James Wilton Brooks, George S. Olmstead, and Mr. Faulkner. It was alleged that the company is unable to meet its obligations. The liabilities are about $7000. The assets consist of plates valued at $4500; subscription account, $6000, and goodwill, $5000—that is, if the publication was successful. The company was incorporated under New York State laws in December, 1890, with a capital stock of $50,000, and succeeded the Collegian Publishing Company. James Wilton Brooks was president. The company published the University Magazine, which was started about six years ago.

NEW YORK CITY.—George B. Hurd & Co. have removed to the large and handsome building on the southeast corner of Broome and Crosby Streets. The process of removal has been much expedited by the careful calculation and management of Frank B. Hurd, so that by having virtually two sets of machinery running, they have been able to continue removing right along from the start. This has enabled them to also continue to fill their orders with quite as much promptness as before, and as though the force was not obliged to do the extra work of packing, removing, and rearranging the stock. George B. Hurd said that they should have their factory arranged in a much more convenient manner than formerly, and should be able to turn off work more expeditiously. They wish it to be understood that they can fill orders now just as well as before.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Henry F. Scheetz, who for six years past has occupied the position of superintendent of advertising with the J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia, is about to sever his connection with that house, and on the 1st of June will assume charge of the manufacturing department of the Presbyterian Board of Publication.

PORTLAND, ME.—Thomas B. Mosher, Portland, Me., has been awarded the contract for supplying the public schools and the various departments of Portland with stationery for the coming year.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The Dodge & Brown Co. have gone out of business.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

"ANGLICAN SACERDOTALISM," a recent literary defence of an illogical position, is keenly criticised by Rev. George M. Searle in The Catholic World for May.

The International Journal of Ethics for April contains reviews of important works recently published on ethical subjects in English and foreign languages which are of particular value.

THE first place in The English Illustrated for "Women Poets of the Day," written by Richard Le Gallienne, and enriched with many extracts and photographs.

Munsey's Magazine for May contains an article on F. Hopkinson Smith, the talented artist, author, engineer, and playwright, written by Gilson Willets, who shows the leading thought of the busy life of his friend when he tells us he wants to be happy himself and do all he can towards making everybody else happy.

JOHN BRISBANE WALKER, publisher of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, has decided to move his publication office to Irvington-on-the-Hudson. Mr. Walker has purchased the Barney estate, and will erect a suitable building, and it is thought new houses will be erected in the village to accommodate the employees. It is said the Cosmopolitan is moving to avoid the heavy taxes levied by the city which its growing prosperity brings to decidedly large figures.

THE Buchgewerbeblatt (book-trade paper) of Leipzig, Germany, devotes most of its first April issue to a review of the life and work of the De Vinnes in an article on the "De Vinne Press," written by H. Richard, illustrated with five cuts showing portraits of the great printers, a view of their vast building on Lafayette Place, and a fac-simile of the address of the employees of the firm presented to the De Vinne Brothers on the occasion of a banquet, given on April 5, 1892.

THE Academy of Inscriptions and Belles-lettres has just instituted a new publication, entitled "Monuments et Mémoires publiés par l'Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-lettres." It will consist of a series of fascicules of irregular periodicity in which will appear interesting documents and plates, hitherto unpublished, relating to antiquity and the Middle Age. The funds for this publication are supplied, at least in part, by a legacy which the academy received from the estate of M. Eugène Piot, who died in 1889. This falls in very luckily, as France, since the disappearance of the Gazette Archéologique, has been rather behind her neighbors in the development of archæological studies. In the list of contributors to the first number of the "Monuments" the names of MM. Heuzey, Maspero, Héron de Villefosse, and other scholars of high repute are to be noted. The plates accompanying the text are also noteworthy.

AN important announcement comes from Germany that after October next the well-known Philosophische Monatshefte, now edited by Prof. Natorp of Marburg, will become a quarterly, with the title Archiv für Systematische Philosophie. The new Archiv and the existing Archiv für die Geschichte der Philosophie, edited by Prof. Stein of Berne, will be under one management, and together will be known as Archiv für Philosophie. The newly-named journal will devote particular attention to the systematic review of new philosophical literature. How well this important work will be done may be judged from the following list of names: Theory of knowledge, Prof. Natorp; metaphysics, Prof. Encken of Jena; psychology, Prof. Benno Erdmann of Halle; logic, Prof. Riehl of Freiburg i. B.; ethics, Prof. Judl of Prague; sociology, Prof. Tonnies of Kiel; philosophy of law, Prof. Stammler of Galle; æsthetics, Prof. Lipps of Munich; philosophy of religion, Prof. Baur of Münsingen; pedagogics, Prof. Ziegler of Strass-

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

D. APPLETON & Co. have in press a book by Alfred Ayres, entitled "Acting and Actors," a book about theatre folk and theatre art. It will probably be published on the 25th of the current month.

BRENTANO'S are sending out with their compliments a neat little booklet, entitled "Card Courtesy," giving brief little instructions on visiting-cards and their use, which is gotten up for them by the Whiting Paper Co., New York City.

MOSES KING, Boston, has issued a special edition of 50,000 copies of "New York, the American Cosmopolis," a selection of about eighty pages and one hundred illustrations from the rich material of King's "Handbook of New York City."

THE F. A. DAVIS Co., Philadelphia, have just ready "Lectures on Auto-Intoxication in Disease, or, self-poisoning of the individual," by Charles Bouchard, translated with a preface by Thomas Oliver, professor of physiology in the University of Durham.

THE Spanish Jesuits at Plasencia were prepared to burn some books they considered wicked, among them certain of Zola's works. The Pope, it is said, is annoyed at this intolerance, and specially vexed at the affront to the author of "Lourdes," the first of the trilogy in which the place of honor will be for mystic Rome.

JOHN E. POTTER & Co , Philadelphia, intend to issue in semi-monthly numbers the "Potter-Bradley Atlas of the World," designed especially for commercial and library reference, since it will contain stores of information furnished by the Postal and Interior Departments of the United States and also gathered from many reliable private sources. The work will be completed in twenty numbers.

GEORGE WAHR, Ann Arbor, Michigan, has issued "Directions for Laboratory Work in Bacteriology," for the use of medical classes in the University of Michigan, written by Dr. Frederick G. Novy, junior professor of hygiene and physiological chemistry. The subject-matter is arranged entirely with a view to progressive work. The course covers a period of twelve weeks of daily afternoon work.

THE JOHNS HOPKINS PRESS has just issued "The Struggle of Protestant Dissenters for Religious Toleration in Virginia." by Henry R. McIlvaine, professor of English and history, Hampden-Sidney College. The titles of the chapters show the ground covered by this important treatise; they are: The Established Church of Virginia; The Quakers; The Huguenots and the Germans; and The Presbyterians.

PARIS is to have a Victor Hugo Museum filled with relics of the great poet. Most of these relics are in the possession of Professor Koch, who inherited them from his aunt, Madame Drouet of Guernsey, where Victor Hugo spent so many of his years of exile. Among these treasures are a large number of figures carved in wood, and a wonderful set of panels which the author painted to decorate the dining-room of Madame Drouet.

STONE & KIMBALL, Cambridge, Mass., send forth two charming little volumes of verse. "When Hearts are Trumps" embraces a numerous collection of vers de société by Tom Hall, all of which have previously delighted the readers of popular periodicals. The volume is provided with artistic marginal decorations. In more serious vein is "The Quest of Heracles, and other poems," by Hugh McCulloch, Jr., which, notably among its sonnets, bristles with memorable lines.

HILTON, HUGHES & Co., New York City, have enlarged their book and stationery department, and placed it in charge of S. M. Wynkoop. and it will be run thoroughly like a separate bookstore. The space allotted for this branch of the great department store is tastefully made the most of. A special freshness and originality is given it at the moment by the ingenious decorations of crêped tissue-paper, which is used to give the effect of curtains, lambrequins, and other wall hangings, and is also used in the manufacture of a great variety of articles that serve to beautify the department.

IT is but fair to Mr. Stead and his publishers, Messrs. Laird & Lee, of Chicago, to correct the impression left on many minds by the fact that the news companies have refused to handle the book entitled "If Christ Came to Chicago." Although Mr. Stead's taste in using so sensational a title may be questioned, his book is written with the earnest purpose of showing how diametrically opposed to the leading thought of the Christian religion, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," is the daily practice of the inhabitants of representative cities the world over. He has gone rather too much into details and personalities for a work intended for a broadcast sale, and has certainly run the risk that his good may be evil spoken of. The news companies have feared libel suits, it would seem. But Mr. Stead has given only facts in his fearful picture of corrupt municipal and social life. Religious houses of all denominations are making a specialty of this book, and many prominent clergymen have used Mr. Stead's material as texts for special sermons. The evils Mr. Stead describes exist, and his manner of describing them is not calculated to make them alluring.

IT it proposed that the United States Bureau of Statistics shall prepare and issue an annual "Statistical Abstract of Foreign Countries" on lines similar to those of the most valuable "Statistical Abstract of the United States," such as has been found of great value in the English blue-books. Mr. Worthington C. Ford, chief of the Bureau of Statistics, in submitting this suggestion to Secretary Carlisle for transmission to Congress, states that, in view of the constantly-increasing number of inquiries addressed to the Bureau for statistics bearing upon the commerce, industry, and general economic factors of European and foreign countries, it will be judicious and useful to prepare an abstract which shall furnish such information. It is proposed to cover in such an abstract of foreign countries such subjects as area and population, mercantile marines, imports and exports, railways and telegraphs, emigration and immigration, and finance; also statistics of mineral products, special industries, etc. The figures will be officially correct in all cases. If the suggestion is authorized by Congress it is believed that the abstract can be in proper shape for publication by next December. In the proposed resolution submitted to Congress for approval it is provided that an edition of ten thousand copies be printed.

"Summer Reading," 1894.

To RETAIL DEALERS:

The SUMMER CATALOGUE, issued for sixteen years, has been found so useful and profitable by enterprising dealers, that it has become a regular feature of the trade. The seventeenth issue, with an entirely new cover, in a special pamphlet adapted for imprint circulation all through the summer, will be published in connection with THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY about the first of June.

The imprint editions will contain, in addition to a catalogue of guide-books and light literature for summer reading, an entirely new selection of reading-matter both of a practical and entertaining character, chiefly intended for the use and amusement of tourists, pleasure-seekers, and visitors of summer resorts.

Booksellers should remember that, while summer is usually a dull time, the sales of light literature, etc., can be pushed to make a successful business even in this season. The classes who travel are of course those who have money to spend, even in dull times, and the summer is the time when very many bookbuyers do the greater part of their reading. Booksellers at or near summer resorts should especially avail themselves of this publication, while city dealers should remember that it will also be useful to tempt stay-at-homes to make investments, or to follow up customers otherwise out of reach.

BELLE-PLANTE AND CORNELIUS.

By CLAUDE TILLIER. Translated from the French by Benjamin R. Tucker. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

One cannot have too much of Claude Tillier. He stands forth in bold relief as an eloquent example of the rugged, honest style of the past, made more effective by virtue of contrast with the conventional, artificial style of to-day. He appeals to his readers with an old gospel, newly interpreted—the gospel of humanity. He calls a spade a spade, and speaks from the heart. Others have done the former, but so few, comparatively speaking, have done the latter that Tillier is almost unique.

MY UNCLE BENJAMIN.

A Humorous and Philosophical Novel. By CLAUDE TILLIER. Translated from the French by Benjamin R. Tucker. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

A novel unlike any other, by an author unlike any other; a novel that has no equivalent in the literature of this century; a novel which, despite the pessimism with which it opens and the pathos with which it closes, must take rank among the wittiest and most humorous ever written; a novel of philosophy, of progress, of reality, of humanity; a novel of the heart and of the head; a novel which is less a work of art than a work of genius.

A COMMON MISTAKE.

The Story of a New York Society Girl. By JEANNE M. HOWELL. 12mo, cloth, 50 cents.

Sylvia Gilchrist is an epitome of the undisciplined, brilliant, nervous young womanhood of America. Gifted with an exceptionally fine physique and of bright mind, she only knows her power to wield it capriciously and of her own sweet will. The book is delightful, and every trunk packed for sea-shore or mountain should contain a copy.

READY SOON.

TWO SAD BROWN EYES.

By MARIE ST. FELIX, author of "Little Game with Destiny." Paper, 50 cents.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' NEW BOOKS

JUST PUBLISHED:

Recollections of a Virginian

In the Mexican, Indian, and Civil Wars. By General DABNEY H. MAURY. With portrait. 12mo, $1.50.

A racy and entertaining narrative of experience during an active and adventurous life. General Maury is a witty, interesting writer, and his book contains many amusing anecdotes as well as some tragic and pathetic episodes; while it possesses an important and serious value in the frank, unreserved picture it presents of the life of a soldier in the Mexican, Indian, and Civil wars.

New Popular Editions of Donald G. Mitchell's Country Books.

"My Farm of Edgewood"—A Country Book. "Wet Days at Edgewood"—With Old Farmers, Old Gardeners, and Old Pastorals. Each, small 12mo, 75 cents.

Mr. Mitchell's two well-known books have a fresh odor of the fields and gardens which makes their republication in a new and attractive dress peculiarly appropriate at this season of the year.

Overheard in Arcady.

By ROBERT BRIDGES (Droch). With 65 illustrations by O. Herford, F. G. Attwood, and A. E. Sterner. 12mo, $1.25.

DIALOGUES ABOUT: Howells, James, Aldrich, Stockton, Davis, Crawford, Kipling, Meredith, Stevenson, and Barrie.

"The clever way in which a number of characters, created by popular authors, are used in this book will afford delightful entertainment to the lovers of refined fiction."—Boston Sat. Eve. Gazette.

Dante G. Rossetti and the Pre-Raphaelite Movement.

The book contains some unpublished reminiscences of Rossetti's student days and career in art, and describes the Founding of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood and its long conflict with academic traditions.

NOTES IN SEASON.

JAMES POTT & Co. have just ready "The Ascent of Man," by Henry Drummond, a new and important scientific work on evolution in ten chapters, under the suggestive headings: The ascent of the body; the scaffolding of the body; the arrest of the body; the dawn of mind; the evolution of language; the struggle of life; the struggle for the life of others; the evolution of a mother; the evolution of a father; involution.

THE MERRIAM COMPANY have now ready two many readers, and are offered in Benjamin R. Tucker's artistic translations. "Belle-Plante" and "My Uncle Benjamin" are sure of large sales in their pretty new dress. "A Common Mistake," the story of a New York society girl, by Jeanne M. Howell, gives a vivid picture of the undisciplined, nervous young womanhood of America's large cities; and "Two Bad Brown Eyes," by Marie St. Felix, promises to be a cheery love-story for which the public will not be kept long waiting.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just imported "Letters of Franz Liszt," collected and edited by La Mara, and translated by Constance Bache. This work contains more than 650 interesting letters and two portraits, and is issued in two volumes; "Among the Moors," notes and sketches of an artist, by G. Montbard, profusely illustrated; and "Dante G. Rossetti and the Pre-Raphaelite Movement," by Mrs. J. W. Wood, with eight photogravure reproductions of Rossetti's paintings. They will issue shortly "Salem Kittredge, and other stories," by Bliss Perry; and "The Navigator's Pocket-Book," by Captain Howard Patterson, arranged for immediate reference to any subject connected with navigation.

G. H. BUEK & Co., art publishers of New York, announce for early issue, in twenty parts, "The Wild Flowers of America." Within the past year or two widespread popular interest has been awakened in American floral wealth; the books which have stimulated or responded to this interest have either been illustrated in plain black and white, or have presented colored plates at prices beyond the means of ordinary people. The enterprise of G. H. Buek & Co. is a worthy attempt to secure the widest popularity by offering artistic pictures in colors on nominal terms. The flowers, some 300 in number, have been carefully selected from every State and Territory in the Union. Each plate is to be accompanied by the common name, and by the name chosen by the botanical committee appointed on nomenclature last August at Madison, Wisconsin, by the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The letter-press will give scientific data first, and then proceed to a word of comment and gossip, with citations from the praise of flowers in the poets. We understand the New York Recorder has secured "The Wild Flowers of America" for the cities of New York and Brooklyn.

"SUMMER READING."

THE "Summer Reading" number of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is in active preparation, and publishers and booksellers would do well by themselves and by us if they would kindly notify us as soon as possible of the manner in which they desire to be represented by advertisement, literary matter, and imprint editions. The number has a new attractive cover, and we desire to have time to print it as it should be to make it effective all summer long as an advertising medium. Our date of publication is May 26, and the details connected with that special number are endless. Any bookseller who has given this issue a fair trial looks to it year after year as one of the greatest helps that come to him. Macy, Jesse. First lessons in civil government. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1894. c. 13+229 p. il. D. cl., 70 c. [1502

By the author of "Our government." Suggests that a child in drawing the map of its township, or county, be instructed as to the public control of that area. Beginning thus with the government of the public school in which a child finds itself, its outlook is gradually extended until the government of the United States is briefly and simply explained. Four typical state governments are compared, with provision for the study of any other. Concludes with a strong plea for the fulfilment of civic duty—the habit to be formed early in life. Cites the case of W: M. Tweed as showing the consequences when citizens neglect their duty, and contrasts this with the readiness of the same men to die, if need be, for their country.

This system, devised by Mr. Herbert Spencer's father, has been in manuscript since 1843. It is now published, as explained by the writer of the prefatory note, not because it possesses advantages over existing phonographies for reporting and kindred purposes, but "from the conviction, long since formed and still unshaken, that it ought to replace ordinary writing." It is claimed that, as it possesses the brevity of shorthands in general, and greater legibility, the use of it by men of business, journalists, authors, and people at large, would achieve a great economy of life.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 12, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

THE PROFESSION OF BOOKSELLING.

THE CIRCULATING LIBRARY.—III.

IT will be found a good plan to keep a special memorandum-book in which to record, alphabetically, as nearly as possible, the books called for and not in the library. It should be consulted once a week, say on Saturday morning, and all books that have had three or more calls during the week should be procured for the library. It will probably be found, as a rule, that ten per cent. of the books which must be retained in the library will not earn their cost within a given time, while during the same period fifty per cent. may have paid for themselves seven times over. We know of a bookseller who some years ago started a circulating library in a New Hampshire village of about 3000 inhabitants, commencing operations with about eighty books. The only other library in the place, which was entitled in the remotest degree to be termed public, was what was known as a "social library," and was owned by shareholders; it contained about 1500 volumes, and was open but a few hours on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons of each week. At the end of one year our friend, the bookseller, took account of stock. His eighty volumes had increased to 150, and the gross receipts for the year had amounted to $216, or about sixty dollars more than the cost of the books, expense years he had 500 volumes on his shelves, and the gross receipts for the same length of time had amounted to $800. We indulge in this digression to show how, even in a small community and with the most indifferent start, a circulating library may be considered a source of profit, notwithstanding that a certain small proportion of the books may never pay for their cost. If a good customer wants a book that is not in the library it may sometimes be good policy to procure it, even if the prospect is that it will be called for by no one else. A proprietor of a circulating library cannot be too careful on this point. If he has a good customer the appreciation of it must be made known in acts that reach the latter's vanity, as well as prove the former's enterprise and far-reaching business sense.

The question has been frequently raised as to the advisability of letting out the cheap paper-covered books. To the beginner we would say: "Do not meddle with the cheap paper series, for the purpose of lending, until your circulating library is well established, and then you will know better." A few borrowers may not object to paying two cents a day for a new paper-covered book; but more often the borrower will complain that the rate is too much for that kind of literature, and will be apt to figure out how long it would take, at two cents a day, to pay for a twenty-cent book. Besides many other objections, this line of books, as a rule, will hardly be in a condition to lend out a second time. To attempt to rebind them, howsoever cheaply, will hardly be found profitable. We know of one bookseller-librarian who adds all the latest paper-covered books to his library, but keeps them separate from the bound books and only labels them. After they are soiled and worn he tears them up and sells them for waste paper. He always adds ten copies in paper of the recent books of certain popular authors. He had fifty copies of the paper-covered edition of "Dodo" in his library. He had two bound copies of this book, which he believed had paid for themselves over twenty times.

As a rule good books in substantial bindings should form the foundation for a new circulating library. These books will be the first introduction of the library to its patrons, and well-made, clean books are absolutely necessary as a guarantee of the future management of this part of the bookseller's business.

For the benefit of those who may want to let out paper-covered reading-matter apart from the legitimate circulating library, we quote below from the New York Tribune a description of how a limited circulating library of such books may be made profitable:

There are good profits to be made by dealing and one dealer has found out how to "eat his cake and have it too," which careful mothers tell their children cannot be done. This dealer, with an eye to the pennies, will take a paper-covered novel, published at 50 cents, but which he has bought for 30, and sell it for 35 cents, with the understanding that the buyer is to return it when read. When the book comes back he pays 20 cents for it, and puts it up for sale again at 30 cents. The second buyer returns the book and receives 15 cents, and for a third time the book is on the shelves, this time marked 20 cents. Again it comes back, the reader takes 10 cents, and the book, if by careful patching it can be kept in decent condition, will change owners half a dozen times, leaving to the dealer a profit of a nickel every time it comes to the store. Books have often, through careful handling, paid 200 per cent. on the original investment, and at the end found their way back to the shelves of the dealer, who has the profits and the book.

Another system then comes into play. Books will be sold on the "two-for-one" plan. In this scheme a buyer will take two books at, say, 20 cents each, paying 40 cents in cash; when these have been read they are returnable, and the dealer will give any 20-cent book in the place for the two brought back. When this 20-cent book is returned a 10-cent volume may be taken in exchange, and when this last comes back a nickel and the book will bring out another 10-cent book. This process may be kept up as long as the buyer sees fit. The thrifty dealer is always ready for a trade.

Of course, it sometimes happens that a buyer in the first instance will keep the book, but as the store caters to a class of customers who can hardly be termed collectors, but who like highly-seasoned literature, the danger of a diminution of profits in this way is very slight. In this particular branch of the second-hand book business the demand for love-stories and "blood-and-thunder" literature is large and steady. Huxley, Tyndall, Emerson, or Swinburne find little favor among the readers and scant ceremony on the shelves, but "Old Cap. Collier" is a stanch favorite, while Gaboriau, Fergus Hume, Conan Doyle, Zola, A. C. Gunter, and Sylvanus Cobb always command a respectful hearing from the men and boys. The girls—and there are lots of them who are steady customers—favor "The Duchess," Ouida, Mrs. Southworth, and Laura Jean Libbey.

Once in a while some of the yellow-covered "Beadle's Dime Novels" of thirty years ago stray into the place, but they stay there only a short time, as "Snaky Snodgrass, the Sorrowful Scout," and "Painted Pete, the Pottawattomie Prisoner," are quickly dragged away to lighten the gloom of a winter's night and to form the basis of many a castle in Spain inhabited by maidens in distress surrounded by a hideous crew of yelling "varmints" or "redskins." Common every-day Indians were never good enough for the yellow-novel heroes to kill.

An idea of the magnitude of this out-of-the-way branch of trade may be gathered from the fact that on the shelves of one of the two "stores" run by this enterprising tradesman are no less than 8000 paper-covered novels, and in addition to this they are piled away in corners, stacked against the walls, and one room in the rear of the place is practically given over to a repair-shop for them.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

TO PREVENT PLAY PIRACY.

On May 7 the House Committee on Patents gave a hearing to a deputation composed of Messrs. David Belasco, Charles Barnard, Harrison Grey Fiske, and J. I. C. Clarke, representing the interests of playwrights. The object of the committee was to urge the passage of a bill introduced in the House a few weeks ago by Amos J. Cummings, of New York, designed to prevent the pirating of dramatic compositions, and providing that any person performing such composition for which a copyright has been obtained, without the consent of the proprietor, shall be liable for damages not less than $100 for the first and $50 for every subsequent performance, with imprisonment not exceeding one year. It also provides that any injunction which may be granted by any United States Circuit Court may be served upon the parties against whom it is granted anywhere in the United States, and may be enforced by any circuit court.

Bronson Howard made the first argument in favor of the bill. He said that under the existing law injunctions against the pirating of plays were impracticable, as the offenders were constantly moving from one place to another, making one night or one week "stands." He spoke of a Chicago firm which has pirated six hundred plays and advertised them for sale, obtaining the text either by stenographic copying or by bribing theatre attachés. He said that this concern had on its list foreign plays for which large sums had been paid. He did not, however, consider theatre managers particeps criminis, except innocently. The discussion then became general, the central topic for debate being the question of the adequacy of jurisdiction in the present law to restrain pirates. The members of the deputation stated that all their experience went to prove that an injunction was not operative outside of the district granted, and therefore contempt in disobeying the injunction outside of the limits of the district did not exist.

"THE HEAVENLY TWINS."

President Mershon, of the Cassell Publishing Company, of Union Square, started for Chicago, May 9, to begin a legal warfare against a Chicago publishing house.

The Messrs. Cassell secured from Mme. Grand the right to publish "The Heavenly Twins" in the United States, and under their contract pay her royalties on all copies of the book sold in this country. An introduction to the book was written in New York City, and the book was duly copyrighted at Washington before any copies were sold here.

The Cassells issued a large edition of the book in cloth binding, and it is said that their profits have been heavy. No cheap edition was issued, and to meet the demands of the large bazaars and dry-good stores a Chicago house is now printing an enormous paper-covered edition to retail at twenty-five cents. The Chicago firm is backed by parties unknown to the Cassells, and the business is being conducted under an assumed name.

Mr. Mershon says he will, if necessary, spend $20,000 to test the copyright law, and the trade will certainly owe him a debt of gratitude if he

THE SWEDISH BOOK TRADE.

THE Swedish society of publishers (Svenska Bokförläggareföreningen) turned the first half century of its existence in December, 1893, and has commemorated its semi-centennial by the publication of a history of the society and an account of the past and present state of the Swedish book-trade. The association has since its organization wrought so notable a change in the conditions of the trade, that a brief review of its development for the past fifty years seems both fitting and interesting. In the first half of the nineteenth century the Swedish book-trade was confined to Stockholm, Upsala, and some two or three other places; since then it has widely developed, and now a network of book-stores is spread across the country from Haparanda to Ystad; many of these, also in the smaller towns, do exceedingly good work, partly through branches established in the country villages about the central town. Before 1843 there were very few real booksellers. Although the agents of the society, at its organization, were seventy-five in number, most of them were bookbinders or country store-keepers, while some were bokförare — canvassers — who went from one fair to another, and in the intervals either had a little shop somewhere in a small town, or canvassed through the country. A few school-teachers were also among the agents, and these did comparatively good work. There are now one hundred and forty agents, most of whom make bookselling their main business, generally in connection with a stationery stock, or, in some cases, a stock of cigars, fancy articles, etc.

The main difficulty with which the society has had to deal from the beginning, and which in fact was the cause of its formation, was the discount given to unauthorized agents by some publishers.

In Sweden retail booksellers are commissioned by the society, and they must be engaged by the society as a whole, not by every publisher separately. Besides these agents, however, there has always been a class of dealers who get books "on commission" from some publishers, without having been authorized by the society. The society has tried vigorously to cope with this difficulty, but so far has failed in the endeavor. In 1887 eleven publishers withdrew from the society, and founded a new organization. While the society could not approve of the giving of discounts to unauthorized agents, it was gradually compelled to give individual publishers more and more freedom in this respect, with the result that this privilege has been used somewhat more recklessly by the members of the new society than was intended. Though the society has failed in this, it has, nevertheless, accomplished much in other directions, especially in the dissemination of good literature, and in raising the standard of publishers as well as of retail dealers.

In 1853 the society began the publication of Intelligensblad för Svenska bokhandeln, in fortnightly issues, which from 1863 was continued weekly under the name of Svenska bokhandelstidningen. It is primarily a weekly bibliography of Swedish books with advertisements, but has also been the recipient of some valuable contributions to pure bibliography, chief among which is "Ur en antecknares samlingar" ("From the collections of an annotator"), by the late chief librarian of the Royal Library at Stockholm, G. E. Klemming. From 1855–59, and 1861 to date, the society has published yearly catalogues of Swedish literature. But the monumental work of Swedish bibliography is the work of an individual member of the society, Hjalmar Linnström, whose Svenskt Boklexikon, 1830–65, stands unrivalled for accuracy and completeness. It has been continued by Carl Broberg, at the instance of a guarantee association, founded for this purpose among the members of the society, in two ten-yearly volumes, 1866–75 and 1876–85. This supplement is also admirable and useful, but it does not reach the high standard of the original; it has, however, the advantage of a subject-index, while Linnström's Boklexikon is only alphabetical in arrangement.

In 1853 the Swedish booksellers held their first general meeting in Stockholm; a second meeting was held in 1859; the third was in 1870, and the fourth—and so far the last—in 1881. In 1856 the first Scandinavian meeting was held in Copenhagen, the second was in Stockholm in 1866, the third in Christiania in 1873, and the fourth in Copenhagen in 1884. The Swedish meetings dealt chiefly with "internal affairs," but the Scandinavian conferences took up such questions as "mutual Scandinavian copyright," "protection against unauthorized translations from one Scandinavian language to another," etc.

The history of the society, written by Dr. Joseph Seligmann, its president since 1890, is followed by lists of the members and of the agents, with brief biographical data. The most valuable contribution to the jubilee publication of the society, however, is a sketch, entitled "Notes on the oldest book trade in Sweden," by Dr. Henrik Schück, professor of literary history at the University of Lund. Professor Schück, author of the "Svensk literaturhistoria," which contains the first account, from original sources, of the literature of Sweden in the Middle Ages, was above all others fitted to write the history of the book trade in that country. The sketch goes no further back than 1600, but it contains much information hitherto unknown, and is written in the exact, frank, and popular manner that makes the writer's greater work so exceedingly interesting. Professor Schück gives first a short account of the trade in manuscripts throughout Europe in the Middle Ages, and tells what he knows of the books then sold in Sweden, his information being derived from notes made in the books themselves, as found in Swedish libraries. He describes the increase of interest in reading and the real beginning of bookselling proper at the time of the Reformation, which developed until, at the beginning of the seventeenth century, the trade began to have an independent organization of its own. The libraries founded in the monasteries and the private book collections of the day are touched upon. The selling of books as a trade was unknown in Sweden until the introduction of the printing-press in 1483, and the first books were printed by the order of a bishop or of the government. Some books were also printed at the risk of the printers, and sold by them and by pedlers. The first Swede known to have had a book-store is the printer Paulus Grijs, of Upsala, where he worked from 1510–1519. With the Reformation came also government censorship, under which Gustaf Vasa and his sons exerted a burdensome authority over local booksellers. The government also took up publishing, in a measure, and issued not only official publications, but polemical tracts against the Danes; the "Confessio fidei" of 1594, and other similar works. Authors also often published their own productions, this being the case with most of the religious and educational writers. Professor Schück specially mentions one littérateur of the time, Petrus Johannis Gothus, who lived in Rostock, Germany, and was the translator and publisher of some fifty theological works, all of which were printed in Rostock by different printers, and brought to Sweden by itinerant booksellers. The first real publisher, who was not also a printer, was Herman Sulken, probably a German, and also the first dealer who had a store. He seems to have begun as a pedler; but from 1599 he had a store in Stockholm, and from that year to 1611 he issued fourteen works. In 1616 the first bookseller settled in the old university town of Upsala; this was Ericus Petri Stabyensis, but he was only a retail dealer. The first publisher of Upsala was Hans Thils, 1618 – 1622.

THE PROFIT GOES TO THE PUBLIC.

At the Annual Dinner of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, which took place in London on April 14, some remarks were made in the Lord Mayor's toast to "The Trade" and the reply to it by Mr. Murray, that seem to meet American as well as English conditions at the moment. The Mayor had had forty years' experience as a stationer and paper-maker, and had in consequence been closely associated with publishers and booksellers. The booksellers and publishers of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries might have been able to make their calling profitable, but the days when such a state of things was possible seemed rapidly passing away all over the country. Into whatever town one entered the old bookseller was fast becoming an extinct species. Look up and down England and they could almost count upon the fingers of their hands the names of the old-fashioned bona-fide booksellers. When he was young the booksellers and publishers used to demand large sums as premiums to teach young men their business; now as far as any literary knowledge was concerned it seemed likely that some classes of books would soon be sold by weight. What was the cause of that disastrous state of things? He affirmed, without hesitation, that it was the ruinously large discount demanded from publishers and booksellers. How could any trade, how could any industry, subsist when all the profits were practically given to the public? They must know better than he could tell them that such was the case in the bookselling trade. The publishers must necessarily feel it as well as the retail bookseller, but the present company, including as it did so many honorable and well-known men who were at the head of the publishing trade in London, would, he firmly believed, make a decided stand against that wholesale discount system which must be the ruin of almost any trade. But, in spite of drawbacks such as those, the demand for books now was as great or even greater than ever it had been. The spread of education carried them into all classes of the community. It only remained to put matters on a fairer and more satisfactory footing for those, who were most deeply concerned in the question, and then prosperity would be assured.

Mr. Murray in responding said that as regarded the bookselling branch of the trade, he spoke not only as a publisher but as a most ardent buyer of books, and he said that those who knew booksellers knew they were a class of extraordinary ability. Booksellers had their grievances, and these grievances came to them indirectly and directly. He knew there were difficulties, and sometimes that they made mistakes. The business was such that no one could gauge its depths and measure its breadths. But when mistakes were made let the booksellers come and tell them to publishers. He hoped publishers and booksellers had the common-sense to discuss the question in a friendly way, and if there was a solution of the difficulty they could arrive at it between themselves, without calling the public in. He would like to say a few words on the state of trade. They were passing through a time of unexampled depression. He had some records of the terrible years of 1826 and 1827 which broke down Sir Walter Scott, and he believed they were passing through equally bad seasons. Big fortunes were not made by selling books now. What did the public do in bad times? First of all they gave up the charities; then they gave up champagne, or at least giving it to others, and then they gave up bookbuying. They did not give up book-reading, but they borrowed or came to the publisher to give them a copy. Then let them look at the class of literature which passes away from the railway stalls. He asked them if that was the class of literature they wished their fellow-countrymen to indulge in, and he said no. There was another thing which he thought at present exercised a detrimental influence. He touched on it with tenderness, but he held strong views, and that was he did not think free libraries were an unmitigated benefit. At great public expense they were enabling people to read, but if they looked at the returns and saw the enormous proportion of light literaature which was read, and that in many libraries they even had to blot out the betting news in the daily papers, he thought they might gauge the misuse of the expensive toy which they had given to the people before they were fit for it. Let them have libraries for reference, for people to study who wanted to study, but let them exclude the light ephemeral literature, and see at least if it would live five years before placing it in the libraries of which he spoke. There was another difficulty which they had to face, which was a problem he could do no more than touch on, as it was the problem that concerned the evanescent life of a book. A few years ago a book took the town by storm, and they could count on a sale for some time, but now they couldn't. Thus, the old methods were beginning to fail and they must find new methods. They had got into a craze of cheapness which was detrimental. They knew that many trades were being taught that the only hope was in Parliament, but he trusted they would never put their trust in that. They must do for themselves, and he was glad to see there were a few favorable symptoms arising. People were taking up studies for their own amusement, and taking to read better books. Books were also better printed than before, and in connection with that he mentioned the late Mr. Clark. And, above all, he thought he saw a greater tendency amongst people to possess books. They could all do something in that way, and they should all use their influence to get people to read good literature. They could all try to guide a man straight to reading which would not only do good to the trade, but to the reader.

WAITING FOR THE GOOD MARKET THAT IS COMING.

"I HAVE three novels all ready for publication, but I shall not bring out any of them until next fall, and perhaps not then," observed a successful writer of fiction yesterday to a friend who asked him when he intended to publish another book. "The fact is," continued the writer, "that the book trade of this country is just now in a worse condition than it has ever been since I began to write, a score of years ago, and, as I am something of a business man as well as a novelist, I have come to the conclusion to do what any other business man would do—simply wait for a favorable market before offering the public any more of my wares. The trade has been ruined by the failure of so many of the large houses which made a specialty of publishing cheap paper-covered fiction. These failures have thrown upon the market within the past fourteen months more than eight million volumes in both paper and cloth, which have been sold for less than the cost of manufacture, and have been distributed about the country through various channels outside of the regular book trade. Weekly newspapers have used them as premiums for new subscribers, and dry-goods dealers have either sold them for very low prices or else given them away to their patrons as extra inducements for custom. The result of all this is that a large number of unthinking people, who never read anything in their lives before, have bought these cheap novels because they were cheap, taken them home to their families, and in this way unknowingly spread a taste for reading which may have most desirable and far-reaching results in the near future. I am thankful to say, however, that nearly all of these low-priced volumes have been disposed of, and when the trade springs up again it will be on a much healthier basis, and because of the numerous failures the competition will not be nearly as sharp as it was before. In the meantime I work just as hard as ever, but I do not publish. I regard the manuscript thus laid aside as much capital invested, and I am positive that my reputation will not suffer because I've been silent for two or three years."

AUTHORS' BREAKFAST AT SALEM, MASS.

ON Saturday, May 5, there was a reception and May breakfast tendered to the Authors' Guild of America by the Thought and Work Club of Salem. Governor Greenhalge and Lieutenant-Governor Wolcott by their presence gave importance to the meeting. The attendance included many well-known literary people. There were some sixty guests, who, after being received by Mrs. Kate Tannatt Woods, president of the club, during the forenoon were driven about the city, visiting the many points of historical interest—the House of the Seven Gables, the Custom House, the birthplace of Hawthorne, the Witch House, the Courthouse, the Timothy Pickering House, and the public library.

The breakfast was served in the Cadet Armory, which was tastefully decorated and hung with quotations from standand authors. It lasted over an hour, and then Mrs. Kate Tannatt Woods introduced General James Grant Wilson, president of the Authors' Guild, who returned the thanks of his organization for courtesies extended.

Mayor James H. Turner very briefly and happily extended a welcome on behalf of the city of Salem, and was followered by Prof. E. S. Morse, who spoke for the Essex Institute and the Athenæum, saying that it was the science of one class to take the the truth and convert it into fiction, and the other class took fiction and converted it into truth. At this point the seal of the city was presented to the visiting authors on silk ribbon.

Speeches were made by several of the authors, including Titus Munson Coan, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Hezekiah Butterworth, J. T. Trowbridge, the Rev. Dr. Minot J. Savage, General Darling, George W. Townsend, Elizabeth Allen, Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton, the Rev. Newland Maynard, Mrs. Livermore, and Joel Chandler Harris.

Among those who were seated about the table were Governor and Mrs. Greenhalge, Lieutenant-Governor Roger Wolcott, the Rev. Newland Maynard, W. H. Beard, General Darling, of the Utica Historical Society, Mrs. Craven Betts, M. P. Gilman of The Literary World, Julia A. Eastman of Wellesley College, Louise Chandler Moulton, George W. Townsend, the Rev. Dr. E. E. Hale, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Joel Chandler Harris, Charles F. Adams, Sophia Eastman, J. T. Trowbridge, Frank L. Stanton, James Jeffrey Roche, William Lee, Robert Grant, and W. P. Reed of The Atlanta Constitution.

Over eight hundred persons were present at the breakfast. In the evening the visiting authors were entertained by Mrs. Grace A. Oliver.

CHARLES L. WEBSTER & CO.'S AFFAIRS.

BAINBRIDGE COLBY, assignee of Charles L. Webster & Co., has made the following statement:

The liabilities of the firm will not exceed $80,000. The largest claim against the company is one for $25,000. There is no truth whatever in the report that Mrs. U. S. Grant has a large sum of money due her on the Grant "Memoirs." Her claim will not exceed a few hundred dollars. I am convinced there is only one way to realize on the assets of the Webster Company, and that is to sell them in the usual course of business. I still have hopes that some plan may be perfected which will make it possible to sell the stock which is on hand without resorting to such a costly alternative as an assignee's sale.

Mr. Clemens feels keenly the condition in which his affairs are involved, and whatever the result of the plan which he has adopted for the working up of the assets and the continuation of contracts, I do not think that he will consider himself relieved of the moral obligation to repay his creditors.

THE NORTHWESTERN BOOKSELLERS AND NEWSDEALERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE third annual meeting of this active association will be held at Minneapolis, Minn., on July 10–12. They will issue a handbook for 1894, and desire members of the trade to support this by advertising patronage. It will contain the complete proceedings of last year and many other items of information interesting to the trade. All meetings looking to organization and systematic co-operation should be encouraged.

OBITUARY NOTES.

JOHN JAY.

JOHN JAY, one of the most notable men in America, died Saturday, May 5, in consequence of an accident and injuries received nearly four years ago. John Jay was born in 1817. In his boyhood and youth he gave signs of a brilliancy which later on shone among the brightest of the sons of New York City. John Jay was descended from a long line of eminent lawyers, and made his mark in that profession. He was a man of large public spirit, and always acting and writing to promote true liberty and political reform of every kind. Among his best-known pamphlets are: "The Public School the Portal to the Civil Service;" "The American Church and the American Slave Trade;" "The Great Conspiracy and England's Neutrality;" "America Free or America Slave;" "The Church and the Rebellion;" "On the Passage of the Constitutional Amendment Abolishing Slavery;" "Rome in America;" "The American Foreign Service;" "The Memories of the Past," and "The Dignity of the Abolition Cause as Compared with the Political Schemes of the Day."

LEOPOLD SACHER-MASOCH died at Lindheim, in the Duchy of Hesse, on Sunday, May 6. He was born in 1835. He wrote a bitterly sarcastic book on "Prussians of To-Day," and edited Auf der Höhe, a journal inimial to the imperial government of Germany. He also wrote a cycle of tales called "The Legacy of Cain," which aimed to relate the miseries of humanity, the scenes of which are laid in Galicia and Russia. He was an authoritative historian. He published "Der Aufstand in Ghent unter K. Karl V," in 1857; "Ungarns Untergang und Maria, von Oesterreich," in 1861; and "Kaunitz," a valuable picture of Austrian civilization in the eighteenth century. His "Jews and Russians," "Idyls," 1883; "Hadaska," 1884; "Sacha and Saschka," 1886, and "Siren," 1890, are deservedly popular. He had decided views on literary criticism, expressed in "Ueber den Werth der Kritik," published at Leipsic in 1873. The French government invested him with membership in the Legion of Honor.

MAJOR JOSEPH KIRKLAND, the author of "Zury, the Meanest Man in Spring County," "The MacVeys," "The Captain of Company K," etc., died in Chicago on April 29 of heart disease. Major Kirkland was born at Geneva, N. Y., in 1830, and came of a family noted for scholars, teachers, and authors. He was a lawyer by profession, but devoted most of his time to writing. He served through the war and has used his experiences happily in his books.

MRS. FANNY BARROW ("Aunt Fanny") died at her home, New York City, on May 7. She was seventy-seven years old. Her most successful children's books were "Six Nightcaps," "Six Popguns," and "Aunt Fanny's Story-Books." She also wrote "Four Little Hearts," "Life Among the Children," and "Take Heed." She was the author of a novel, "The Wife's Stratagem," and a popular book, "The Letter G," was likewise from her pen.

PERSONAL NOTES.

SAMUEL L. CLEMENS (Mark Twain) sailed for Europe Wednesday, May 9, on the New York.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

PROF. SLOAN, of Princeton, who has long been collecting material for an exhaustive life of Napoleon, has about finished writing it. The Century is to publish it serially.

"THE GOLDEN HOUSE" is the attractive title of the novel which Mr. Charles Dudley Warner has written for serial publication in Harper's Magazine during the last half of the year.

Harper's Bazar begins this week an interesting discussion pro and con on the Woman Suffrage question. It will be conducted by Miss Helen Barrett Montgomery, Mrs. C. A. Rankel, Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Miss Jeanette Gilder, and Mrs. Kate Upson Clark, who will contribute articles which will appear during the present month.

THE May Educational Review contains articles on "The Cost of Undergraduate Instruction," by President John M. Coulter; "Truants and Incorrigibles," by Superintendent Edwin P. Seaver; "Departmental Teaching in Grammar Schools," by Superintendent Frank A. Fitzpatrick; the first paper on "History in Secondary Education," by Principal Ray Greene Huling; "Contemporary Educational Thought in Germany," by Dr. Wilhelm Rein; "Woman's Education in the South," by Mary V. Woodward, and a discussion of the Report of the Committee of Ten, by Col. Francis W. Parker.

THE Canadian Bookseller for April contained some interesting statistics. During 1893 the total number of copyrights registered throughout the Dominion was 449, of which only ten were novels. The total value of books, etc., imported during the year was $890,000 (£178,000), the United States contributing $476,000, as compared with $327,000 from Great Britain. English authors will be more interested to learn that the imports of copyright books, on which they are supposed to receive a royalty of 12½ per cent., ad valorem, amounted to only $13,000 (£2600). Under the new tariff it is proposed to abolish the collection of this royalty, and to impose a uniform duty on all books (other than music, maps, and prints) of six cents per pound avoirdupois.

"IF the Devil Came to Chicago" is a sharply satirical reply to W. T. Stead's recent attack upon the institutions and morals of that city. It is written by Austyn Granville, a cousin of Rider Haggard and the author of "The Fallen Race."

A CORRESPONDENT calls attention to the lack of consideration for their readers on the part of publishers in issuing books full of important information without indexes. The case specially cited is Bandelier's "Gilded Man," which by merit of its contents might be placed among works of reference by the addition of a good index.

MEYER BROS. CO. announce the early publication in the Collection Lemerre of "Henriette," by F. Coppée; and "Demi-Vierges," by Marcel Prévost, the novel of the hour in Paris. An illustrated edition of "Lettres de Femmes," with fifty original designs by Gerbault, the well-known artist of the Vie Parisienne, will also be ready shortly.

THE AMERICAN ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION has just issued a special limited cloth-bound edition of "Progressive Taxation in Theory and Practice," by Prof. Edwin R. A. Seligman, of Columbia College, a work which constitutes the January and March numbers of publications of the society and offers a complete discussion of its important subjects.

MR. AXEL JOSEPHSON, of the State Library, Albany, is now engaged upon a translation into Swedish of John Jacob Astor's book, "A Journey in the Other World." His enterprise has the endorsement of Mr. Astor's publishers, and when the Swedish version is ready for the printer the book will be issued in Stockholm with the original illustrations.

A VERY attractive volume by the late Phillips Brooks will be published in the coming autumn by E. P. Dutton & Co. It is called "Essays and Addresses," and will take its place as pure literature in distinction from his theological writings previously published. G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS announce the "Philosophical Remains of the Late Prof. George Croon Robertson," edited by his old friend, Prof. Bain, of Aberdeen, who has written a memoir of the author. Prof. Robertson's narrative of his connection with John Stuart Mill and the Woman's Suffrage movement is based principally on letters written to him by Mill.

DICK & FITZGERALD have just published "Hyrum: The House of Wisdom, or, Solomon's house," by A. Tylor, being the secret ritual of a learned society devoted to the cultivation and advancement of experimental and occult philosophy and the sciences. The story is told in symbolic cypher. They have also ready an edition of "Roberts' Ritual of the Knights of Pythias," revised.

THE CENTURY CO. will publish during the month a "Life of Roger Williams, the Pioneer of Religious Liberty," by Oscar S. Straus, the author of "The Republican Form of Government in the United States;" and Rudyard Kipling's "Jungle Book," a collection of stories of animal life which have appeared in St. Nicholas and elsewhere during the past year, and are sure of an enthusiastic welcome.

REV. S. R. CROCKETT, the Scotch minister and author, whose book, "The Stickit Minister," has made him known so widely, has received from Robert Louis Stevenson a poem in four stanzas as a contribution to the new large illustrated edition of Mr. Crockett's story which is being made ready. This edition will have head and tail pieces, and larger illustrations by Joseph Pennell and others, and will be published in the autumn.

A SECOND edition is in preparation of the first volume of Funk & Wagnalls' "Standard Dictionary of the English Language," the first having been exhausted soon after it was published. Hinton—the final volume in the American Reformers series, a treasury of historical, social and religious data.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY, Los Angeles, Cal., would be glad to receive regularly for distribution publishers' lists, special and general, catalogues, announcements, etc. They have recently placed holders in the corridors of the City Hall, leading to the library, which contain all such material as they have received. But the stock on hand does not meet the demand. They specially solicit educational, religious, scientific, and literary announcements. Publishers should address Miss Tessa L. Kelso, Librarian, Los Angeles, Cal.

THE two volumes on "Yachting," in the Badminton Library, will be published in the course of next month by Little, Brown & Co. Among the contributors are: the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, the Earl of Onslow, Lord Brassey, Sir Edward Sullivan, Sir George Leach, the Rev. G. L. Blake, and Mr. E. F. Knight. The illustrations will be from original drawings by Mr. R. T. Pritchett, and from photographs. A volume on "Archery," by Mr. C. J. Longman and Col. H. Walrond, will follow in July.

IN the forthcoming "Chronological Outlines of American Literature," which has been prepared by Selden S. Whitcomb, and edited, with an introduction, by Brander Matthews, a special study has been made of colonial literature, in the hope of interesting common school teachers of United States history in the literary side of our early national life. "Even the titles," says the author, "are somewhat illuminative; for many teachers have no clear ideas in regard even to what books were written, printed, and read in this country prior to Bryant."

MR. BANGS, the auctioneer, says that although there have been many book auctions recently, none of them has been owing to the hard times. No book collectors have been so pinched by the stringency in the money market that they have felt obliged to sell out their libraries. All that have been sold at Mr. Bangs' auction-rooms have been sold to close estates, and would have been brought under the hammer even in the best of times. For the books that have been sold, good prices have been given, all of which goes to show that, while books may be luxuries to some people, they are necessaries to others; and people will have necessaries even in hard times.

J. J. LITTLE, receiver of the Worthington Co., submitted to Mr. Anthony Comstock some books which he was told Mr. Comstock had restrained Mr. Worthington from selling some ten years back, and submitted to the court the question whether he had any right to sell as assets of the company books that had been put under Mr. Comstock's ban. In looking over these forbidden books, Mr. Comstock for the first time glanced into the pages of "Tom Jones," and is shocked to think that this book has been sold for one hundred and forty-five years. In future he will do his best to check its sale. Gibbon, Thackery, and Coleridge held different opinions about "Tom Jones," but they are only immortal critics and—had read the book.

THE "Altar-Book," containing the communion service of the Episcopal Church, with collects, epistles, and gospels, announced some time ago to be published by Mr. D. B. Updike, of Boston, is almost ready for the press. The borders and initials for it are designed by Mr. Bertram Goodhue, of Boston. Seven plates, by an English artist, illustrative of the festivals of the church and of the holy communion, will further ornament the book. Musical notation for the plain-song will be introduced in the decorative manner common in old Italian office-books. Mr. Charles Sherborn, the well-known English engraver of ex-libris, is making for it two colophons of semi-heraldic and ecclesiastical character. So, while the volume will be of practical use, it promises to be a not unworthy descendant of the office-books of the older days. Many copies of it have already been taken up.

FOREIGN NOTES.

AN important work by Hans Sachs, a volume containing fourteen hitherto unknown master-songs, has been accidentally found in a library at Nuremberg.

ASHER & Co. will have ready for publication in a few weeks a new work by M. Terrien de Lacouperie, entitled "Western Origin of the Early Chinese Civilization, from 2300 B.C to 220 A.D."

IT is proposed to erect a bust over the grave of the German poet, G. A. Burger, at Göttingen, on June 8, the centenary of his birth. Contributions may be sent to Diebrich's book-store at Göttingen.

ANDR.-FRED. HÖST & SON, Copenhagen, have just ready "Œuvres Ophtalmologiques," by Thomas Young, translated and annotated by M. Tscherning, a work published at the expense of the Fondation Carlsberg.

BESIDES the "history" of Egypt, upon which Prof. Flinders Petrie is engaged, he is also writing a series of folk-tales of the Egyptians, the first volume of which will appear in July, accompanied with illustrations by Mr. Tristram Ellis.

AN Australian confectioner has hit upon the idea of printing the news of the day upon a thin paste of dough, using chocolate instead of ink. He delivers these cakes to his customers, who first read them and then eat them with their coffee.

THE 350th anniversary of the foundation of the Leipzig Bookbinders' Association (which dates from 1544) occurs this year. It is intended to hold an exhibition in the city, in commemoration of the event, which will open in August next.

BERTILLON, the famous French expert in identifying criminals, is at work on the preparation of an illustrated dictionary of "Anarchists of Paris and the Provinces," arranged alphabetically, and also according to physiognomic types.

DAUDET'S new book, "Memories of a Peasant," is his only by right of translation. In it he presents a version of a long poem by a provincial writer, Baptiste Bonnet, who was a laborer, and was at twenty years of age unable to read or write, or even to speak French.

A WORK dealing with Christianity and socialism, called "Vox Clamantium," is to be published by A. D. Innes & Co., London; Hall Caine, S. R. Crockett, Richard Le Gallienne, Lewis Morris, Alfred Russell Wallace, Tom Mann, and Dean Stubbs are among the contributors.

THE annual report of the trustees of Shakespeare's birthplace shows that there were 18,000 paid admissions in 1893—materially fewer than in 1892. The falling off is ascribed to the depression in America and to the Chicago exhibition. The report shows an adverse balance of of £697.

THE large body of literature attributed to Paracelsus will be included in unabridged form, and in English, in two volumes, to be brought out in London. They will bear the title "The Hermetic and Alchemical Writings of Paracelsus." The text from which the translation has been made is that of the Geneva folio of 1658 in Latin.

THE craze for making lists of "popular books" has reached Norway. Kringsjaa publishes a list of twenty-five received from readers and correspondents. It appears that the Danish "Peer Gynt" is the most popular; next comes "Familjen paa Gilje" and the Bible. Next comes Ibsen, Lie, and Bjornson. Charles Dickens is the most popular among the foreign authors.

IN England the sale of Hardy's "Tess of the d'Urbervilles" has reached 23,000 copies. Other works of fiction of large English sale are "The Heavenly Twins" and "Dodo." Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. report that Stanley Weyman's "Gentleman of France" has gone to its twelfth thousand; that Haggard's "Montezuma's Daughter" has gone to its twenty-fifth, and Conan Doyle's "The Refugees" to its twenty-second.

THE Gounod family has decided to publish a memorial volume, which will consist of the fragmentary manuscripts left by the composer, some of them being of an autobiographical nature, and of numerous letters to and from him. Gounod's son Jean, the artist, and his son-in-law, Baron de Lassus Saint-Geniès, are aiding Mme. Gounod in collecting the materials and preparing the volume for the press. But it is not expected that it will appear for some time to come.

THE senior member of the firm of R. & H. Clark, of Edinburgh, said not long ago, that just after Tennyson's death they kept for three weeks twenty-six printing-machines turning out the Laureate's works. There was an unprecedented demand for them, but they were out of print for only two hours. Mr. Clark also said that for the past thirty years the firm has had thirty hands uninterruptedly engaged in producing Walter Scott's works. This would appear to prove that readers have not outgrown Scott at least.

"Summer Reading," 1894.

To RETAIL DEALERS:

The SUMMER CATALOGUE, issued for sixteen years, has been found so useful and profitable by enterprising dealers, that it has become a regular feature of the trade. The seventeenth issue, with an entirely new cover, in a special pamphlet adapted for imprint circulation all through the summer, will be published in connection with THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY about the first of June.

The imprint editions will contain, in addition to a catalogue of guide-books and light literature for summer reading, an entirely new selection of reading-matter both of a practical and entertaining character, chiefly intended for the use and amusement of tourists, pleasure-seekers, and visitors of summer resorts.

Booksellers should remember that, while summer is usually a dull time, the sales of light literature, etc., can be pushed to make a successful business even in this season. The classes who travel are of course those who have money to spend, even in dull times, and the summer is the time when very many bookbuyers do the greater part of their reading. Booksellers at or near summer resorts should especially avail themselves of this publication, while city dealers should remember that it will also be useful to tempt stay-at-homes to make investments, or to follow up customers otherwise out of reach.

D. APPLETON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

A Daughter of To-Day.

By Mrs. EVERARD COTES (Sara Jeannette Duncan), author of "A Social Departure," "An American Girl in London," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Few literary débutantes have met with the success obtained by Sara Jeannette Duncan's first book, "A Social Departure." Her succeeding books showed the same powers of quick observation and graphic description, the same ability to identify and portray types. Meantime the author has greatly enlarged her range of experience and knowledge of the world. A true cosmopolite, London, Paris, and Calcutta have become familiar to her, as well as New York and Montreal. The title of her new book indicates an immediately attractive theme, and the author's vigorous treatment of it has given us a book distinguished not only by acute study of character, command of local color, and dramatic force, but also by contemporaneous interest. This novel is Mrs. Cotes' most advanced and most important literary work.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

A SOCIAL DEPARTURE: How Orthodocia and I Went Round the World by Ourselves. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.75.

AN AMERICAN GIRL IN LONDON. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

THE SIMPLE ADVENTURES OF A MEMSAHIB. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Mary Fenwick's Daughter.

By BEATRICE WHITBY, author of "The Awakening of Mary Fenwick," "Part of the Property," etc. No. 143, Town and Country Library. 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

PRESS COMMENTS ON "THE AWAKENING OF MARY FENWICK."

"Miss Whitby is far above the average novelist. . . . This story is original without seeming ingenious, and powerful without being overdrawn."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

"An admirable portrayal of the development of human character under novel experiences."—Boston Commonwealth.

NEW EDITION OF

Prompt Aid to the Injured.

Designed for Military and Civil Use. By ALVAH H. DOTY, M.D., Major and Surgeon, Ninth Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., etc. With numerous illustrations. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

This book has been enlarged by the addition of a chapter on Hygiene, and the substitution of the United States Ambulance Corps Drill for the original chapter on Transportation of the Wounded. As it now stands it is without doubt the best work of its kind ever published, and in addition to its value for popular use, is especially adapted to the needs of the Ambulance Corps of the National Guards of the United States.

WILL PUBLISH MAY 26, OR SOON THEREAFTER:

CLAUDIA.

A Novel. By FRANCES COURTENAY BAYLOR, author of "Juan and Juanita," etc. 16mo, $1.25.

Miss Baylor includes in this inviting book a charming account of a Virginia household of the excellent old-fashioned type—cultivated, courteous, hospitable. Of course a love-story also is included, of which the plot must not be hinted, but the novel bids fair to be one of the most popular of this season's books.

HIS VANISHED STAR.

By CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK, author of "The Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountains," etc. 16mo, $1.25.

This is one of the most characteristic stories "Charles Egbert Craddock" has yet written, and displays as ever that curiously intimate knowledge of the scenery of east Tennessee and of the original, interesting people who live there.

TWO STRINGS TO HIS BOW.

By WALTER MITCHELL. 16mo, $1.25.

This is a capital story for summer reading, with a skilful plot, plenty of dramatic situation and incident, characters in whom the reader cannot fail to find a varied interest, and written in an attractive and very readable style.

MY SUMMER IN A MORMON VILLAGE.

By FLORENCE A. MERRIAM, author of "Birds Through an Opera-Glass." With a frontispiece. 16mo, $1.00.

Miss Merriam spent the summer of 1893 in the Salt Lake Basin, and found great delight in the country, also found much to observe and record concerning the Mormons, their doctrines, and their life. Altogether it is a very interesting book.

NOTES IN SEASON.

CASSELL PUBLISHING CO. announce a paper edition of "The Heavenly Twins," limited to 50,000 copies.

CHARLES T. DILLINGHAM & CO. have now ready "Outrageous Fortune," Edgar Fawcett's latest novel. The scene is the rural part of our metropolis overlooking the Hudson, where reside some of the wealthiest families of New York. The story is brilliantly told, and the dialogue is bright and entertaining.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. have just ready "Doreen," the story of a singer, by Edna Lyall; "Ban and Arrière Ban," a tale of fugitive rhymes, by Andrew Lang; "Letters of Harriet, Countess of Granville, 1810–1845," edited by her son, Hon. F. Levison Gower, in two volumes; "Shakespeare Studies, and other essays," by Thomas Spencer Baynes; and a new and cheaper edition of "Lay Down Your Arms," the autobiography of Martha von Tilling, translated from the German of Bertha von Suttner, by T. Holmes.

MACMILLAN & CO. have just ready the second volume of their "Oxford Chaucer," edited by Rev. Walter W. Skeat, containing "Boethius" and "Troilus and Criseyde;" the remaining four volumes to follow at short intervals during the year. They also announce "Eight Hours for Work," a forcible presentation of that phase of the labor question, by John Rae, author of "Contemporary Socialism;" a second, cheaper edition of Kidd's "Social Evolution;" "Biological Lectures and Addresses," by the late Professor Marshall, of Owens College; "The Friendship of Nature," a chronicle of New England birds and flowers, by Mabel Osgood Wright; "The Celtic Twilight," by W. B. Yeats, one of the latest and most charming of Irish poets; and a revised and enlarged edition of the fascinating "Old Celtic Romances," translated from the Gaelic by P. W. Joyce. A novel by Laurence Alma Tadema, daughter of the famous painter, is in press; it is called "The Wings of Icarus," and is said to be a remarkable study of a woman's nature. There have been just published "A History of the Christian Church in the First Six Centuries," by Archdeacon Cheetham; "The Letters of Edward Fitzgerald," edited by W. Aldis Wright, in the Eversley Series; "Criticisms on Contemporary Thought and Thinkers," selected from the Spectator by Richard Holt Hutton; and Poushkin's "Prose Tales," in one volume.

D. APPLETON & CO. announce a new novel entitled "A Daughter of To-Day," by Mrs. Everard Cotes, formerly Miss Sara Jeannette Duncan, whose first book, "A Social Departure," with its brilliant successors, "An American Girl in London" and "The Adventures of a Memsahib," give promise of excellent work in this, her first important novel. A vivid account of mountaineering in India, by William Martin Conway, vice-president of the Alpine Club, is nearly ready, it is called "Climbing in the Himalayas," and is a minute record of one of the most important and thrilling geographical enterprises of the century, made in 1892. This house also announces "Cleopatra," a new historical romance by Dr. Georg Ebers; a new edition of Dr. Doty's "Prompt Aid to the Injured;" and in the Town and Country Library "Mary Fenwick's Daughter," by Beatrice Whitby, who reintroduces in this book some of the characters of her first novel. They have prepared, for the convenience of students, topical classed lists of their publications, and have issued a catalogue of the large selection of their books made for the World's Fair Model Library, now on permanent exhibition in the United States Bureau of Education, Washington. It is interesting to note that a second edition of Mr. John Jacob Astor's romance, "A Journey in Other Worlds," was called for within a week after publication.

A catalogue of over 3500 books, in the possession of Macmillan and Bowes, of Cambridge, England. It is arranged chronologically, and largely annotated throughout. The books printed up to 1700 are described with unusual fulness, by giving the title unabbreviated, by an exact collation with the sizes according to form and not to measurement, and by noting any apparent imperfections, even to the blank leaves at the beginning and end—so as to make the work bibliographically useful. Although the compiler states that the publication "is only a bookseller's catalogue, not a bibliography," it will generally be conceded to be a very valuable bibliography in the absence of anything more complete on the subject. An interesting collection of ornaments (head and tail pieces, etc.), alluded to in the text, precedes the catalogue.

An amplification of an essay written for Canadian readers by a Canadian long resident in the United States. That some change must come in the future in the alliance between Canada and the mother-country, he thinks inevitable. Whether it shall be political independence, annexation to the United States, or whether Canada shall make one in the talked-of scheme of British imperial federation, he thoroughly discusses. He sees no gain industrially for Canada in annexation to the United States, and rather favors her independence until the time comes for her to make one of the links of the confederation.

Dunn, G: Red cap and blue jacket: a story of the time of the French Revolution. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1894. c. 5+587 p. sq. S. cl., $1. [1567

A tragical episode, given as a prologue, that has for its scene a coral islet in the South Pacific is the key to the story. To tell it would be to spoil the interest in the plot. The main story has its scene first in Scotland towards the close of the eighteenth century, and afterward in France. The French Revolution colors the story throughout. The characters are vividly delineated, and there are many dramatic incidents on sea and land; a fight between an English and a French man-of-war, a shipwreck, the closing scenes of the French Revolution, and two romances.

Most of the matter in this little book has appeared in articles contributed to Demorest's Family Magazine and to the New York Evening Post. The papers are free from technical terms, and are delightfully chatty, carrying the reader through the whole season with the wild flowers as they make their appearance. They are intended for those who love flowers as flowers, and who like to read about them without getting into too close contact with technical terms and classifications.

The scene of the first story is a house-boat on the Yangtze River; it belongs to a rich Chinaman, who has aboard a party of friends among whom are two Englishmen; at night they are attacked by supposed pirates and robbed of everything valuable; the climax to the story with its explanations is quite ingenious. The other stories—all relating to Anglo-China life—are "A little Chinese party," "The general," "A shooting trip to the Grand Canal," and "J's last horror." Under "Office men" are described five types of Anglo-China officials.

No attempt has been made at a formal, systematic presentation of bacteriology. The subject-matter has been arranged entirely with reference to progressive work in the laboratory, and more especially corresponds with the work as carried on in the hygienic laboratory of the University of Michigan. The course covers a period of twelve weeks of daily afternoon work. Illustrations of the various bacteria and of their cultural characteristics have been expressly omitted, as the student is expected to sketch from observation the form of each organism and its peculiarities of growth in the colony, and in tube culture. Blank pages are provided for this purpose, and for additional notes.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 19, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

"THE TRADE LIST ANNUAL."

THE issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for May 3, 1873, first laid before the publishers and booksellers the scheme for preparing an annual volume of uniform trade lists and catalogues, alphabetically arranged, which should bring under one cover and keep in one place the many separate lists of all sizes and shapes, appearing at all times of the year that are always unavailable at the moment most needed for ready reference. Many of our leading booksellers immediately recognized the importance of such a compilation, and by many letters published in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during the following weeks, brought to the attention of publishers and fellow-booksellers the great advantage for all connected with the book trade of a fully representative collection of the kind proposed. "The Trade List Annual" for 1873 contained the lists of 144 publishers and embraced 1658 pages. The following year the work of getting the catalogues together was less burdensome, and year by year for twenty-one years the trade has shown a growing appreciation of this most indispensable of tools for an active retailer. In last year's issue the paging ran to 3628 pages, and still we have not accomplished the original aim of having every publisher put his books in this shape before the trade.

We are now at work for the twenty-second time laboring to convince all publishers that whether their imprint is on one book or one hundred books, it is to their interest to place that name in its proper position in the alphabet of American publishers. We have no words left with which to stir up trade-pride in our publishers and booksellers; and only a few remaining when it comes to describing for the twenty-second time the special details of make-up of "The Trade List Annual." As heretofore the publishers' catalogues will be preceded by the semi-annual index, by author, title and subject to the "Weekly Record of New Publications," which has appeared in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY from January to July, and the "Educational Catalogue" for 1894 will also be included. We would again call attention to the limit of time for receiving catalogues which expires on July 31, and once more urge upon our publishers to verify the count of their catalogues and make sure that 1750 are sent at the same time.

Owing to circumstances some publishers do not care to get up new catalogues year by year, but they should certainly care to send us a new edition of the old catalogue with or without new additions rather than slip from their proper place in the alphabet. We rely upon the courtesy of all publishers to let us know at the earliest moment what their decision in regard to "The Trade List Annual" is, and hope that no mistaken idea of economy will lead them to deprive the bookseller of his lawful expectation that when he buys "The Trade List Annual" he is investing in a catalogue of all the live books in the market classified under every live publisher.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

COMMUNICATION REGARDING "THE HEAVENLY TWINS."

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

WE desire to state that after we began the publication of "The Heavenly Twins," as recently announced in your paper, suit was brought against us in the United States Court for the Northern District of Illinois, to restrain us from infringing upon the copyright of the book granted to the Cassell Publishing Company in 1893, and that upon making investigation we found that the copyright obtained by them was valid and binding and we have therefore abandoned the publication of "The Heavenly Twins," and without waiting for a formal injunction we turned over all the plates and stock to the Cassell Publishing Company.

Respectfully yours,
LLOYD POCOCK & Co.

AN ASSIGNMENT NOT VALID UNLESS WITH AUTHORITY OF THE COURT.

GEORGE BARRIE has brought proceedings in the United States Circuit Court against the J. Dewing Publishing Company, of New York, to obtain possession of the two copyrighted books, entitled "Picturesque California" and "Illustrious Women." It was related that the plaintiff obtained judgment for $3217.79 against the defendant on which execution was issued, a sale by the sheriff following.

The plaintiff then became the purchaser of the defendant company's property, which included the books mentioned. Afterwards the plaintiff on another claim secured judgment for $7520.59 against the defendant; but there being no further property recovered nothing.

It was then recited that the authority of the court is required before assignment of the copyrighted books can be valid. An injunction was also asked for to prevent the books from being sold or transferred to any one else.

JUDGE GILDERSLEEVE DECIDES IN FAVOR OF DICK & FITZGERALD.

JUDGE GILDERSLEEVE, of the Superior Court, on Friday, May 11, handed down a decision refusing to grant Pugilist Charley Mitchell an injunction restraining Dick & Fitzgerald, publishers, of 18 Ann Street, from publishing a book called "Mitchell's Art of Boxing, by Prof. Charley Mitchell."

In his complaint the former "boxing champion of England" alleged that he was not the author of the book, or any part of it. Besides the injunction, Mitchell wanted a judgment for $1000 damages because he said a contract he had to supply material for a book had been cancelled on account of the publication by Dick & Fitzgerald. He also wanted all the profits the publishers had secured from the sale of the book.

The defendants entered the plea that they had bought the plates for the book from Street & Smith, of 25-31 Rose Street, and that they had been duly copyrighted by the latter.

Judge Gildersleeve denied the motion on the ground that the United States copyright protected Dick & Fitzgerald, and no injunction could be obtained against them until Mitchell, in the regular way, had the copyright set aside and declared invalid by the proper authorities.

FOREIGN LITERATURE IN JAPANESE GARB.

THE Japan Weekly Mail of March 17 has a long and curious article on "Foreign Literature in Japanese Garb." The task of presenting European and American books to Japanese readers is not one of translation merely, but of trans-nationalization, so to speak. Japanese views of life are so different from ours that a literal translation would often be incomprehensible except to Japanese who have travelled. Much ingenuity, sometimes perverse, sometimes praiseworthy, has been shown in overcoming this difficulty. Under the first head comes an old version of the "Merchant of Venice" (known in Japan as "Nin-niku saiban," or the human-flesh trial at law), in which Shylock is a palpable Aino, Portia a smirking music-girl, Jessica a Miyanoshita tea-house girl to the life, and so on. Ten years ago English novels were the first favorites; to-day Russian and German books have a larger sale, Tolstoi being the most admired of all western writers of fiction. Goethe's "Sorrows of Werther" is a great favorite, and his "Reinecke Fuchs" is also popular, although "the Japanese lose much of the exquisite humor of this satire in their sympathy with the woes of the maltreated wolf." Schiller's "Robbers" has not proved popular. Molière's "L'Avare" has given general pleasure, while of Zola's books only one has been translated. Disraeli's "Coningsby" did not succeed, nor did "Ivanhoe," partly owing to inadequate translation. Jerrold's "Curtain Lectures" seems to have struck a responsive chord. "Robinson Crusoe" also took well. Tennyson's "Enoch Arden," Stanley's "Darkest Africa," and Mrs. Burnett's "Little Lord Fauntleroy" are among recent successful productions.

BUSTS FOR THE CONGRESSIONAL LIBRARY.

GENERAL CASEY, chief of United States engineers, has finally selected from the great body of American sculptors J. Scott Hartley, National Academician; Herbert Adams, and Mr. Rukstbul to execute the nine colossal busts which will be cut in granite, and placed in the round architectural spaces on the main façade of the Congressional Library at Washington. Mr. Hartley's subjects are Washington Irving, Ralph Waldo Emerson, and Nathaniel Hawthorne. To Mr. Herbert Adams have been assigned the busts of Demosthenes, Dante, and Sir Walter Scott. Goethe, Macaulay, and Benjamin Franklin are to be modelled by Mr. Rukstbul. There has been a meeting of the three sculptors, as required by the chief of engineers, to confer in order to secure unity of treatment, and it was resolved that the nine busts, all supported by uniform pedestals, should be modelled in the nude.

PERSONAL NOTES.

PAUL V. HALLEY, formerly with Brentano's, is now with Robert L. Jaques, Lafayette, Indiana.

MR. JAMES BOWDEN, of the firm of Ward, Lock, Bowden & Co., is now making a short stay in America, and, we sincerely hope, combining some recreation with a successful business trip.

OBITUARY NOTES.

PROFESSOR HENRY MORLEY.

HENRY MORLEY, one of the most industrious and prolific literary workers of the age, died at Carisbrooke, Isle of Wight, on Monday, May 14. Prof. Morley was born in London, September 15, 1822, and was educated at the Moravian School, Neuwied-on-the-Rhine, and at King's College, London, of which he was afterwards made an honorary fellow. He practised medicine from 1844–48, established a school at Liscord, Liverpool, on a new method, but gave up all his other plans to devote himself wholly to literature, especially to making literature attractive and get-at-able to students. He became a journalist, and did much good work in the columns of Household Words and The Examiner.

From 1857 to 1865 he was English lecturer at King's College; then professor of English language and literature at University College, London, and then emeritus professor. He also served for many years as examiner in English language, literature, and history at University College, and professor of English language and literature at Queen's College, London. From 1882 to 1889 he was principal of University Hall, London. Edinburgh gave him the degree of LL.D. in 1879. He was not related, or not closely related to any of the other eminent men of his time who bear the same patronymic.

Among his best-known works, many of which first appeared as essays for his journalistic work, are "How to Make Home Unhealthy," "A Defence of Ignorance," "Life of Palissy," "Life of Jerome Cardan," "Life of Cornelius Agrippa," "Life of Clement Marot," "Gossip," "Memoirs of Bartholomew Fair," "Fairy Tales," "English Writers Before Chaucer," "From Chaucer to Dunbar," "Journal of a London Playgoer," etc. Professor Morley also edited Steele and Addison's Spectator, Florio's "Montaigne," Boswell's "Johnson," A Library of English Literature, five volumes; The Carisbrooke Library, Morley's Universal Library, sixty-three volumes; and Cassell's National Library.

JULES LEMONNYER.

THE death is announced in Paris of Jules Lemonnyer, a publisher well known to American book-collectors for his sumptuous reprints of the works illustrated by the vignettists of the eighteenth century in France.

He was born in 1840. Ten years ago, the works of La Fontaine, Dorat's "Les Baisers," Montesquieu's "Le Temple de Gnide," Laborde's "Chansons," and the entire series of illustrations by Boucher, Cochin, Fragonard, and others, engraved by artists as delicate as Eisen, were made accessible by him at prices which seemed fabulous, but were relatively moderate. He used, in many instances, the original plates resteeled, but the cost was enormous, the desire for eighteenth century vignettes had waned, and he lost a fortune. He relied, it is said, on American patronage, and this would not be accorded to editions of books, however beautiful, which were not original.

He undertook the magnificent "Edition Nationale" of the works of Victor Hugo, the publication of the first volume of which was celebrated by a festival famous in the annals of French literary festivals, and also compiled a useful "Bibliographie des Ouvrages Relatifs à l'Amour, aux Femmes et au Mariage."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Gentleman's Magazine for May contains an excellent article on "Dickens' Curios," from the pen of Percy Fitzgerald.

THE late Sidney Lanier's correspondence with a Northern friend will appear in The Atlantic during the summer. The letters are mentioned as being uncommonly entertaining.

F. MARION CRAWFORD'S story, "Love in Idleness," announced to appear in The Century during the summer, will be in part the story of the three Miss Miners who are alluded to in "Katharine Lauderdale."

THERE is an interesting article on "American Book-Plates," by Charles Dexter Allen, author of "American Book-Plates, a Guide to Their Study," in Book Reviews for May, which is published by Macmillan & Co.

McClure's Magazine for June will have in the department of "Human Documents" a series of portraits of Cardinal Gibbons, Lord Rosebery, and Richard Harding Davis; also a new story by Rudyard Kipling, a poem by Julian Ralph, and a most interesting contribution on Arctic exploration by Gen. A. W. Greely, who will specially describe the physical conditions which hinder the explorers.

IT is said that M. Zola's "Lourdes" has multiplied the circulation of the Gil Blas, in which it is appearing as a serial, by ten. So far the critics are all kind. There are over a hundred characters of all sorts in the tale, the leading motive of which is "the hankering of the public after a lie." The famous cures are, the novelist believes, either cases of nervous disorder or of wrong diagnosis.

THE June issue of Short Stories, published by The Current Literature Publishing Co., contains a story called "Narcissa, or, the road to Rome," by Mrs. Laura E. Richards, stories by W. L. Alden, Maurice Montegut, and Bret Harte, and a translation of Gerstacher's poetic story of Germelshausen, which tells of a quaint old German village, which was put under ban by an ancient pope but reappears to the eyes of man once in one hundred years.

The Bookman is to be published in America also, where it will doubtless be heartily welcomed. The American editor will be Mr. Hamilton W. Mabie, who will presumably work in conjunction with the founder of the English edition, Dr. Robertson Nicoll. The paper is always brimming over with information, and Dr. Nicoll is unrivalled in the ranks of English journalism, says Arthur Waugh, for the keenness and rapidity with which he scents the new thing. He is generally a good month ahead of any other editor.

PORTRAITS of Miss Beatrice Harraden, author of "Ships that Pass in the Night," and Jane Barlow, author of "Irish Idylls" and "Bogland Studies," are printed in The Critic of May 12. A biographical sketch of Miss Barlow fills a page of the same number; and on another page appears that part of a recent interview in The St. James' Gazette in which Mr. Rudyard Kipling described Americans as being "in the railway-station-waiting-room stage of civilization," and dwelt picturesquely on the pie-habit that has made dyspepsia endemic in New England and northern New York. Miss Edith M. Thomas prints in the same paper a poet's "Protest" against conferring the suffrage upon women.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

MEYER BROTHERS & Co. have just issued "Henriette," by François Coppée, in their charming Lemerre edition of French fiction.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. will have ready about June 1 Prof. Richard T. Ely's historical and critical treatise on "Modern Socialism and Social Reform."

"OUR WORD AND WORK FOR MISSIONS," by Dr. Henry W. Rugg, is issued by the Universalist Publishing Company. It was incorrectly credited in our last issue.

GINN & Co. will have ready shortly "The Inflections and Syntax of Malory's Morte D'Arthur," by Charles C. Baldwin, and the first volume of "Grimm's Fairy Tales," edited by Sara E. Wiltse.

THE translation of J. J. Astor's "A Journey in the Other World" is not in the hands of Mr. Aksel Josephson, of the State Library School, Albany, but is being done by Mr. Axsel Josephsson, correspondent in this country for a newspaper owned by Dagens Nyheter, of Stockholm.

CHARLES EITEL, New York, has imported "Le Memorial de Saint Arelade," by Pierre Dennis, published by Paul Ollendorff, Paris. The history and significance of the Boulangist movement in France are well covered by the author, who was the intimate friend of Boulanger.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have just issued "Concrete Geometry for Grammar Schools," by E. Hunt; "Educational and Industrial System of Drawing," by Langdon S. Thompson, and "History of the United States," by Allen C. Thomas, professor of history in Haverford College, Pa.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY held its sixty-ninth anniversary meeting on Wednesday, May 9, in the Presbyterian Church, Twenty-fourth Street and Madison Avenue, New York City. The report of the secretaries showed that 130 new permanent publications had been issued, 93 of them being in English.

HENRY ALTEMUS, Philadelphia, has in preparation and will publish early in June "The Care of Children," by Elizabeth Robinson Scovil, an associate editor of the Ladies' Home Journal and superintendent of the Newport Hospital. Her very helpful book is specially intended for young mothers.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY have just issued "Five-Minute Object Sermons to Children," preached before the Sunday morning sermon by Rev. Dr. Sylvanus Stall, while pastor of the Second English Lutheran Church at Baltimore. The author is an expert in the difficult art of interesting children in church services.

THE WHITING PAPER Co. are sending out a neat little advertisement in the form of a dainty booklet on "Card Courtesy," in which the social usages of "pasteboard politeness" are fully explained, and the right size and shape of card and type for every special use made clear by means of fac-simile reproductions of visiting cards.

ROBERTS BROTHERS have in press "The Wedding Garment," a tale of life to come, by Louis Pendleton; "The Dancing Faun," by Florence Farr, with title-page by Aubrey Beardsley; "A Child of the Age," a novel by Francis Adams; and "Poor Folk," by Fedor Dostoievsky, translated by Lena Milman, with a preface by George Moore.

THE CENTURY Co. are preparing a perfect treasury of delight for young and old in "The Jungle Book," by Rudyard Kipling, full of stories of wild life in Asia and of the fierce animals that disport themselves in the jungle. They will also issue shortly "Roger Williams, the Pioneer of Religious Liberty," by Oscar S. Strauss.

THE AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY has already sold 13,000 copies of "Beautiful Joe," the autobiography of a dog, somewhat in the style of "Black Beauty," the story of the trials and pleasures of a horse. The story was awarded the prize by the New England Humane Society, and its author, Miss Marshall Saunders, well deserved the distinction.

"THE ISSUES OF THE PRESS IN NEW YORK—1693-1783," by Charles R. Heldeburn, is about to be published by Dodd, Mead & Co. The descriptions will include all the books, pamphlets, broadsides, and newspapers, issued by Bradford, Zenger, Gaine, Rivington, and other New York printers prior to 1784, announced in the newspapers of that period, as well as those actually found.

THE annual dinner of the Authors' Club was held on May 10 at the "St. Denis," New York City. Frank R. Stockton presided. Joseph Jefferson made a specially happy and witty speech, John Burroughs, George W. Cable, Richard Henry Stoddard, Richard Watson Gilder, Edmund Clarence Stedman, W. D. Howells, Laurence Hutton, and Seth Low were also among the speakers.

THE first meeting of Irish citizens in the history of Boston, at which all of the business was transacted in the Irish language, was held in Alpha Hall on Monday, May 14, its object being to form an association to preserve songs and poems in the Irish language and any literature of value. A committee was appointed to arrange for permanent organization, and all present enrolled themselves for membership.

THE NEW YORK LIBRARY CLUB held its regular meeting on Thursday, May 10, in the library of Columbia College. The subject of discussion was "What Is Needed for an American Bibliography?" and R. R. Bowker gave an interesting and detailed account of the new American bibliography on which he is engaged, and which will be brought out by THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, probably not before 1900. A paper on "International Special Bibliographies" was read by Mr. Aksel G. S. Josephson.

THE large-paper edition of Mr. Norman Gale's "A June Romance," now going through the press at Rugby, will be limited to forty copies. For these Mr. Herbert Dicksee, the well-known etcher, has provided a likeness of the author. We have had the privilege of seeing a rough proof, and can state with pleasure that those who secure a copy will have a most faithful representation of the writer. In all probability Mr. George Over will sell a few of the etchings independently of the book.

PROF. HENRY A. BEERS, of Yale, whose occasional graceful magazine stories have made a favorable impression, will issue through Henry Holt & Co., in a few days, "A Suburban Pastoral, and other tales," dealing chiefly with modern American life in small towns. One of them, "Split Zephyr," tells of the plans of four college friends on receiving their diplomas, and of how far they carried them out. Two old English legends, in which Professor Beers has admirably reproduced the archaic spirit, conclude the volume.

THE new quarters of The Merriam Company, at 67 Fifth Avenue, are equipped with every modern convenience to hold and handle the extensive stock of books and facilitate the rapid and systematic conduct of the company's business. The need of larger quarters, caused by the growth of the company's business as well as by the determination to possess one of the most complete and extensive book establishments, has been fully satisfied, and the liberal outlay made shows a determination to keep right up in the front rank of the book trade.

BOUSSOD, VALADON & CO., New York, are sending out the first two volumes of the tenth issue (1894) of the "Figaro Salon," with French text by Charles Yriate, containing in the six numbers for the year over 100 illustrations, including sixty full-page plates, six double-page colored plates, and over forty text plates of the paintings and sculptures exhibited in both the Old Salon (Champs Elysées) and the New Salon (Champ de Mars). All these illustrations are photographed direct from the original, and executed by the Goupil process of typogravure, which is unexcelled.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. have just issued a very suggestive pamphlet entitled "Good Literature," divided into three parts: 1. The opinions of eminent men who favor the use of literature in schools; 2. The methods of using literature adopted by prominent educators; 3. A graded list of literary masterpieces. There is an interesting introduction to the whole, showing what the aim of the publishers has been in supplying good literature in a cheap form. There is given also an index of the seventy-six educators represented, and an index of the authors whose works are described.

THE Quill Club at its recent dinner at Clark's Restaurant, New York City, discussed "Periodical Literature." Rev. Dr. A. E. Dunning, editor of The Congregationalist, spoke on "Religious Weeklies," and Frank H. Scott, of The Century Co., spoke on "The Monthly Magazine." Mr. Scott spoke in an interesting way about the belief that magazines were run by cliques. He said this was not true, and to prove his assertion he explained that in The Century last year there appeared 396 articles by 324 different writers. A large part of these authors had never before written for the magazine.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS announce an important work entitled "The Blind as Seen Through Blind Eyes," in which Maurice de la Sizeranne gives, from the experience of Valentine Hauy, an account of the every-day life of a blind person, and also particulars as to the most recent changes and improvements in teaching the blind. The work has been translated from the second French edition by Dr. F. Park Lewis. They also issue "Common Sense Applied to Woman Suffrage," by Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi; "Joint Metallism," by Anson Phelps Stokes; and "The Ills of the South," by the Rev. Charles H. Otken, of Mississippi.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING CO. have in press "Wanted, a Copyist," a bright story of modern life, touching upon newspaper work and the relations of men and women in business; and, as the latest number of their popular Unknown Library, a "summer story" entitled "Chaperoned: a brief page from a summer romance," dealing with social life at a fashionable resort. They announce that, owing to repeated demands for a paper-covered edition of "The Heavenly Twins," they have decided to issue Sarah Grand's strong novel in their Sunshine Series of copyright novels. This paper-covered edition will be limited to 50,000 copies and the cloth edition will be continued as heretofore.

THE seventy-eighth annual meeting of the American Bible Society was held on Thursday, May 10, in the managers' room in the Bible House. According to the reports submitted the society is in a highly satisfactory condition, both financially and in its work of printing and distributing the Scriptures. In the direction of the translation and revision of the Scriptures much has been accomplished in the last year. The preparation of an edition of the Bible in ancient Armenian has been completed, and several portions of the Bible in the Siamese language have been revised. The Scriptures printed and purchased during the year have amounted to 1,559,666 volumes, of which 1,133,775 were printed on the presses in the Bible House. The volumes issued from the Bible House numbered 1,039,960; in foreign lands, 407,699.

STONE & KIMBALL, Chicago and Cambridge, have nearly ready "The Ebb Tide," a story of adventure in the South Seas, by Robert Louis Stevenson, printed at the University Press on antique, laid paper, with cover and title-page designed by T. B. Meteyard, another of those tasteful books by which this ambitious young firm is training the taste of bookbuyers. The first volumes of "The Complete Edition of the Writings of Edgar Allan Poe," to which we have several times referred, is now nearly ready. They will comprise "The Tales of the Grotesque and Arabesque." The large-paper edition, in ten volumes, limited to 250 numbered sets for America, will contain a series of eight illustrations to the tales by Mr. Aubrey Beardsley, a signed etching by Mr. Sterner—not included in the small-paper edition—proofs of all the pictures printed on India paper, and will, in truth, be a luxurious edition.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT CO. are also going to publish a novel with a purpose, written by the ever-popular Mrs. Forrester, under the title "The Light of Other Days," which may not be quite advanced enough for admirers of Sarah Grand and emancipated women clamoring for a vote, but will appeal to many who still take comfort in allegiance to Walter Scott and George Eliot. Other books in preparation are: "My Paris Note-Book," by the author of "An Englishman in Paris;" "An Initial Experience, and other stories," by Captain Charles King; and "The Manual of the Study of Handwriting and Documents," by Persifor Frazer, who gives special attention to the methods to be employed for the detection of fraud and falsification, whether by physical tests of the penmanship, the written characters, the paper, tape, or seal, or by chemical tests of these; of the differences between inks and the relative order of their application to the document.

JOSEPH KNIGHT COMPANY have in press a new work on Switzerland, by W. D. McCrackan, author of "The Rise of the Swiss Republic." It will be issued in two volumes, one entitled "Romance Switzerland," the other "Teutonic Switzerland," and will deal first with the French and Italian portions of the country, and then with the German-speaking cantons. It is somewhat in the nature of a series of individual sketches of history, scenery, and social conditions, in which are woven interesting narrative bits of history, legend, and biography. This house will shortly publish a unique little volume of collected verse on "Pipe and Pouch, the Smoker's Own Book of Poetry," compiled by Joseph Knight, and gathering all the best verse devoted to praise of "the weed," from Raleigh and Spenser to the present day. They will bring out early in the fall a volume of travel sketches, entitled "Little Journeys Abroad," by Mary Bowers Warren, who describes four years of life and travel in England, France, Germany, and other countries of Europe.

COPELAND & DAY will be the American agents for The Yellow Book, a new quarterly which has been eagerly expected by the reading world. In its outward form it exactly resembles a French novel, and has a yellow and black cover designed by Aubrey Beardsley, who is art-editor of the new enterprise, and has also several very eccentric illustrations in the text, facts which insure originality of outward detail in the pages of the new magazine. The literary editor is Mr. Henry Harland (Sidney Luska), in whom, though an American, the English publishers have put their trust. The separate numbers will consist of 320 pages of matter —fiction, poetry, and criticism—but will differ from all existing reviews in that the topics of the hour will be rigidly excluded, the idea being to make of The Yellow Book a volume which shall be as welcome to the book-shelves ten years hence as to-day. The illustrations, which will be numerous, will not be an accompaniment to the letter-press, but will be works of art of entirely distinct value, and will stand by themselves as separate contributions to the number. The whole thing is an entirely original idea, and as such deserves every encouragement and welcome.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. will publish on the 26th, or soon thereafter, several books of no little interest. Perhaps the one which will attract the most attention is Miss Murfree's "His Vanished Star," which has appeared in the Atlantic Monthly. At the same time will appear "Claudia," by Miss Frances Courtenay Baylor, which gives a vivid picture of the interior life of a Virginia household of high breeding, but little wealth; and "Two Strings to His Bow," by Rev. Walter Mitchell, admirably suited for summer reading, having a good plot, dramatic incident, varied characters, and an attractive style. A large-paper edition of the "Familiar Letters of Thoreau" will appear, edited by F. B. Sanborn. Miss Florence A. Merriam, author of "Birds in an Opera-Glass," has written a very pleasant little book, "My Summer in a Mormon Village," giving her observations during the summer of 1893 in the Salt Lake Basin, where, with Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller, she observed the scenery, birds, and most interesting of all, perhaps, the Mormons themselves. The sixth volume of Sargent's monumental work, "The Silva of North America," is just ready, and a new edition of Sweetser's Guide Books, New England, White Mountains, and Maritime Provinces; also the fourth volume of the "Journal of American Ethnology and Archæology," edited by Dr. J. Walter Fewkes, and containing an account of the Snake Dance at Walpi; and last, but not least, "The Christian Ministry, with Other Writings," a volume containing several papers of real value, by Rev. Theodore C. Pease, who had just entered upon the professorship of sacred rhetoric at Andover Theological Seminary, and delivered the inaugural address which forms the leading paper of this volume when he was taken ill and died.

FOREIGN NOTES.

REV. P. JANSZ has just completed a translation of the Old and New Testaments in Javanese for the British and Foreign Bible Society. He is over seventy years of age, has been forty-one years in Java, and is probably the best living Javanese scholar.

A NEW history of Germany is announced. It is the work of Dr. E. F. Henderson (an Englishman already known for his volume of "Select Historical Documents"), and it has been in process of construction for many years. The first volume will extend to the year 1272.

THE refusal of W. H. Smith & Son to circulate Mr. George Moore's new novel is causing a warm interest among authors and a lively discussion in the press. Mr. Faux, the head of Smith's library, has been visited by several interviewers, to whom he stated the reasons for the course he has adopted.

HACHETTE & CO., Paris (N. Y., Dyrsen & Pfeiffer), have just issued "Sydney Smith et la Renaissance des Idées Liberales en Angleterre au XIXeme Siècle" (Sydney Smith and the renaissance of liberal ideas in England in the 19th century), a publication significant of the recently awakened interest of the French in other nationalities.

ALLEN & CO., London, have published a neat little "Epitome of Yachting," in two volumes, by Baron T. de Wogan, a Frenchman. He has drawn largely from the recognized authorities—dear old Vanderdecken, who has never been equalled, Dixon Kempt, Knight, and even R. H. Dana. The advice he gives is sound, and beginners will learn much from his pages, which form a good introduction to larger works on the same subject.

THE thirty-eighth volume of Sidney Lee's "Dictionary of National Biography" (Macmillan) carries the great work on from Milman to More. General Monck, Simon of Montfort, Sir Thomas More, and Milton are among the longer articles, the last from the pen of Leslie Stephen, whose literary criticism is incidental and avoids a summing up. To Mr. Stephen's temperate hand fall also Lady Mary Wortley Montague and Hannah More; the sketch of Tom Moore is by another writer. The Rev. Jonathan Mitchel, a New England worthy, and Gen. Montgomery are the chief American names in this volume.

SOCIALISM AND . . . SOCIAL REFORM.

BY

PROF. RICHARD T. ELY, LL.D.,

Author of "The Labor Movement," "Problems of To-Day," "Taxation in American States and Cities," "Social Aspects of Chistianity," etc.

12mo, $1.50.

The initial chapters of this volume contain an historical and descriptive account of the progress of Socialism, and an exposition of the differences existing between the various schools. This is followed by an admirably fair exposition of the strength of Socialism, which is balanced by a critique of its weaknesses and a statement of the valid objections to the system. The last part of the volume is devoted to the discussion of "Practicable Social Reform," showing how far society can reasonably go in the direction of Socialism. Numerous appendices and an exhaustive Bibliography add to the value of the work. The author's views are presented in a clear, candid, and fearless manner, and furnish one of the best discussions of this subject.

Advance orders solicited.

"THE MOST DRAMATIC WRITER OF FICTION IN AMERICA."

Edgar Fawcett's Latest and Best Novel,

OUTRAGEOUS FORTUNE.

16mo, 432 pages, paper cover, price, 50 cents.

This is the latest copyright novel of one of the most popular novelists in America, and has been pronounced by a competent critic perhaps the strongest thing Mr. Fawcett ever did. This same critic writes of the novel as follows:

"The scene of Mr. Fawcett's novel is one of the uptown aristocratic Faubourgs overlooking the majestic Hudson. The author introduces a millionaire, whose education is not equal to his business success, and who suggests, here and there, one of three or four well-known money kings familiar to all New Yorkers.

The Heavenly Twins.

By SARAH GRAND.

In one large 12mo volume of nearly 700 pages.

Price, Paper Binding, 50 Cents.

Extra Cloth, Laid Paper, Price, $1.00.

"London critics declare that 'The Heavenly Twins' is the most popular book of the day, and on this side of the Atlantic every one is reading it. . . . It is a remarkable book, and confirms belief in the writer's opinion that for every one a special hour comes, when the soul is called to decide between life and death in life."—Public Ledger.

"Whether or not a pure woman marrying has a right to equal purity in the man she marries—this is the problem attempted by Sarah Grand in her heroine's behalf in 'The Heavenly Twins' It is an earnest book, showing its author's cultured mind on every page."—Table Talk.

"Mme. Grand is concerned simply to make earth more habitable and life better worth living—especially for women. . . . She does use plain language, and a good deal of it; but everybody knows that the offences which rouse her wrath are by no means products of her imagination."—Lippincott's Magazine.

"The best, strongest, most interesting and valuable novel that has been published for years. . . . Although it is written by such a powerful and unsparing hand, its delicacy and refinement will prevent any offence to fastidious minds. . . . We heartily recommend it to every reader in search of a fascinating and worthy novel."—Hartford Times.

By MARAH ELLIS RYAN, author of "Merze," "In Love's Domains," "Told in the Hills," "A Pagan of the Alleghanies," and "Squaw Elouise." 12mo. cloth, $1.00.

"A Flower of France," Marah Ellis Ryan's forthcoming novel, is a work of extreme and well-sustained interest. The old days of Spanish and French occupation of Louisiana are portrayed with the irresistible vigor distinctive of this author. Based on a foundation of tragedy and revolution a tender love-story is reared, characterized by a charming delicacy of touch and warmth of coloring, and saturated with the spirit of a romantic past.

IN PREPARATION:

THE RED HOUSE. By "THE DUCHESS."
In this, her latest work, the authoress has added fresh laurels to her crown. In strength of color, interest of plot, and insight into the intricacies of human nature, this novel surpasses all her former efforts.

A charming love-story of modern society. The difficulties of a struggling authoress, the many dramatic incidents of her career, and her final success and happiness are told with the delightful art of which this authoress is the mistress.

AGAINST ODDS. A Romance of the Midway Plaisance. By LAWRENCE L. LYNCH, author of "A Dead Man's Step," etc., etc.
A story of intense interest, full of startling surprises, the outcome of the plot remaining in uncertainty until the last page is reached. One of this well-known writer's strongest works.

MAGDALENA. From the Spanish of Ponslevi.
A dashing romance of spirited action treating of modern life in Madrid. A delightfully vivid and refreshing story.

Unconventional Journeys in All Parts of the World.

WITH the coming of "flowery June" Nature is in her brightest "holiday humor," and attired in her most seductive raiment, asks with Rosalind, only to be "woo'd."

How shall we approach her? In the old conventional ways that have so often led to disenchantment, or through new and cleverly-contrived methods of allurement?

The new too often presents intangible though strong enough barriers between ourselves and the unknown to permit of wide experimenting, and we go back again and again to the old, through sheer mental laziness and moral cowardice. Once, however, the charm and the thrill of a new experience have been felt, once our footsteps have strayed from the old beaten tracks of commonplace, we sigh for new worlds to conquer, and weep for the wasted hours of past summer holidays, when we drifted back to the old hotel in the woods, or in the mountains, or by the sea-shore.

In making our preparations for a summer rest, too little time is given to the consideration of the possibilities embraced within the time and money that are ours. One predominant thought possesses us—to get out of the "hurly-burly" of city life; but where to go and how to get there seem matters that are left altogether to the chance of the last moment.

So much may be accomplished nowadays in even the briefest holiday, that we have aimed to guide our readers to new fields of travel altogether out of the conventional way, by gathering together a list of works in which are recorded the experiences in all parts of the world of the daring pioneers in the realm of the new. We hope they may be an inspiration and a help to those discontented souls who would be unconventional if they knew how, as well as to those already fired with the spirit of adventure, but at a loss to know how to direct it. The list makes an amusing collection of volumes for reading through the hot summer months for the traveller or the stay-at-home; to the unfortunate for whom life holds no "summer holiday" they offer a cheerful philosophy and many fresh points of view; to the favorite of fortune they suggest all sorts of novel methods of travel in little-frequented paths.

Nothing could be more charming than the bicycle rides described. Mr. and Mrs. Pennell, the leaders in this delightful method of penetrating the secrets of country haunts, are the authors of a most attractive series of books devoted to their personal adventures. Together on their "wheel," they have year after year leisurely enjoyed the picturesque and secluded lanes of England and the out-of-the-way nooks of Continental Europe. The "wheel" is now a familiar figure in our own landscape, and singly or in pairs, it takes its way through the beautiful hills of Berkshire, over the mountain roads of Maine and Vermont, and through the leafy and verdant lanes of Pennsylvania, dotted here and there with old-fashioned inns of old English pattern, one vying with another in cordial host or hostess, and in substantial country fare. The "wheel," however, is not the only method of locomotion that has been resorted to in the new assaults upon nature. A "buggy" or a four-wheeled carriage is used for enchanting drives about the country, in a solitude of two, or with a congenial quartette of sympathetic friends. Long or short journeys may be made as the fancy dictates, and the day's programme may be as erratic as the most Bohemian-like disposition might suggest. William Black charmed our imagination long ago with "The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton," and recently with the "Strange Adventures of a House-Boat." These English experiences might easily find duplication in this country, and we wonder they are not oftener tried. Our own fields and lanes and old country towns, our rivers, lakes, and canals are quite as worthy of exploration as any of the famous localities of Europe, and it needs only a little enterprise to get a party together and to start on an investigating tour—if not on a bicycle or in a carriage, perhaps on horseback or on foot; or in a canal-boat, or a canoe, or in any other entirely original and independent way. Mind and body are refreshed beyond expression in such outings. The absence of restraint, the entire contrast with every-day surroundings, even the little privations endured are as strong factors in one's enjoyment as are the new scenes that each day refresh and beguile the weary eyes and brain. The "kodak" plays so large a part in "unconventional journeys" that we have included in our lists several recent works on photography for amateurs, and as tramping includes camping, the best books relating to camp-life and life in the woods have been added.

It is amusing and interesting to learn to what an extent the "weaker sex" have been the chief actors in these "unconventional journeys." There seems to have been no part of the world, however distant and apparently inaccessible, to which their enterprise or curiosity has not led them. Alone and unprotected they have scaled the Rocky Mountains, lingered in Hawaii, and viewed the little-known beauties of Alaska; sailed a thousand miles up the Nile in a dahabieh, and outraged conventional Japanese by careening through their streets in an unconventional jinrikisha; wheeled through Hungary on a bicycle, and hunted and ridden through Galicia in man's attire; yachts and canal-boats have been commanded by them, and where physical weakness hampered the daring spirit, one went abroad on a stretcher, and another in an ambulance. What women have done, women may do! There certainly seems to be no limit but their own sweet will, as to how or where they will take a summer rest.

To supplement the "unconventional journeys" is a list of "Books on Nature"—the best reading-matter, together with a novel, one could carry away on a summer jaunt. These books are from the devotees and disciples of Nature, men and women, who have successfully wooed her, and penetrated her secrets. The sky, the earth, the hills, the valleys, the trees, the flowers, the birds, and the butterflies have been their studies. The beauty and perfection of their forms, and the sweet and tender sympathy Nature silently and at all times holds out to tired humanity, are put before us. Our own writers in this line are unusually numerous. The names of Thoreau, Burroughs, Torrey, Abbott, Olive Thorne Miller, and Celia Thaxter rise spontaneously to the lips of every American. While from the other side come Richard Jefferies, Philip Gilbert Hamerton, Sir John Lubbock, Richard Proctor, Agnes Giberne, with many others, who have built up a most delightful literature of this class.

Both these lists of books might have been largely extended, but we have aimed to take only books of recent years, and easily obtainable. With our list of "New Novels," the year's books of "Description and Travel," "Out-Door Sports and Exercises," "Card Games, Charades, etc.," "Social Etiquette," and "Books for Summer Travelling," including the latest and best guide-books, we feel as if we had richly provided for the prospective summer idler.

From "Overheard in Arcady." Copyright, 1894, by C. Scribner's Sons.

"THEY KEEP ON HOPING AND BUY THE NEXT BOOK."

The Household of Frank R. Stockton.

From Robert Bridges' "Overheard in Arcady." (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

THE LADY (one of the fairest maidens at a semi-barbaric court).

THE TIGER (the fiercest beast in the kingdom).

SCENE: Two exactly similar adjoining rooms hung with the skins of wild beasts. A small iron-barred window in the centre of the dividing wall; heavily padded doors lead from each into a huge arena. In one room—THE LADY; in the other—THE TIGER.

TIME: The Pr sent.

THE LADY (rousing from a deep sleep on a divan covered with leopard skins):

H, I am weary, weary of this waiting! Here must I stay till that young man answers the conundrum, and chooses the Lady or the Tiger.

THE TIGER (with his huge paws sticking through the iron bars of the window): Hallo, there! You needn't make such a fuss about it; I'm in the same boat with you.

LADY (satirically): But you're a tiger, and a man-tiger at that. You're used to the solitude of the jungle, while my only life has been the gayety of court. Why must we be shut up here all these years?

TIGER (philosophically, scratching his left ear with his right paw): Well, it s all done for a good cause—the cause of literature. The slave who brought me my breakfast this morning said that he heard the king remark to his daughter, the other day, that if the question were settled about the Lady or the Tiger, Stockton's occupation as a story-writer would be gone.

LADY: I don't see why!

TIGER (viciously): Women never do.

LADY (with severe dignity): Perhaps Your Royal Bengal Highness can enlighten me?

TIGER: It's just this way: Every time Stockton publishes a new book, most of the people in the kingdom rush to buy it, to see whether it contains the answer to the Lady or the Tiger conundrum. When they don't find the answer, they keep on hoping and buy the next book; and so on indefinitely.

LADY (interested): It isn't a bad scheme.

TIGER: A regular lead-pipe cinch. It does not matter what he writes, the people are bound to buy it.

LADY: Oh, well, they get their money's worth, anyhow. The Nubian maid who waits on me always brings me his new books. I get a great deal of fun out of them.

TIGER (cynically): You have to; you've nothing else to do, except to embroider that wedding-dress which you won't have a chance to wear.

LADY (with tears in her eyes): It's mean of you to bully a poor, weak woman. You are like all the men I used to know; they are half-tiger in their dispositions, the brutes!

TIGER (showing his teeth): I don't feel flattered to be compared to a man. Respectable tigers always defend their women-folks and children to their last droop of blood. Your men, I understand, generally desert their women under fire, and get divorces and "legal separations," and break up their families and let their cubs shift for themselves. We may bully our tigresses a good deal, but we are not that bad!

LADY (concil ating him): Well—you have a pretty good heart when one gets through your hide. But that is tough! That is why I despair of ever improving your literary taste. So far as I can see through the grating, you never do anything but brush your royal stripes, smoke cigarettes, and read Rider Haggard.

TIGER (with a leer): Well, isn't that better than reading Stockton's everlasting conundrums?

LADY (patronizingly): You just show your ignorance! Mr. Stockton has written some perfectly beautiful tales with no conundrums in them at all. There is "Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine."

TIGER (cutting in): I guess the Dusantes were the conundrum in that book!

LADY (protesting): But he answered that in the sequel. Then there is "The Late Mrs. Null"—

TIGER (with a fiendish laugh): The biggest conundrum of the lot! I tell you Stockton is simply a great big ?.

LADY (pettishly): I won't talk to you any more to-day unless you play fair. (Coaxingly.) But isn't "Rudder Grange" perfectly splendid? Come now, you must admit that!

TIGER (dubiously, chewing his claws): I'm not saying that I was not interested in that, the day you poked it through the bars. Pomona and Euphemia, and the canal-boat are great fun. But the men are such awful idiots! There may be men like those, but I never knew a genteel tiger who was such a fool.

LADY (brightening up): And you did enjoy reading about Pomona's daughter, and the baby borrowed from New Dublin, and Lord Edwaru?

TIGER (reluctantly): Oh, yes! But they're not a patch on "King Solomon's Mines."

LADY (in despair): You are such a bloodthirsty creature—like a real man. The only way to lead a man clear through a book is with a trail of gore. Why can't you appreciate nice, quiet, gentle humor, full of good-will and sunshine, like Mr. Stockton's? I don't believe he ever spoiled a page of a book with a gruesome or disagreeable image. That is why we women read so much of him. He soothes our nerves.

READING RIDER HAGGARD.

TIGER (maliciously): That's the business of pills—not literature.

LADY (indignantly): You are incorrigible, and I won't talk to you. Go away from that window! . . .

A Pleasant Spot for an Idle Summer Day.

From Francis A. Knight's "By Moorland and Sea." (Roberts Bros.)

THE stream is the border-line between the field and the woodland. Its song is low today, but even were its silver tongue entirely silent its course is plain to read. Tall spikes of willow-herb shine all along it, like a line of lamps. White heads of meadow-sweet, rising through the fringing alders, suggest little heaps of foam that the brook has lightly tossed ashore. Art of man could hardly have devised a bridge more in keeping with the scene than the single log that here is laid across the brook, squared a little on one face, or, it may be, only worn by years of toiling feet. There is a slender manner of support in it—just a help to steady you in crossing. Yet the children of the village, coming down to look for cattle that have strayed among the thicket, walk fearlessly over, almost as soon as they can walk at all.

Under the bridge is a deep, still pool, where you may see, if you move cautiously, the big trout, the old hands of the stream, poised in the slow-moving current or lying on the pebbles at the bottom. Over the winding shore there leans, from the green woods above, a fringe of young wych-elm and hazel, with here and there a coral-berried rowan. And clear cut against the soft blue shadows under them ivy and honeysuckle hang down their lithe, long sprays. On every ledge of the steep rock fern and moss and wood-sorrel have found harborage. In the crevice of an old alder's stump are the ruins of a dipper's nest, empty long ago, only just distinguishable from the moss that has known no other place of growth, by the brown tinge of decay. A beautiful spot the birds fixed on for their home. A pleasant spot, too, for an idle summer day. The very ripple of the brook over the shingly bar lends a sense of coolness to the air. The long boughs of hazel join hands across the stream, and graceful wych-elms that lean over it temper the hot August sunshine. In the eternal twilight of the woods the ring-dove coos and pheasants crow; and, as evening darkens, the gray rabbits frolic all along the edge of the meadow. It is a little stream, but it is an angler's stream, for all that. It is alive with trout. Small they are, certainly, as befits the smallness of their haunt, though there are more half-pounders here than at first sight you would think likely; and tales are current in the village of thumping fellows, two-pounders (angler's weight), that have been taken by the native fishermen. The rod of the village angler is often a stick cut from the hedge. Now and then a more ambitious sportsman fits himself out with a wonderful weapon, painted green, and with as many brass ferrules as a cart-whip. His appliances are all rude in the extreme, but he fills his basket.

TYING THE STRINGS OF HER SHOE.

From Tom Hall's "When Hearts are Trumps." (Stone & Kimball.)

TYING the strings of her shoe,
With only the moon to see me.
Could I be quick? Could you?

What would any one do?
I tied no knot that would free me,
Tying the strings of her shoe,
With only the moon to see me.

Elfrida Gives up Art for Literature.

From Mrs. Everard Cotes' (Sara Jeannette Duncan) "A Daughter of To-Day." (Appleton.)

THE correspondent of the Daily Dial had a club for one side of the river and a café for the other. He dined oftenest at the café, and Elfrida's card, with "urgent" inscribed in pencil on it, was brought to him that evening as he was finishing his coffee. She had no difficulty in getting it taken in. Mr. Parke's theory was that a newspaper man gained more than he lost by accessibility. He came out immediately, furtively returning a toothpick to his waistcoat pocket—a bald, stout gentleman of middle age, dressed in loose gray clothes, with shrewd eyes, a nose which his benevolence just saved from being hawk-like, a bristling white moustache, and a pink double chin. It rather pleased Frank Parke, who was born in Hammersmith, to be so constantly taken for an American—presumably a New Yorker.

MRS. EVERARD COTES.
(Sara Jeannette Duncan.)

"Miss Elfrida, I am delighted to see you," he exclaimed her, stretching out one hand and looking at his watch with the other. "I am fortunate in having fifteen whole minutes to put at your disposal. At the end of that time I have an appointment with a cabinet minister, who would rather see the devil. Now, what is it, dear child?"

"One afternoon last September, at Nâdie Palicsky's—there is no chance that you will remember, but I assure you it is so—you told me that I might, if I tried—write, monsieur."

"I remember perfectly," he said.

"Je m'en félicite. It is more than I expected. Well, circumstances have made it so that I must either write or scrub. Scrubbing spoils one's hands, and besides, it isn't sufficiently remunerative. So I have come to ask you whether you seriously thought so or whether it was only politeness—blague—or what? I know it is horrible of me to insist like this, but you see I must."

"Oh, I meant it," he returned, ponderingly. "You can often tell by the way people talk that they would write well. But there are many things to be considered, you know."

"Oh, I know—whether one has any real right to write, anything to say that makes it worth while. I'm afraid I can't find that I have. But there must be scullery-maid's work in literature—in journalism, isn't there? I could do that, I thought. After all, it's only one's own art that one need keep sacred." She added the last sentence a little defiantly.

"It's not a thing you can jump into," he said shortly. "Have you written anything, anywhere, for the press before?"

"Only one or two thin s that have appeared in the local paper at home. They were more or less admired by the people there, so far as that goes."

"Were you paid for them?"

Elfrida shook her head. "I've often heard the editor say he paid for nothing but his telegrams," she said.

"There it is, you see."

"I want to write for Raffini's Chronicle," Elfrida said quickly. "You know the editor of Raffini, of course, Mr. Parke. You know everybody. Will you do me the very great favor to tell him that I will report society functions for him at one-half the price he is accustomed to pay for such writing, and do it more entertainingly?"

Frank Parke smiled. "You are courageous indeed, Miss Elfrida. That is done by a woman who is invited everywhere in her proper person, and knows 'tout Paris' like her alphabet. I believe she holds stock in Raffini; anyway, they would double her pay rather than lose her. You would have more chance of ousting their leader-writer."

"I should be sorry to oust anybody," Elfrida returned with dignity.

"How do you propose to help it, if you go in for doing better or cheaper what somebody else has been doing before?"

Miss Bell thought for a minute, and demonstrated her irresponsibility with a little shrug. "Then I'm very sorry," she said. "But, monsieur, you haven't told me what to do."

The illuminator of European politics for the Daily Dial wished heartily that it had been a matter of two or three hundred francs.

"I'm afraid I—well I don't see how I can give you any very definite advice. The situation doesn't admit of it, Miss Bell. But—have you given up Lucien?"

"No. It is only that—that I must earn money to pay him."

"Oh! Home supplies stopped?"

"My people have lost all their money except barely enough to live on. I can't expect another sou."

"That's hard lines!"

"I m awfully sorry for them. But it isn't enough, being sorry, you know. I must do something. I thought I might write for Raffini, for—for practice, you know—the articles they print are really very bad—and afterward arrange to send Paris letters to some of the big American newspapers. I know a woman who does it. I assure you she is quite stupid. And she is paid—but enormously!" Mr. Parke repressed his inclination to smile.

"I believe that sort of thing over there is very much in the hands of the syndicate—McClure and those fellows," he said, "and they won't look at you unless you're known. I don't want to discourage you, Miss Bell, but it would take you at least a year to form a connection. You would have to learn Paris about five times as well as you fancy you know it already, and then you would require a special course of training to find out what to write about. And then, remember, you would have to compete with people who know every inch of the ground. Now if I can be of any assistance to you en camarade, you know, in the matter of your passage home—"

"Thanks," Elfrida interposed quickly, "I'm not going home. If I can't write I can scrub, as I said. I must find out." She put out her hand. "I am sure there are not many of those fifteen minutes left," she said, smiling, and quite undismayed. "I have to thank you very sincerely for—for sticking to the opinion

Boating at Oxford.

From Richard Harding Davis' "Our English Cousins." (Harper & Bros.)

BOATING is a much more serious business at Oxford than at Yale or Harvard. At either of these two latter universities a 'varsity crew and four class crews are as much as the undergraduates furnish, while at Oxford, where there are no greater number of students, each of twenty colleges places eight good men in its boat every term, and from them supplies a 'varsity eight as well. And these are only the official representation of the colleges, for apart from them entirely are the private canoes, of many curious makes and many names, besides that noble and worthy institution, the Oxford punt. So that every student owns his boat as a matter of course, just as he owns his umbrella, and uses it almost as frequently.

There is a story of a Western Congressman who asked why the American people should complain of the inadequacy of their navy. "All we want is a few more ships," he said, "we have water enough." When one sees the Thames at Oxford and its branch, the Cherwell, one is inclined to transpose this, and to admit that the undergraduates have boats in sufficiency, and that all they need is a little water. This seems especially true when a punt strikes your boat in the stern and two pairs of oars form a barrier above your head, and a confusing chorus of voices assail you on all sides with "Look ahead, sir!" This, however, adds an element of excitement which would be otherwise lacking, and teaches you to be polite as well as to row, or rather to steer, for it can hardly be called rowing when you back water and unship your oars twice to every time you take a pull forward. At Oxford a man is first taught how to unship his oars, and then how to back water. After he can do this quickly, in spite of the fixed rowlocks, which custom still fastens to all save the racing-boats, he is taught the less-used practice of pulling ahead But the very number of the boats, while not conducive to speed, gives the wonderful life and color to the dark waters and overhanging trees. The girls in their summer frocks, and the men in their brilliant blazers and ribboned caps and the canoes with colored parasols, make the little river and its little branch a miniature Henley or an English Venice, and at the same time furnish you with an excellent instance of British conservatism. For no matter how musical or noisy the men in your boat may be, or how pretty the women, those in the other boats passing within a yard of you consider you as little as though you were a part of the bank. Their eyes avoid you, and their ears as well. A man could pass between the double rows of punts and canoes tied in the shade to the banks of the Cherwell, singing or shouting or confessing a murder, or making love to the girl in the bow, and no one of the young men along the bank within reach of his oar would raise his head from his novel, or stop pulling the ears of his fox-terrier, or cease considering the bowl of his pipe. The course over which the races are rowed at Oxford is a little less than a mile. The Thames for that mile is about as wide as an eight-oared boat is long, or ever so little wider, and the last half of the course is lined with house-boats, or "barges" as they call them. . . .

DOING A BIT OF READING.

THE POET'S APOLOGY.

From Andrew Lang's "Ban and Arrière Ban." (Longmans, Green & Co.)

No, the Muse has gone away,
Does not haunt me much to-day.
Everything she had to say
Has been said!
'Twas not much at any time
She could hitch into a rhyme,
Never was the Muse sublime
Who has fled!

Any one who takes her in
May observe she's rather thin;
Little more than bone and skin
Is the Muse;
Scanty sacrifice she won
When her very best she'd done,
And at her they poked their fun,
In Reviews.

"Rhymes," in truth, "are stubborn things,"
And to Rhyme she clung, and clings,
But whatever song she sings
Scarcely sells.
If her tone be grave they say
"Give us something rather gay."
If she's skittish, then they pray
"Something else!"

Much she loved, for wading shod,
To go forth with line and rod,
Loved the heather and the sod,
Loved to rest
On the crystal river's brim,
Where she saw the fishes swim,
And she heard the thrushes' hymn
By the Test!

She, whatever way she went,
Friendly was and innocent,
Little need the Bard repent
Of her lay.
Of the babble and the rhyme,
And the imitative chime
That amused him on a time—
Now he's gray.

A Favorite Corner.

From Celia Thaxter's "An Island Garden." (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

NEAR my own seat in a sofa corner at one of the south windows stands yet another small table, covered with a snow-white linen cloth embroidered in silk as white and lustrous as silver. On this are gathered every day all the rarest and loveliest flowers as they blossom, that I may touch them, dwell on them, breathe their delightful fragrance, and adore them. Here are kept the daintiest and most delicate of the vases which may best set off the flowers' loveliness—the smallest of the collection, for the table is only large enough to hold a few. There is one slender small tumbler of colorless glass, from the upper edge of which a crimson stain is diffused half way down its crystal length. In this I keep one glowing crimson Burgundy rose, or an opening Jacqueminot bud; the effect is as if the color of the rose ran down and dyed the glass crimson. It is so beautiful an effect one never wearies of it. There is a little jar of Venice glass, the kind which Browning describes in "The Flight of the Duchess"—

> "With long white threads distinct inside,
> Like the lake-flower's fibrous roots that dangle
> Loose such a length and never tangle."

This is charming with a few rich pinks of different shades. Another Venice glass is irregularly bottle-shaped, bluish-white with cool sea-green reflections at the bottom, very delicate, like an aqua-marine. It is lightly sprinkled with gold-dust throughout its whole length; toward the top the slender neck takes on a soft touch of pink, which meets and mingles with the Bon Silene or la France rose I always keep in it. Another Venice glass still is a wonder of iridescent blues, lavenders, gray, and gold. A spray of heaven-blue larkspur dashed with rose is delicious in this slender shape, with its marvellous tints melting into the blue and pink of the fairy flowers.

A little glass of crystal girdled with gold holds pale blue forget-me-nots; sometimes it is rich with orange and yellow erysimum flowers. In a tall Venetian vase of amber a lilium auratum is superb. A low jar of opaque rose-pink, lost at the bottom in milky whitness, is refreshing with an old-fashioned damask rose matching its color exactly. This is also exquisite with one pink water-lily. The pink variety of the rose campion is enchanting in this low jar. A tall shaft of rubby glass is radiant with poppies of every shade of rose and lightest scarlet, with the silvery green of a few oats among them. A slender purple glass is fine with different shades of purple and lilac sweet-peas, or one or two purple poppies, or an aster or two of just its color, but there is one long gold-speckled Bohemian glass of rich green which is simply perfect for any flower that blows, and perfect under any circumstances. A half dozen Iceland poppies, white, yellow, orange, in a little Japanese porcelain bottle, always stand on this beautiful table, the few flecks of color on the bottle repeating their tints. I never could tell half the lovely combinations that glow on this table all summer long.

By the wide western window a large vase of clear white glass, nearly three feet high, stands full of spears of timothy-grass, taller than the vase, the tallest I can find, springing stately and high, their heavy green tops bending the fine strong stems just enough for consummate grace. These are mixed with lighter branching grasses, and down among the grass stalks are thrust the slender stalks of tall poppies of every conceivable shade of red; the whole is a great sheaf of splendor reaching higher than the top of the window. This is really imposing; it takes the eye with delight.

All summer long within this pleasant room the flowers hold carnival in every possible combination of beauty. All summer long it is kept fresh and radiant with their loveliness—a wonder of bloom, color, and fragrance.

THE SWEET SUMMER GIRL.

From Tom Hall's "When Hearts are Trumps." (Stone & Kimball.)

SHE has hair that is fluffy, straight, banged, or half curled;
Has a parasol, oft by her deft fingers twirled.
She has eyes either brown or black, gray or true blue;
Has a neat fitting glove and a still neater shoe.

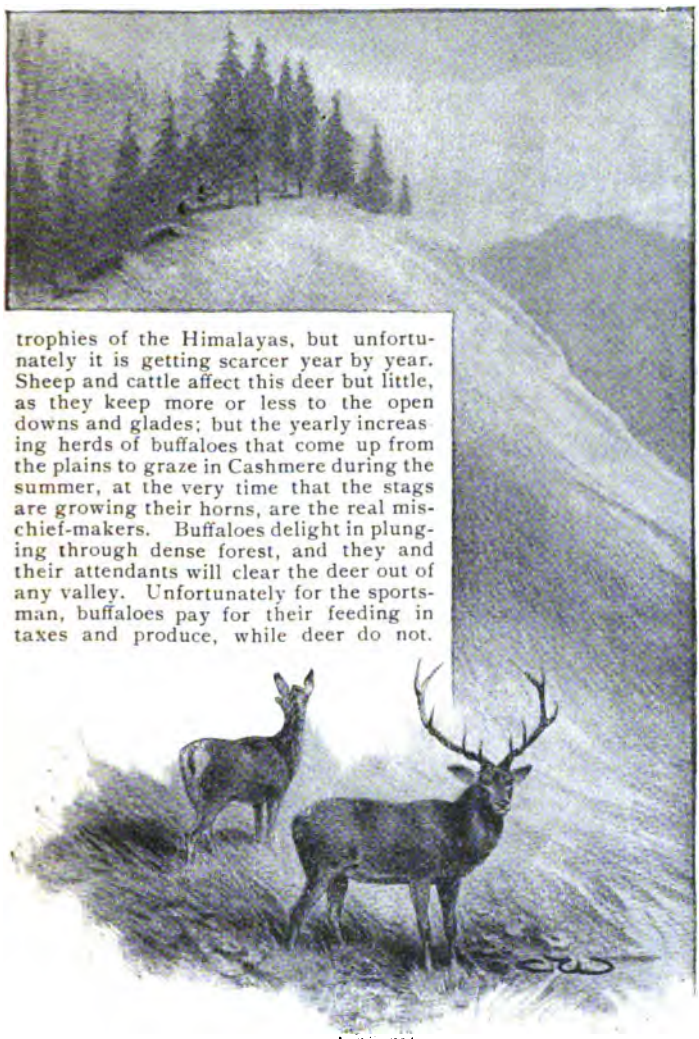
She has cheeks that make bitter the envious rose;
She has trunks upon trunks of the costliest clothes;
She has jewels that shine as the stars do at night;
And she dances as Ariel dances—or might.

She knows nothing much, but she's great on the smile;
Her profession is love, and she flirts all the while;
She's accustomed to sitting on rocks in the glen;
She is also accustomed to sitting on men.

The Cashmere Stag.

From "Big-Game Shooting." (Little, Brown & Co.)

THIS is the stag par excellence of India. A sambur has a fine head and so has a swamp-deer, but neither approaches in beauty to a barasingh. A good stag's head is one of the trophies of the Himalayas, but unfortunately it is getting scarcer year by year. Sheep and cattle affect this deer but little, as they keep more or less to the open downs and glades; but the yearly increasing herds of buffaloes that come up from the plains to graze in Cashmere during the summer, at the very time that the stags are growing their horns, are the real mischief-makers. Buffaloes delight in plunging through dense forest, and they and their attendants will clear the deer out of any valley. Unfortunately for the sportsman, buffaloes pay for their feeding in taxes and produce, while deer do not.



From "Big-Game Shooting." Copyright, by Little, Brown & Co.

A STALK IN THE OPEN.

The best step as regards preservation that the Cashmere authorities have taken as yet is the creation of a Royal Preserve between the Sindh and Liddur Rivers, and if they would only exclude buffaloes from this tract entirely it would form a real sanctuary, which would immensely improve the shooting all round. At present, by allowing buffaloes to graze on it, they are depriving it of half its value.

In spite of all drawbacks stags are still to be got, but in no quantity. Two good heads in a month's shooting are as many as any sportsman can reasonably hope to get, and if one of those measures forty inches, whether with ten or twelve tines, he is to be congratulated.

The general color of barasingh is much the same as that of red deer, but it is rather grayer, and the white patch on the rump appears a little larger. Sterndale says it has a white circle round the eyes, but the writer has never seen anything more distinct of this kind than a ring slightly paler than the rest of the head.

The horns resemble those of the red deer, with the notable exception that with barasingh the bez antler appears to be the fighting one, and is always longer and bigger than the brow antler, while with red deer the reverse is the case. Sir Victor Brooke says its call is just like that of a wapiti, and quite different from that of a red stag. "In the former it is a loud squeal, ending in a more guttural tone; in the latter it is a loud distinct roar, resembling that of a panther." In the winter nearly all the barasingh are congregated in the Cashmere Valley, but though the smaller stags come down and are pretty easily found, the big ones will not leave the high ground until the young grass begins to grow in March, which is the best month to get heads, though of course the deer are then in poor condition. By the end of March all the big stags and most of the smaller ones have shed their horns, and the deer collect into large herds and begin moving off to their summer quarters, those in the western corner of the valley going to the banks of the Kishengunga River. The herds which strike the river at its nearest point below Gurais cross it, and retire to the range of hills on the southern boarder of Astor. Only a few stags cross this range.

Louis Napoleon and "Madame Bovary."

From "My Paris Note-Book," by the author of "An Englishman in Paris." (J. B. Lippincott Co.)

HERE is another instance of Louis Napoleon's tendency to take a "topsy-turveydom" view of things in general, and of serious things in particular. When public opinion clamored for the prosecution of the author of "Madame Bovary," the emperor consented, though most reluctantly. He was one of the first who had read the book, and in his inmost heart he admired both the author and his work. "Then why prosecute him, sire?" asked my uncle Mark. "I'll tell you why," replied the emperor, smiling. "If we do not prosecute, we shall have every cabman in Paris and in the provinces asking for double his fare the moment an affectionate-looking couple try to step into his vehicle. Flaubert ought to have known better; if it was absolutely necessary to his plot to have Emma Bovary and Léon Dupuis drive round Rouen for a whole day in a conveyance with the blinds down, he ought to have made Léon go to a livery stable for the carriage, and not have made him take a mere hackney from the rank. This soi-disant, unmolested drive round and round the city casts, to begin with, and inferentially, a slur upon the vigilance of the Rouen police, who stupid as they may be, would not have allowed such a thing to pass unchallenged, and who, to make up for their alleged neglect, will stop every cab that has its blinds down. They have a perfect right to do so in the matter of carriages plying for hire in the public thoroughfares, and we shall have the innocent uncle with his pretty niece, and the somewhat passée aunt with her lamb-like nephew, hauled before the magistrate for outrage aux mœurs. There is, furthermore, an outcry already that people cannot get into a hackney cab without being fleeced. It is not my fault, after all, that the spread of education has reached 'cabby'"—the emperor liked to use an English word now and then—"and that he has read this masterpiece of realistic fiction. No, Flaubert must be indicted; there will be more scandals if we do not than if we do."

I have often wondered since whether Mr. Gilbert could have produced a more deliberately comical and distorted view of a moral problem.

Sorrow and Joy.

From Beatrice Harraden's "In Varying Moods." (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

ONE night she dreamed that she went to the halls of Death, and asked to be shown into the presence of the Lord of Death.

"Why art thou here?" asked the Lord of Death, gravely, as she stood before him, her head bowed, and her arms folded in front of her: a sad figure.

"I have come to beg thee to put thy cold hand on me," she whispered; "I wish to die. I wish to free the world of my dark presence. I wish my very name to be forgotten."

But the Lord of Death answered thus: "Thy name and the name of Joy are bracketed together. Ye are twin sisters. When thou diest, Joy must die also. Surely thou dost not wish her to die when she is doing her good work. What would the world be without Joy? And yet if I lay my cold hand on thee, I must needs lay it on Joy. For as the light implies the darkness, and as the day implies the night, so Joy implies Sorrow, and Sorrow implies Joy. Thus, thou seest ye are inseparably bound up together. Together ye came into the world, and together ye must leave the world. What is thy choice, Sorrow? Wilt thou live or die?"

"I will live!" cried Sorrow, "so that Joy, my twin sister, may live for evermore. For the world has need of her smiles, her laughter, and all her loving influence. O Lord of Death, this is my choice—life for evermore."

And Sorrow awoke, remembering her dream. In her heart there was that strange gladness which comes of sacrifice. She sought out her sister. She scarcely recognized her, for there was a beauty on Joy's face which Sorrow had never before seen so clearly defined.

"You have given me a great work to do," whispered Joy, as she clung close to Sorrow. "Never until now did I realize the grand possibilities of life. Give me of your knowledge, Sorrow, and help me to be a great teacher, a great reformer, as you wished me to be. O Sorrow, I have seen smiles light up wan faces of men and women and children. I have seen wonderful things happen. Ah, and I have heard people bless Sorrow, because Sorrow has prepared the way for Joy. Come back from your wanderings, dear, for the world has need of you as well as of me.

"Kiss me, Joy," said Sorrow, "your words comfort me."

And Joy kissed her.

"You will never know death," said Sorrow, as she looked proudly at her sister. "Other things may pass away, but Joy shall live for ever."

"And you, dear Sorrow?" asked Joy.

"I too shall live for ever," answered Sorrow, gently. "And Joy, when I go about my work, you must come with me, to soothe the grief I bring, and to kiss away the tears called forth by my presence. Will you promise this to me, Joy?"

And Joy promised it.

Then the sisters passed on together in silence. The golden sunshine fell on their faces, and over their fair hair. They seemed wond'rously alike, for Joy had borrowed some part of Sorrow's expression, and Sorrow's eyes had caught the light in Joy's eyes. And as in the old days when they danced over the daisied fields and through the daffodil woods, so now, no one looking at them could tell which was Sorrow and which was Joy.

How Olive Thorne Miller Rests.

From Olive Thorne Miller's "A Bird-Lover in the West." (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

WITH the earnest desire of suggesting to tired souls a practicable way of resting, I will even give a bit of personal history; I will tell the way in which I have learned to find recreation in nature.

When I turn my back upon my home, I make a serious and determined effort to leave behind me all cares and worries. As my train, on that beautiful May evening, passed beyond the brick and stone walls, and sped into the open country, I shook off, as well as I was able all my affairs, all my interests, all my responsibilities, leaving them in that busy city behind me, where a few burdens more or less would not matter to anybody. With my trunks checked, and my face turned toward the far-off Rocky Mountains, I left the whole work-a-day world behind me, departing—as far as possible—a liberated soul, with no duties excepting to rejoice and to recruit. This is not an easy thing to do; it is like tearing apart one's very life; but it can be done by earnest endeavor; it has been done, and it is a charm more potent than magic to bring restoration and re-creation to the brain and nerve-weary worker.

To insure any measure of success I always go alone; one familiar face would make the effort of no avail; and I seek a place where I am a stranger, so that my ordinary life cannot be recalled to me. When I reach my temporary home I forget, or at least ignore, my notions as to what I shall eat or drink, or how I shall sleep. I take the goods the gods provide and adjust myself to them. Even these little things help one out of his old ways of thought and life. To still further banish home concerns, I mark upon my calendar one week before the day I shall start for home, and sternly resolve that not until I reach that day shall I give one thought to my return, but will live as though I meant to stay always. I take no work of any sort, and I banish books, excepting a few poets and studies of nature.

Such is the aim of my honest and earnest striving; that I do not quite reach my goal is merely to say I am human. Letters from my home and friends will drag me back to old interests, and times will come, in sleepless nights and unguarded moments, when the whole world of old burdens and cares sweep in and overwhelm me. But I rouse my will, and resolutely, with all my power, push them back, refuse to entertain them for a moment.

Holding myself in this attitude of mind, I secure a change almost as complete as if I stepped out of my body and left it resting, while I refreshed myself at the fountain of life. All my thoughts are turned into fresh channels; the old ruts are smoothed over, if not obliterated; nerves on the strain all the year have a chance to recreate themselves; old worries often weaken and fade away.

Faustine's Husband.

From "Countess Obernau," from the German by Julien Gordon. (Robert Bonner's Sons.)

"ALLOW people to arrange their own affairs," said Clemens, shortly.

"And select a wife to their own taste?" asked Faustine.

"What twaddle, that!" said Waldorf.

"It rather pleases me!" cried Faustine, and clapped her hands. "Now I like a man that desires more of his wife than that she will not over-salt his soup."

HE TOOK HER IN HIS ARMS AND CARRIED HER ACROSS.

"If one is too exacting in one's choice, one is rarely happy," remarked Adèle.

"If I had a daughter," said Faustine, "and a man saw in her his future housekeeper, I should be profoundly humiliated."

"You are wrong!" cried Adèle. "Common interest—that is the strongest bond."

"I believe I am foolish," replied Faustine, quietly; "and heaven has spared me this trial by giving me no daughter. I never doubted that sorrow and trouble, battled through together, bind hearts to each other. I would make many sacrifices; but should expect my husband to wish to own, not a servant—but me—Faustine."

"I am amazed," said Waldorf, and let fall his pipe.

"At my peculiar ideas?" asked she, a little contemptuously.

"No; that you do not marry, you speak of it so reasonably."

Faustine made merry over her brother-in-law's comment:

"Why should I marry? I am too old!"

"Oh," said he, with a bow; "such a beautiful woman will never be old."

"Bravo! You are exercising yourself in gallantry. Since I am young and beautiful enough—perhaps not rich enough."

"That is quite another thing. I was surprised to hear you speak of sacrifices, having heard you say you thought women should be on the same footing with men."

"Would you expect the woman to be the head of the family?" asked Adèle.

"No, I would expect a man to treat his wife as an equal, and not like a bought slave, putting his heel upon her neck in his bad humors, and in his pleasant moments decking it with a necklace. There is nothing like this to demoralize a woman. It destroys her delicacy. To-day she allows a brutality to pass for the sake of a new bonnet to-morrow."

"Clemens," she said, turning suddenly to the young man; "think of these things when you marry."

"But you forget his wife is to come from heaven," put in Waldorf; "he has already told us."

"I wish you as good a one as you deserve," she said kindly to Clemens.

"Has she, then, not guessed that for me there is but one woman in the world, and no other?" he asked himself. He was distrait when he went for a walk with her later, and spoke little. This, however, did not strike Faustine, who knew how much he liked to listen to her. He did not notice where they went; nor did she, as she always relied upon his guidance and preferred unknown paths.

"Where are we?" she asked at last, as they came suddenly out of a wooded place into a swamp skirted by trees, through which a turbid brook flowed slowly. "It is absolutely ghostly here. Must I cross this brook?"

"Certainly," said Clemens; and without another word he took her up in his arms and carried her across.

When Faustine was once more on terra firma—"I forbid that," she said; "I can use my own feet. Where are we going now?" She spoke angrily and shook her gown as if she would be free from his touch. She did it thoughtlessly, and just this wounded him deeply. He answered her question:

"I really do not know."

"Why did you carry me through the brook if it was useless?"

"That, too, I do not know."

"Then please go and find out the way. . . ."

Home the Spiritualist and the Empress Eugénie.

From Pierre De Lano's "The Empress Eugénie." (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

A MORE important event, which caused a great commotion, was the tragedy which occurred at Home's apartment shortly after he was received by the empress.

A charming man, the Marquis de B——, was amongst Home's most ardent admirers, and he had often entreated him to make him see a young girl whom he had loved, but who had died.

The American, after having avoided as far as possible the request of the marquis, at last consented to yield to his wish.

"Come to my apartment to-morrow," he said, "and I will bring you into the presence of her whom you loved."

At the hour agreed upon M. de B—— presented himself at the medium's apartment. Whereupon the latter led him into an adjoining room and left him. What then occurred? Only the hero of this adventure knew; but he carried away with him the secret of his vision. Did the Marquis de B—— see her whom he wished to see, or was he the victim (which is probably the case) of a frightful and mad dream? Did his unbalanced mind suddenly go to pieces? When Home entered the room, M. de B—— was lying at full length on the floor at the foot of the bed, and all sign of life was gone. A sudden heart-failure had killed him.

Those about the emperor asked themselves, after this accident, if it was not time to put a stop to these movings of the spirit. But the empress, who learned of the plot which was being planned against her protégé, interposed; and Home, more than ever, was received at court.

He became the indispensable friend of the Tuileries; and by the good nature with which the emperor bore with him to please his wife, by the enthusiastic sympathy which she showed him, he succeeded in re-establishing his influence in a manner alarming to those who persistently looked upon him as a skilful actor, an incomparable trickster.

One day when the court was at Fontainebleau—it was on a Sunday morning—the empress proposed to the ladies who accompanied her to go with her and Home to a kiosk on the lake. They all agreed to this, and all, as usual, placed themselves about a table which the American hastened to consult. Amongst the women present on this occasion were the Grande Duchesse Stephanie de Bade, the aunt of the emperor, also her daughter, the Princesse Marie, Duchess of Hamilton. The table having been requested to talk, remained silent for a moment. But on the windows of the kiosk there was suddenly heard a deafening sound of hailstones falling with violence. Finally, as if by an order from Home, the spirit decided to break the silence; and the frightened women, listening attentively, heard the following words:

"What are you doing here? It is Sunday. Your place is elsewhere. You should be at church."

The empress, who was very superstitious, arose to go, taking with her her friends. Together they repaired hurriedly to perform their devotions.

"ABOUT COCKCROW THEY PASSED THROUGH A LITTLE TOWN."

A Midwinter Night's Dream.

From H. A. Beers' "A Suburban Pastoral, and Other Tales." (H. Holt & Co.)

AT the top of this hill they stopped again. They were now cut off by the intervening ridge from the sounds of the coasting party. It was one of those halcyon nights, not infrequent in the winter climate of New England—whose changeableness is its glory as well as its danger—when the wind has fallen, and the temperature has risen so rapidly that, in contrast with the previous rigor of the season, the weather has almost a summer balm, and one can walk abroad comfortably without an overcoat. . . .

"Did you ever read Hawthorne's story of 'Wakefield'?" asked Brainard.

"I don't remember it. What was it about?"

"A steady-going old fellow, who has lived a life as regular as clockwork for years with his steady-going wife. All of a sudden an impulse takes him. He goes out one October evening, rents lodgings in the next street, disguises himself completely, and for twenty years never goes home again and is given up for dead."

"Yes, I think I have read it," she murmured.

"Didn't you ever feel that impulse: to cut yourself off suddenly from the past by one irrevocable act; to burn all your ships behind you; to step across a narrow crack which you know will widen into a crevice, and then into a chasm that you can never get back across?"

"Yes," she answered, with a suppressed excitement in her voice; "I have come to such places and felt the temptation just to put my foot across and see what would happen. I have heard something say in my ear, 'Now is your chance—now—now; do it—do it.' And then," she added, "I have looked down into the crevice and found no bottom to it, and turned around and gone home again."

"Yes," said Brainard, "we always do go back. We never have spirit enough to take the venture. I used to ramble along the docks in New York and look at the ocean steamers getting ready to weigh anchor, and a dozen times I've been on the point of walking aboard one of them and taking passage to whatever part of the world it was bound for. But I never did."

She drew a long breath, but answered nothing. And now a tender white radiance began to suffuse the eastern heaven, and presently a point and then a rim of silver lifted itself above the horizon.

"The moon!" they exclaimed together. They watched the planet until its gibbous disk had risen free of the sky-line, and long shadows from trees and fences wavered toward them across the snow crust, sparkling with crystal reflections.

"Sue," said Brainard, in a low voice that thrilled with emotion, "shall we go on toward that?"

"Why not?" she replied.

As they faced each other in the new light of the moon it might have seemed that the superstition which attributes madness to lunar influence was not altogether fancy. Whether because his eyes were dazzled and full of moonshine, her own looked larger and brighter to him than by day, and her face had an exalted and bewitched expression. Whatever was trivial or familiar in the girl that he had known was strained away, and he found himself alone in the enchanted night with a woman grown suddenly sweet and strange.

"Because," he said, speaking with momentous slowness, "if you dare to go on any farther with me we may never come back."

"I never take a dare," she answered, defiantly.

"Dare you kiss me, then?" he asked, approaching her.

She made no reply, but in the steady audacious fixture of her regard he found an answer, and seizing her in his arms, he kissed her repeatedly on her cold cheeks and her warm lips, until she covered her face with her hands and stood as if dazed.

"Now we have crossed the chasm," she said, as he released her.

The Two-Legged Wolf.

From Karazin's "The Two-Legged Wolf." (Rand, McNally & Co.)

In the hot, yellow stand stood a wooden stake, painted red. The lower portion of this stake, imbedded in the soil, was shod with iron; at its upper end there was a short crosspiece, and upon it sat, its feathers bristling, a handsome hunting-falcon, dreaming—the sharp, rascally eyes covered by the opaque, transverse eyelids.

The bird seemed the embodiment of perfect immobility. From the little red cap fitted to its small, shapely head down to the little silver chain which fastend its leg to the crosspiece, it resembled a thing carved. He never moved; not one of the little bells which adorned the collar around the bird's neck gave forth a sound, and, as if drawn by hand, the short bluish shadow cast by the bird lay sharply defined upon the reddish-yellow background of sand.

Two greyhounds, lean, gaunt, and nearly hairless, with inflamed tongues protruding, lay flat upon their sides, and but for the barely perceptible movement of their clearly defined ribs they would have been taken for carrion rather than for living animals ready at the first motion, at a single faint summoning whistle of their master, to jump up and scan the boundless steppe—to fly like arrows over the wave-like, friable sands, which to the eye appeared to have neither ending nor beginning.

A handsome, showy horse—a blooded Turkoman stallion—covered, in spite of the scorching heat, with a heavy blanket, also stood motionless nearby; the clean, sinewy fetlocks of its forelegs hobbled with a thin woollen rope. The costly bridle, ornamented with silver, turquois, and carnelians, was lightly attached to the horn-shaped bow of the saddle, maintaining the graceful bend of the swan-like neck. The remainder of the horse-trappings were lying close by, arranged in the most scrupulous order. It was evident that a very experienced hand had placed them thus, and that the same hand was ready with a single motion to swing the whole load upon the horse's crupper and fasten it on in spite of its apparently complicated nature. There was a pair of "korshuns," or saddle-bags, made of the costly Khivan carpet known as "kisil-tirnak;" a leather case with cups, the so-called "kalmyk-bash" or "terkesh," ornamented with long rawhide tassels; a gourd-kalyan, or water-pipe, with silver mountings; a long reed stem, and a skilfully embossed copper bowl; a goatskin water-vessel, warped and wrinkled from long exposure to the heat; a pair of long-barrelled Persian pistols, the muzzles resting in sockets; and a bag of woollen tissue for oats, half filled.

In addition to the falcon, the horse, and the greyhounds, there was still another living creature, though it was difficult to regard it as such. Why should a living being lie so long in such an evidently uncomfortable position?

This other being was a man. He lay stretched out at full length, with his arms under his head, his eyes piercing the boundless gray depth of the burning, scorching sky overhead. The broad brim of his slashed felt hat protected a pair of oblique, blinking eyes, and cast a shadow dividing the bronzed high cheek-boned face into two distinct parts.

The man was dressed in a loose cloak of camel's-hair cloth, under which garment another, bright red in color, was visible, with edges embroidered in gold braid. The glaring pattern of his voluminous red trousers, also embroidered in silk of various colors, shone in the sunlight. The feet were clad in soft leather socks, with green heel pieces, and shoes with high, narrow heels shod with silver-notched steel.

Beside him lay a costly "klynch," or sabre, in a scabbard of black shagreen-work, and with a white bone hilt, set with stones of various colors, chiefly turquois, and ornamented with tassels; a double-barrelled gun of Russian make, and a Russian revolver in leather case, which was attached by a white cord to the wide metal-plated belt. In addition to these arms there was also a whole collection of knives suspended from the belt, and various smaller articles needed in warfare or on the road—flints and steel, wire primers, etc., and, finally, a wallet of red "safian" leather, embroidered in silver.

SONNET.

To the Red-Eyed Vireo.

From E. J. Loomis' "Wayside Sketches." (Roberts Bros.)

Unwearied minstrel of the greenwood tree,
  Amid the chorus of unnumbered notes
  Raised by the birds in June, thy music floats
Serene above them all. Thy melody
Flows like the forest brook—as cheerily
  And silver clear. The joy of sweet content
  And peace and love are in thy rich notes blent,
Which, while I hear, bring happiness to me.
Would that my life might be as glad as thine—
  As full of joyous song and gratitude;
  To take contentedly each gift divine
  Of sun or cloud, and feel it to be good;
To trust that every day its gift will bring,
And with a thankful heart like thee to sing.

Publisher and Novelist.

From Ella Hepworth Dixon's "The Story of a Modern Woman." (Cassell Pub. Co.)

"Spesh—shul! Extra spesh—shul! The great divorce case! Extraordinary evidence! Cross-examination of Sir Horace Blaythewaite!" shouted a small newsvender in Mary's ear, as she waited at Wellington Street to cross. And all the while, as she hurried along to the office of Illustrations, with this new terror of broken health knocking at her brain, she wondered what the abrupt summons could mean which she had received from the editor. Half of the ms. of her novel was in his hands. Could it be possible that he was going to refuse it?

With some trepidation Mary gave her name to her old admirer, the small office boy, whom she found casting a supercilious eye over the current number of the paper, while he furtively sucked an acid drop. And in due time she found herself ushered into the editor's private room. Six months of proof-reading, of interviewing incapable artists, of the thousand worries of a newspaper, had not made the manners of the editor of Illustrations more gracious.

"Good-day, Miss Erle. Take a chair. Want to talk to you."

"Is it anything," asked Mary, "about the novel?"

"The fact is," said the melancholy looking man, tapping with an irritable looking hand on a pile of manuscript near his desk, which Mary recognized, with some anxiety, as her own, "it won't do at all. It won't do at all."

"It—won't do?" faltered Mary. "Why, I've written it just as you told me. There's a forged will in the first volume, a picnic in the second—"

"Oh, that's all right," interrupted the editor. "But, my dear girl," he added, "you've put the most extraordinary things in this last chapter. Why, there's a young man making love to his friend's wife. I can't put that sort of thing in my paper. The public won't stand it, my dear girl. They want thoroughly healthy reading."

"Do they?" said Mary, who could not help remembering the columns of unedifying matter which had lain on the breakfast-table that morning, nor the newsboys vending the latest details of the great scandal, served red hot, at the street corners. "I thought," she continued quietly, "that the public would take anything—in a newspaper."

For a minute the editor looked perplexed. Then, frowning slightly, he went on: "Not in fiction—not in fiction. Must be fit to go into every parsonage in England. Remember that you write chiefly for healthy English homes."

"But even the people in the country parsonage must occasionally see life as it is—or do they go about with their eyes shut?" ventured Mary quietly.

"Well, we're not going to encourage that sort of thing," he said conclusively, getting up and putting his mouth to the telephone.

"Hullo! Richards! No. Yes, yes, of course. Not got the portrait of Lady Blaythewaite? What? Spoiled? Take another kodak into court, then. Eh? Yes. See that it's a good likeness. All the co-respondents for this week's issue. And see that they're touched up. What? Yes, yes. A couple of pages of drawings."

The editor sat down again. Their eyes met.

"The fact is," he said, looking rather foolish, "novels are—er—well—novels. The British public doesn't expect them to be like life. And if you take my advice, Miss Erle, and cultivate your talents in the right way, you will be able to make a—a—comfortable income. Only there must be a thoroughly breezy, healthy tone."

"Oh, as to breezy," said Mary, in a tired voice, "I never somehow feel like that. I don't know how it is, but I can't help seeing things as they are, and the truth is so supremely attractive."

"But it is just what the public won't stand," repeated the editor. "Now take this chapter back and reconsider it. This young man, now—he isn't a principal character in the story—couldn't you make him her cousin—or her brother!"

"Oh, anything you like," said Mary, taking the manuscript; "but I did like that chapter. I took so much trouble over it. It was a little bit of real observation."

"That's right. And if you don't mind my saying so, there aren't quite enough love scenes between the hero and the heroine. The public like love scenes, and besides they illustrate so well."

"Is there anything more?" said Mary, trying to force the manuscript into her pocket.

"I should suggest a thoroughly happy ending. The public like happy endings. The novelists are getting so morbid. It's all these French and Russian writers that have done it. It's really difficult now to get a thoroughly breezy book with a wedding at the end. Take my advice and stick to pretty stories. They're bound to pay best."

THE BAYADERE.

From Francis S. Saltus' "Bayadere, and Other Sonnets." (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

NEAR strange weird temples, where the Ganges' tide
Bathes doomed Lahore, I watched, by spice-trees fanned,
Her agile form in some quaint saraband,
A marvel of passionate chastity and pride.

Nude to the loins, superb and leopard-eyed,
With fragrant roses in her jeweled hand,
Before some Kaît-drunk Rajah, mute and grand,
Her flexile body bends, her white feet glide.

The dull Kinoors throb one monotonous tune,
And wail with zeal as in a hasheesh trance:
Her scintillant eyes in vague, ecstatic charm
Burn like black stars below the Orient moon,
While the suave, dreamy languor of the dance
Lulls the grim, drowsy cobra on her arm.

Doreen at St. James' Hall.

From Edna Lyall's "Doreen, The Story of a Singer." (Longmans, Green & Co.)

AT last, goaded almost beyond bearing by this inward struggle, he resolved to go and hear her sing. And one evening, early in June, he left the house soon after eight o'clock, and made his way to St. James' Hall, where Doreen was announced to sing at Mr. Boniface's concert. With indescribable feelings he awaited her first appearance, and when at length the conductor led forward the slim, girlish figure robed in white poplin, his heart beat like a sledge-hammer. Her air of simplicity and goodness was entirely unaltered; but he thought there was additional dignity in her attitude as she stood regarding the audience, while the pianist played the introduction to her song. The face, too, was changed and had a fragile, delicate look about it that reminded him somehow of little Mollie, and then the eyes looked larger and sadder even when, at her warm reception, she had smiled. She sang her most popular song, "O Bay of Dublin," and the exquisite voice lured him back, for the time, into a haven of rest, filling his mind with memories that were all tender and gracious, all sharply in contrast with his present miserable conflict. When Doreen again appeared, the very change in her aspect angered him. She should not, urged the tempter's voice within him, have allowed trouble to become so legibly stamped on her face; surely, too, he caught the gleam of two or three white threads in her dark hair. She should not, above all have chosen to sing Linley's "Kate O'Shane."

A sort of fury of anger and hatred rose in his heart, an utterly unreasoning wrath consumed him, and it chanced at that instant that Doreen, as she bowed to the audience, caught sight of him. Had a knife been plunged into her breast, it could not have wounded her so terribly as that glance; her face, as she passed down the steps from the platform, was absolutely colorless, and Donati, perceiving that something was wrong, followed her out on to the stairs, and helped her to the artistes' room.

"Max Hereford is in the stalls!" she exclaimed. "He looked—oh, I can't tell you how he looked!"

"You cannot tell through what struggle he may not be passing," he said, with that perfect sympathy and comprehension which characterized him. "Go back and sing something that shall help him to conquer."

But the thought of returning again to face Max in his present mood, the horror of singing to one who seemed to have given place to the devil, was like death to her. She shuddered as the storm of applause reached her more clearly upon the opening of the swing-door.

"For his sake," said Donati, "be strong. Help him while you can."

"Will Miss O'Ryan give an encore?" said the Norwegian attendant, in the mechanical tone of one going doggedly about his duty in spite of personal suffering.

"My book of Irish songs, Hagar," said Doreen, quickly. "Yes, I am coming. There is one song," she added in a low voice to Donati, "and only one, that I think by its memories might reach him—if only I can sing it."

"You certainly can sing it for his sake," said Donati, with that firm confidence that everything right was possible, which gave his life such wonderful force.

Doreen's heart was throbbing painfully, but she did not pause or hesitate. She passed through the little waiting-room, smiled at Sardoni as he bantered her on having kept the audience clapping for such an unmerciful time, and handed the open book to Marioni.

"There are four verses," she said to him, as they mounted the steps; "I think I shall be hissed, but whatever happens go on playing."

There was a thunder of applause as the people caught sight of her; then all became deathly still.

"My God!" she cried in her heart, "let Max understand the message—for no one else here will understand."

A Stroke of Business.

From Tillier's "Belle-Plante and Cornelius." (The Merriam Co)

WHILE they were under the willows, Mother Simone presented herself, followed by an old man, whose face wore the stamp of honesty.

"Here, Monsieur Cornelius," said she, "Father Navette would like to speak to you."

"Well, let him speak," said Cornelius; "come, my good man, what have you to say to us? And first of all drink a glass of this wine. Mother Simone, a glass for Monsieur Navette."

Mother Simone, delighted with the success of her protégé, ran to get a glass.

"Monsieur Sorcerer," said Father Navette.

"What do you mean, Father Navette?" said Louise, "with your Monsieur Sorcerer?"

Pardon me, mademoiselle, perhaps I have ill-spoken; but, as monsieur bewitched Monsieur Belle-Plante on account of his usury, I would like him to do me the same service that he has done to the fisherman Jacob."

"H'm!" said Cornelius, assuming the gravity of a king giving audience; "I listen."

"The case is this, Monsieur Savant. I am Monsieur Belle-Plante's weaver, and he owes me one hundred and ninety francs for weaving cloth."

"What!" said Cornelius, "Belle-Plante owes you one hundred and ninety francs for weaving cloth? That is impossible. I know from good authority that he changes his clothes only every four months."

"You must know," said Louise, "that Belle-Plante manufactures every year linen, serge, and striped cotton. He supplies all his servants with garments, and keeps back the price thereof out of their wages. He finds that his hemp and his wool bring him more in this way than if he were to sell them at the fair."

"Belle-Plante," said Cornelius, "is no ordinary miser: he will advance the science; really there is imagination in his avarice. But go on, Father Navette; I say this, not for you, but for myself."

"For two years," said Father Navette, "he has owed me this sum. It was labor lost to ask him for the money: he had always just made a payment; he put me off from St. Anthony's to St. John's, and from St. John's to St. Martin's, from St. Martin's to Christmas; in short, he dragged me from one end of the calendar to the other. As luck would have it, we lately lost our cow, and, not having the money to buy another, I went to Monsieur Belle-Plante, and I said to him:

"'This time, Monsieur Belle-Plante, I must absolutely have money.'

"'My dear Father Navette,' he answered, 'though you were to hang me as high as St. Martin's tower to make me find a sou, I could not find it.'

"'I won't hang you as high as St. Martin's tower,' I answered, 'especially as the bell-ringer would refuse me the keys; but I am going to bring suit against you.'

"'If you like, Father Navette,' he answered, 'I will give you a six months' note, and you can get it discounted.'

"A bit of paper instead of money was scarcely what I wanted; but hunger drives the wolf outside the woods; I was obliged to take his paper. As I was in the yard, he called me back.

"'By the way, Father Navette,' said he, 'an idea occurs to me; since it is your intention to get your note discounted, you may as well do it here as anywhere; that will save you a trip to the city.'

"'But,' I said to him, 'you told me just now that one might hang you as high as St. Martin's tower to make you find a sou.'

"'It is money that is not mine,' he answered; 'but as you are a worthy man, to oblige you I will take it upon myself to dispose of it.'"

The Flowers of June.

From Mrs. William Starr Dana's "According to Season." (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

BOUNDING one favorite meadow is a row of tall elms, and a winding, shadowy thicket. Here red-winged blackbirds flash in and out; song-sparrows give vent to their inexhaustible joy in life; and the restless brown thrasher catches the sunlight on its tawny coat. Just such a neighborhood is sure to tempt one away from the frank loveliness of the open fields for the mere possibilities of—I hardly know what. Perhaps some low-built nest, with its cluster of bluish-green, or white, brown-flecked eggs, guarded by the anxious mother-bird, whose high, terrified notes we fancy we recognize as we approach. Or perhaps one of the rarer orchids is hidden among the rushes beyond.

It is hardly too early to look for the showy lady's-slipper, loveliest of a lovely tribe. For an instant a group of tall stems and veiny leaves mislead us by their likeness to those of the lady's-slippers, and we look eagerly for the large, white and purple pouch only to discover the deception when we notice the ugly, greenish flowers of the false hellebore. We are more likely to be successful in our orchid hunt if we are less ambitious—if we are willing to content ourselves with the two oblong shining leaves and the low purplish clusters of the tway-blade, or with the long, dull spikes of the green orchids.

A grassy lane promises to lead to some distant woods. The wild grape flings its graceful festoons overhead. The air is heavy with the sweet-scented breath of its greenish flowers. Against the rail fence viburnums grow tall and thick, with toothed bright green leaves heavily veined on the under side, and flat clusters of white flowers on which are huddled little groups of sleepy fireflies. In and out twist the prickly stems, shining, decorative leaves and greenish blossoms of the cat-brier. The carrion-vine, too, sends forth its delicate young shoots, but the foul odor of its dull clustered blossoms, which has attracted all the carrion-liking flies in the neighborhood, drives us hurriedly from its vicinity.

About the trunks and close branches of slim cedars, twine the strong stems and rich, glossy leaves of the poison-ivy. If we are wise we tarry here no longer than by the carrion-vine, for the small white flowers, which are now fully open, are said to give forth peculiarly poisonous emanations under the influence of the June sun.

In the woods the maple-like leaves and white flowers of the laurestinus, or maple-leaved viburnum, are noticeable. In places the ground is white with the pretty dwarf cornel or bunchberry. Each low stem is crowned with four large white, or pink-tipped, petal-like leaves, which surround a cluster of tiny greenish flowers; from four to six oblong, pointed, green leaves are crowded in a circle below. This is the small sister of the well-known dogwood which so lately seemed to link June with January.

The shrubby dogwoods, some of which are still blossoming along the roadsides, bear a superficial resemblance to the viburnums; but their tiny flowers are minutely four-toothed, while those of the viburnums are five-lobed. Among fallen, moss-grown trunks we find the clover-like leaflets (resembling those of the common yellow wood-sorrel) and the white, pink-veined flowers of the wood-sorrel.

Along the sheltered roadside, as well as in woods, the delicate white bells of the pyrola droop from their slender stem in a fashion which suggests the lily-of-the-valley. The long, curved pistil which protrudes from each flower easily distinguishes this plant from the pipsissewa, which can also be recognized by its glossy, evergreen, occasionally white-veined leaves, and by its fragrant waxen flowers with violet-colored anthers.

Although the pyrola and pipsissewa are sometimes found growing together, the former usually requires a rather moist, rich soil, while the latter flourishes best in sandy places among decaying leaves. The pyrola is the first of the two to blossom, and its flowers can soon be found in great abundance, while those of the pipsissewa are hardly in their prime till July. With their disappearance I feel as if the curtain had been rung down upon the host of shy, lovely wood flowers of the early year.

The Price of Law-Books.

From H. E. Scott's "The Girl from Macoupin."
(Laird & Lee.)

"YES. You see there's a few law-books that I need. I have the list and Judge Strong advised that I go up to Chicago and get them, stay a week and visit the law schools there, and some of the courts. He said I d get new ideas, that would be a help to me. I had little idea I would be able to go, or to get the books. While we were talking Uncle Joel came in and the judge said to him: 'Mr. Bland, if your nephew's going to make a lawyer, there are some books he needs, that can be got in Chicago, and a trip there for a week, to visit the law schools and courts, at this time, would be of great help to him. I would give him letters to my old preceptors, Judge Driggs and others, that would insure his receiving attention.'

"'Humph!' said Uncle Joel, 'do you think he'll ever make much of a lawyer? He's most too soft-hearted, ain't he?'

"'Not he,' said the judge. He'll make an ornament to the profession. He's better posted now than half the lawyers on this circuit. I would rather take his opinion on a real estate title, sir, than of any lawyer in the country. You ought to know its value. He examines all your titles. Give the boy a chance. It will all come back.'

"'Make out the list of books for him, judge, and I'll send him Christmas,' said Uncle Joel. 'I guess I can spare money to pay his expenses there a week. Be sure and get in all the books he needs. If he must go, let him have all the advantage he can.'"

When Eben and Mark got to the buggy, Eben placed the box under the seat. "Now, Mark, I want you to find out jest how my daughter is situated, and if the life's too hard for her, or her circumstances ain't what you think they should be, I want you to bring her home.

Arrived in Palmyra, Mark put up his horse and entered the house. He found his uncle seated at his desk with the list of books that Judge Strong had made out for him.

"I've figured up the cost of those books, Mark. What do you think it amounts to?"

"Oh, perhaps twenty dollars, uncle. I fear more than you will care to pay."

"Twenty dollars? Why, Mark, it's sixty-five. There's eighteen volumes. Law-books, it seems, are expensive."

"Then I must give them up, I suppose."

"Give them up? Who spoke of giving them up? When I put my hand to the wheel I never turn back. I set out to make a lawyer of you. Judge Strong says you're a good one now. You've worked hard. You've proved yourself. You should have those books, sir, if they cost five hundred dollars. But, sir, if you proved a worthless vagrant, I'd not have spent a dime on you.

"Well, sixty-five for the books. I don't want you to stop at a second-class hotel. You see law throws you with people of expensive habits. Don't copy after 'em, but stop at a first-class house, then your car-fare, and perhaps you may find another book or two; anyway there will be other expenses. Here's five twenty dollar bills. One hundred dollars. Do you think that will see you through?"

"Why, uncle, how can I ever repay you?"

Down in the Meadows.

From Dr C. C. Abbott's "Travels in a Tree-Top."
(J. B. Lippincott Co.)

THE meadows are such a comprehensive place that no one knows where to begin, if the attempt is made to enumerate their features. There is such a blending of dry land and wet, open and thicket-grown, hedge and brook and scattered trees, that it is bewildering if you do not choose some one point for close inspection. From the tree-top I overlook it all, and try in vain to determine whether the azure strip of flowering iris or the flaunting crimson of the Turk's cap lilies is the prettier. Beyond, in damper soil, the glistening yellow of the sunflowers is really too bright to be beautiful; but not so where the water is hidden by the huge circular leaves of the lotus. They are majestic as well as pretty, and the sparse bloom, yellow and rosy pink, is even the more conspicuous by reason of its background. How well the birds know the wild meadow tracts! They have not forsaken my tree and its surroundings, but for one here I see a dozen there. Mere inky specks, as seen from my point of view, but I know them as marsh-wrens and swamp-sparrows, kingbirds, and red-wings, that will soon form those enormous flocks that add so marked a feature to the autumn landscape. It needs no field-glass to mark down the passing herons that, coming from the river-shore, take a noontide rest in the overgrown marsh.

I had once, on the very spot at which I was now looking, an unlooked-for adventure. For want of something better to do, I pushed my way into the weedy marsh until I reached a prostrate tree-trunk, that during the last freshet had stranded there. It was a wild place. The tall rose-mallow and wavy cat-tail were far above my head, and every trace of civilization was effectually shut out. It was as much a wilderness as any jungle in the tropics. Nor was I alone. Not a minute elapsed before a faint squeak told me that there were meadow-mice in the hollow log on which I sat. Then the rank grass moved, and a least bittern came into view and as quickly disappeared. I heard continually the cackle of the king-rail, and the liquid twittering of the marsh-wrens was a delight. The huge globular nests of these birds were everywhere about me; but the birds did not think of me as having any evil designs upon them, so they came and went as freely as if alone. This is bird-viewing that one seldom enjoys nowadays. Often, and very suddenly, all sound ceased, and every bird disappeared. I did not recognize the cause at first, but was enlightened a moment later. A large bird passed over, and its very shadow frightened the little marsh-dwellers. If not, the shadow and fright were a coincidence several times that morning. The day, for me, ended with the unusual chance of a close encounter with a great blue heron. I saw the bird hover for a moment directly overhead, and then, letting its legs drop, it descended with lead-like rapidity. I leaned backward to avoid it, and could have touched the bird when it reached the ground, it was so near. I shall never know which was the more astonished. Certainly, had it chosen, it could have stabbed me through and through.

I was glad to be again on drier land and in open country. There had been adventure enoug

NEW AND RECENT FICTION.

A DAUGHTER OF TO-DAY.

By Mrs. EVERARD COTES (Sara Jeannette Duncan), author of "A Social Departure," "An American Girl in London," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Few literary débutantes have met with the success obtained by Sara Jeannette Duncan's first book, "A Social Departure." Her succeeding books showed the same powers of quick observation and graphic description, the same ability to identify and portray types. Meantime, the author has greatly enlarged her range of experience and knowledge of the world. A true cosmopolite, London, Paris and Calcutta have become familiar to her, as well as New York and Montreal. The title of her new book indicates an immediately attractive theme, and the author's vigorous treatment of it has given us a book distinguished not only by acute study of character, command of local color, and dramatic force, but also by contemporaneous interest. This novel is Mrs. Cotes' most advanced and most important literary work.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

A Social Departure: How Orthodocia and I Went Round the World by Ourselves. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.75.

An American Girl in London. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

The Simple Adventures of a Memsahib. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

BENEFITS FORGOT.

By WALCOTT BALESTIER, author of "Reffey," "A Common Story," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"The story of Philip's struggle—of his defeat and his final triumph—is conceived and told in a masterly fashion, with perfect sympathy and yet with unfailing steadiness of vision; and some of the lesser episodes have the fine light-handed workmanship which was exclusively French, but is now American as well. 'Benefits Forgot' is a novel which has both subtlety and force."—London Spectator.

". . . The story is most interesting, not only in itself, but in its reflection of the still strange region of the world it depicts."—London Saturday Review.

THE GREATER GLORY.

A Story of High Life. By MAARTEN MAARTENS, author of "God's Fool," "Joost Avelingh," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"The Dutch novelist has made his right to stand with our best authors. . . . No review can do justice to the many deep and delicate studies in this careful, brilliant, and picturesque book."—London Chronicle.

"A most ingenious and clever novel, full of good things. . . . Contains most admirable character-sketches."—London Telegraph.

"The novel is excellent from its breadth of view, its insight into human motive, and shows an increase rather than the reverse of the artistic skill which sets its author apart from other writers of romance perhaps quite as gifted as himself."—London Morning Post.

Sixth Edition of

MANY INVENTIONS.

By RUDYARD KIPLING. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"'Many Inventions' will confirm Mr. Kipling's reputation. . . . We would cite with pleasure sentences from almost every page, and extract incidents from almost every story. But to what end? Here is the completest book that Mr. Kipling has yet given us in workmanship, the weightiest and most humane in breadth of view."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A NEW STORY BY EDNA LYALL.

Doreen.

THE STORY OF A SINGER.

By EDNA LYALL,

Author of "We Two," "Donovan," "In the Golden Days," "The Autobiography of a Slander," etc., etc.

Crown 8vo, Buckram Cloth, Ornamental, 512 Pages, $1.50.

A New Book by STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

Under the Red Robe.

A ROMANCE.

With 12 Full-Page Illustrations by R. CATON WOODVILLE.

12mo, Cloth, Ornamental, 1.25.

"It is a skilfully drawn picture of the times, drawn in simple and transparent English, and quivering with tense human feeling from the first word to the last. It is not a book that can be laid down at the middle of it. The reader once caught in its whirl can no more escape from it than a ship from the maelstrom."—Picayune, New Orleans.

"As perfect a novel of the new school of fiction as 'Ivanhoe' or 'Henry Esmond' was of theirs. Each later story has shown a marked advance in strength and treatment, and in the last Mr. Weyman . . . demonstrates that he has no superior among living novelists. . . . There are but two characters in the story—his art makes all other but unnoticed shadows cast by them—and the attention is so keenly fixed upon one or both, from the first word to the last, that we live in their thoughts and see the drama unfolded through their eyes."—World, N. Y.

"We need not say that the story is a dramatic one, full of thrilling situations. Mr. Weyman's style is delightful, and we have no hesitation in pronouncing the story a worthy successor of his deservedly popular 'A Gentleman of France.'"—Advertiser, Boston.

What Necessity Knows.

A Novel of Canadian Life and Character. By Miss L. DOUGALL, author of "Beggars All." Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.00.

"Is a curious novel. . . . The drawing of this girl's character is one of the strongest things we have seen in fiction. And Bates is almost as interesting. . . . It is a study of low and medium life socially considered, yet of high life in its truest and finest conception. The book is powerful."—Post, Chicago.

"Will hold the interest of any reader who once gets fairly into its current to the very end. . . . The working out of the plot is elaborate and full of original ingenuity."—Commercial Advertiser.

Montezuma's Daughter.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD, author of "She," "Allan Quatermain," "Nada the Lily," etc. With 24 full-page illustrations and vignette by Maurice Greiffenhagen. Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.00.

"Has a good deal of the quality that lent such interest to 'King Solomon's Mines' and 'Allan Quatermain.' . . . England, Spain, and the country which is now Mexico afford the field of the story, and a great number of most romantic and blood-stirring activities occur in each. . . . a successful story well constructed, full of devious and exciting action, and we believe that it will find a multitude of appreciative readers."—Sun, N. SONNETS AND OTHER POEMS. 16*mo*, $1.25.

They are on various topics: "New Fields of Art," "The Future of Fiction," "The Drift of the Drama," "The Influence of Ibsen," "Impressionism," "Local Color in Fiction," and so forth. Taken as a whole, the book is a vigorous plea for the recognition of youth, and a protest against the despotism of tradition. It is also the creed of a realist.

"Mr. Post's manner of telling these tales is inimitable. The atmosphere of the book in its relation to the localities where the scenes are laid is well nigh perfect. The different types of undergraduates are clearly drawn, and there is a dramatic element in most of the stories that is very welcome. For those who desire a faithful picture of certain phases of American student life it offers a noteworthy fund of instruction and entertainment."—Literary News.

A NEW BOOK BY RUDYARD KIPLING.

THE JUNGLE BOOK.

RUDYARD KIPLING, the author of "Plain Tales from the Hills," "Soldiers Three," etc., has written a book for young folks—a collection of stories that will prove as fascinating to "grown-ups" as to children. It is a book about India, of course; but not the India that Mr. Kipling has made familiar to the English-speaking world. This is a jungle book. There is no Simla in it; no Mulvaney, no Gadsbys, no 'rickshaws; but instead of these there is Kala Nag, the elephant, who took little Toomai to the dance of the wild elephants in the Garo hills—the dance that never man had seen before; Shere Khan, the tiger; old Baloo, the sleepy brown bear who teaches the wolf cubs the Law of the Jungle; Bagheera, the black panther; Kaa, the python, whose blow is like the blow of a steam-hammer, and many, many other jungle folk, whose doings as chronicled by Mr. Kipling fill over 300 pages. It will become a classic. Of the stories (nearly all of which are illustrated) the New York Christian Advocate says: "They are unique in literature and perfectly delightful in spirit." Price, $1.50.

Roger Williams,

THE Pioneer of Religious Liberty. By OSCAR S. STRAUS, author of "The Origin of the Republican Form of Government in the United States." Several biographies of Roger Williams have been written, most of which are now out of print. Since the publication of these earlier works much valuable additional information concerning the pioneer of religious liberty in America has come to light. Mr. Straus, the author of the present volume, has given careful study to the subject of Roger Williams and his work, and has endeavored in this biography to bring out the truth without fear or favor, and to present an impartial record of the character and work of this remarkable man, who was in the fullest sense the pioneer of religious liberty. Price, $1.25.

SOCIALISM AND . . . . SOCIAL REFORM.

BY

PROF. RICHARD T. ELY, LL.D.,

Author of "The Labor Movement," "Problems of To-Day," "Taxation in American States and Cities," "Social Aspects of Christianity," etc.

12mo, $1.50.

The initial chapters of this volume contain an historical and descriptive account of the progress of Socialism, and an exposition of the differences existing between the various schools. This is followed by an admirably fair exposition of the strength of Socialism, which is balanced by a critique of its weaknesses and a statement of the valid objections to the system. The last part of the volume is devoted to the discussion of "Practicable Social Reform," showing how far society can reasonably go in the direction of Socialism. Numerous appendices and an exhaustive Bibliography add to the value of the work. The author's views are presented in a clear, candid, and fearless manner, and furnish one of the best discussions of this subject.

Advance orders solicited.

Romance Switzerland. Teutonic Switzerland.

BY

WILLIAM D. McCRACKAN, M.A.,

Author of "The Rise of the Swiss Republic."

2 vols., 32mo, cloth, gilt top, per set, $1.50.

A new work on Switzerland in two volumes, the first volume covering French and Italian Switzerland and the second the German-speaking cantons.

It has been the aim of the author, who by long residence in the country is well fitted to write about it, to picture the real Switzerland and its people as they are, divested of the glamour of romance. His book will neither be a guide-book, nor the old-fashioned routine book of travel made up of transcripts from diaries or hastily written letters to indulgent friends.

It will rather be a series of individual sketches covering not only the salient points of attraction, but many places of interest out of the beaten track of the average tourist.

By GEORGE MOORE.

12mo, paper, 50c.; Cloth, $1.25.

"It may be as well to set down, beyond possibility of misapprehension, my belief that in 'Esther Waters' we have the most artistic, the most complete, and the most inevitable work of fiction that has been written in England for at least two years. . . . "Hardly since the time of Defoe have the habits and manners of the 'masses' been delineated as they are delineated here—with a particularity which at once convinces us of the writer's truthfulness and accuracy. . . . NEW POPULAR NOVELS.

IN THE CHINA SEA.

By SEWARD W. HOPKINS, author of "Two Gentlemen of Hawaii," etc. Illustrated by Pruett Share and H. M. Eaton. 12mo, 300 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50 cents.

"In the China Sea" is a story of the Pacific Coast, where the almond-eyed Mongolians have a quarter in every city, whence they communicate with their kindred of the Flowery Kingdom across the seas. The story deals with the disappearance of a beautiful girl, who is traced to Portland, Oregon, where she is embarked on a steamer bound for China. There is an exciting pursuit and search for this beautiful girl. The extraordinary things which happen, the sights and people met with and described, in detailing this pursuit and search, render this story one of the most interesting and exciting productions of modern fiction. It will rank with "King Solomon's Mines" and Jules Verne's wonderful narrations. An unknown people of strange customs, manners and appearance is introduced. A great war is started, carried on and brought to a conclusion. The invention of the author seems to be boundless, and the interest of the reader is stimulated by new and wonderful developments that crowd upon one another as the story proceeds.

INVISIBLE HANDS.

After the German of F. VON ZOBELTITZ, by translator of "The Little Countess," etc. Illustrated by James Fagan. 12mo, 350 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, $1.25; paper cover, 50 cents.

This is an excellent novel. The incidents are natural and probable, although uncommon; and the admirable plot is based on transactions in Berlin and in Italy, both German and Italian characters figuring in it. It is rare that anything so powerful and dramatic comes to us in the form of German fiction.

HER LITTLE HIGHNESS.

After the German of NATALY VON ESCHSTRUTH, author of "A Priestess of Comedy," "A Princess of the Stage," etc. Illustrated by James Fagan. 12mo, 303 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, $1.25; paper cover, 50 cents.

"Her Little Highness" is Baroness Eschstruth's latest book, and one of the most charming novels that has come from her pen. The little princess, who is the heroine of the story, is the heir of a ducal throne, which in Germany makes her a being apart from the rest of the world, which tends to heighten the piquancy of a being so very human and so very natural. Her little highness is a little woman from the top of her head to the tips of her toes, and her love of Valleral, a gay and frolicsome courtier, is the most natural thing in the world. However unsuitable for the husband of a princess Valleral may be, the reader of the novel will enjoy the situation that the love affair creates.

JULIEN GORDON'S NOVEL FROM THE GERMAN.

COUNTESS OBERNAU.

After the German by JULIEN GORDON, author of "A Diplomat's Diary," etc. Illustrated by James Fagan. 12mo, 281 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, $1.25; paper cover, 50 cents.

Wooing a Widow.

From the German of EWALD AUGUST KOENIG, by Mary A. Robinson, translator of "A Child of the Parish," etc. Illustrated by James Fagan. 12mo, 380 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, $1.25; paper cover, 50 cents.

Creatures of Other Days.

By Rev. H. N. HUTCHINSON, B.A., F.G.S., author of "Autobiography of the Earth," "Extinct Monsters," etc. With numerous illustrations. 8vo, cloth, $3.00.

". . . The disjointed and often fragmentary bones by which these animals are usually represented in museums convey no ideas whatever to the majority of those who see them. It is quite otherwise with such representations as the figures of this work; and if in some cases the idea conveyed may not be strictly correct, it offers a fair approximation, and at all events gives a vivid conception of some remarkable creature which in its main outlines cannot be far from the actual reality."—From the Preface, by Sir W. H. FLOWER, F.R.S.

Man's Place in Nature.

By THOMAS H. HUXLEY. The seventh volume of the author's "Collected Essays." 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

The Care and Feeding of Children.

A Catechism for the Use of Mothers and Children's Nurses. By L. EMMETT HOLT, M.D., Professor of Diseases of Children in the New York Polyclinic, Attending Physician to the Babies' Hospital, etc. 12mo, cloth, 50 cents.

Originally prepared for use in the Training School for Nursery Maids connected with the Babies' Hospital, New York, this manual has been elaborated in ways suggested by experience, and is now published by request of numerous persons interested. It will be found exceedingly useful, not only in similar institutions, but to mothers, either for themselves, or to be put in the hands of ordinary (untrained) child's nurses. The author's standing as a successful specialist of wide experience in children's diseases guarantees the character of the hints and instructions given.

Red Diamonds.

A Novel. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, author of "A History of Our Own Times," "Dear Lady Disdain," etc. Town and Country Library, No. 144. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"If Mr. McCarthy had never written another novel, 'Red Diamonds' would of itself have sufficed to gain for him a good reputation among writers of fiction. . . . It may be safely recommended, not only to those who like Mr. McCarthy's pleasant, social, and political stories, but to all who can appreciate a really strong tale of crime and its detection."—London Speaker.

"There is no one who will not welcome a fresh work from the pen of Mr. Justin McCarthy. His name is a guarantee of good workmanship. . . . 'Red Diamonds' shows no abatement of originality and imaginative power."—London Academy.

"The story is capital reading."—London Saturday Review.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE OUTING CO. have just issued the first volume of their new Outing Library, devoted to "Stories of the Turf." This library will be published quarterly.

THE HOME BOOK COMPANY, New York City, have just issued "Though the Gods and the Years Relent," a story of society interest, by Mrs. Edmund Nash Morgan.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL CO. will issue about June 20 a new book by Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, entitled "The Church and the Kingdom," consisting of two addresses, the one covered by the title, the other called "What is Christ's Law?" which was recently delivered before the graduating class of Oberlin College. A new book by Andrew Murray, entitled "Love Made Perfect," is also in preparation.

THE CASSELL PUBLISHING CO. will publish shortly "The Unpublished Letters of Count Cavour to Madame Circourt," translated by A. J. Butler. With her husband she belonged to the Liberal-Catholic school of Lacordaire and Montalembert, but her friends were of all schools in politics and religion. Her name appears in the memoirs of Mme. Swetchine, Mme. Mohl, and others who, like herself, knew how to bring together all sorts of persons on the common ground of intellectual eminence.

HARPER & BROS. will publish shortly "Carlotta's Intended, and other tales," by Ruth McEnery Stuart, in which will be included "Carlotta's Intended," dealing with the Italians in New Orleans and the Mafia; "Bud Zunts' Mail," "Christmas Geese," "Cæsar," "Aunt Delphi's Dilemma," and "Duke's Christmas." The volume will close with three poems, entitled "Rose," "Winnie," and "Voices." They have in preparation a volume of short stories by Charles Egbert Craddock, entitled "The Phantoms of the Footbridge."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS announce that they will publish immediately a Popular Edition of some of G. A. Henty's stirring stories of adventure. It will comprise "With Clive in India," "By England's Aid," "In Freedom's Cause," "With Lee in Virginia," "The Lion of St. Mark," "One of the 28th," "By Pike and Dyke," "In the Reign of Terror," "Under Drake's Flag," "With Wolf in Canada," and "The Congo Rovers." Each of the volumes will be fully illustrated, attractively bound in cloth, and sold at one dollar each.

MACMILLAN & CO. have just issued "The Natural History of the Christian Religion," a careful study of Christian teaching as developed from Judaism and converted into dogma, by Rev. William Mackintosh; "The Diary of a Journey Across Tibet," by Captain Hamilton Bowers; "The Protected Princes of India," a short account of India under "home rule," by William Lee Warner; "Ethics of Citizenship," by Prof. John McCunn, of University College, Liverpool; "The Aged Poor in England and Wales," by Charles Booth; and a new cheaper edition, with new preface, of Kidd's "Social Evolution."

ROBERTS BROTHERS have just ready two new books. "The Wedding Garment," by Louis Pendleton, is a story of life after death, relating the experiences of a young man awakening after earthly death to an existence in the other world —in an intermediate region between heaven and hell, where the good and evil live together, temporarily commingled. The book is written in a reverential spirit, and the evolution of the man's soul is full of interest. The other volume is "The Dancing Faun," by Florence Farr, a story with an original motif and dramatic action. It has a title-page by Aubrey Beardsley, which is a striking example of that artist's grotesque force.

Blackmore, R: D. Perlycross: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1894. c. 4+498 p. D. cl., $1.75. [1620

The story is set, sixty years since, in the village of Perlycross, in the heart of East Devon. Sir Thomas Waldron, the chief land-owner of the parish, dies, and shortly after the funeral it is discovered that his grave has been desecrated. Suspicion of the "body-snatching" falls chiefly on a young doctor, who loves Sir Thomas' daughter. The conflict of gossip and speculation throughout Perlycross, the measures taken by the Waldrons, the troubles of the lovers whose hopes are frustrated by the catastrophe—all these disturbing elements are finally harmonized by the unexpected solution of the mystery. The story is told with a wealth of detail, and the character-drawing shows Mr. Blackmore's accustomed skill.

"This tract was printed in 1849, when the writer was in his first rectorship in south Jersey. It was never published, having been intended for use in his own parish; to show the evils and wickedness of the divisions among Christians, and to answer questions constantly put to him, then a young person, is not division among Christians a good thing? Also as to the origin and history of the Episcopal Church in England and in this country."—Preface. Bishop Coxe found the tract so helpful that he advised its publication.

In 1892 Mr. Bradford published a paper called "Congress and the cabinet," which discussed the advisability of giving cabinet officers seats in Congress. Dr. Freeman Snow made an answer to this article in another called "Cabinet government in the United States," in which he stated that such government would not only be unconstitutional, but highly undesirable. In the present paper Mr. Bradford considers the subject further, and replies to Dr. Snow.

Bray, Claude. Sir Joseph's heir. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., [1894.] 3+181 p. S. (The Tavistock lib., no. 7.) pap., 50 c. [1623

"Sir Joseph's heir" finds his legacy hampered with the clause that he must be married. How he goes about it to accomplish this while leaving himself heart-whole and quite unfettered is the substance of a bright, if sometimes unnatural story.

The story of a little Irish girl, who when only twelve years old displayed great dramatic ability, and sung Irish ballads in a sweet, thrilling little voice. Her mother was an Englishwoman, and her father a literary man and a Fenian. When the story opens he is serving a five years' term in Portland Prison for a political offence. After his release the family emigrate to America where Doreen studies singing as a profession. The death of her father and mother leaves her at eighteen with a young family to care for. A crime she with others had witnessed in her youth shadows her whole life. The story breathes a deep love of Ireland.

"The awakening of Mary Fenwick" gave the heart-history of the mother, the present tale the love-life of the daughter, who is one of the strong, self-reliant, rather mannish girls of to-day. A beautiful picture of country life is given, and the characterization of the many individuals who finally work the desired result, is full of humor and pathos.

A cynical story, dealing with a wild young man, a rather pleasing villain, totally devoid of conscience, who flourishes like "the green bay tree" of the Bible. He begins his career in Harrow School, becomes a member of Parliament, and lives his life to prove that so far as success in this world is concerned truth and right have no chance in contest with worldly wisdom and unscrupulousness.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

THE PROFESSION OF BOOKSELLING.

THE CIRCULATING LIBRARY.—IV.

HAVING disposed of the question of the books, we may now consider the shelving. This may be treated as described in the chapter on the Arrangement and Care of Stock in "Profession of Bookselling," pp. 25–27; on general principles it should not be over seven feet six inches or eight feet high, and the shelves not more than ten inches apart. Seven to seven and a half inches usually gives ample width of shelf. For the fiction department the standard of a twelvemo may safely be adopted. The use of wall space only is considered by librarians wasteful, double-face bookcases giving maximum of capacity for a given floor area. A medium shelf length of two feet eight or nine inches will divide up space to advantage. The shelves should be of hard wood, or, if of soft wood, the edges should be stained—preferably to imitate oak—and be varnished. They should be kept scrupulously clean and free from dust. Once a year may probably be sufficient to thoroughly clean up a library in order to keep it in good repair. Of course, the daily dusting of the shelves and the weekly couple of hours looking into the corners must not be put aside. Nothing so disgusts patrons as the dusty corners not infrequently found in circulating libraries. The good customers are apt to be eager book-readers, and will take pleasure in prowling around a library looking for some treasure, which generally lies forgotten in some corner. For these the road must be kept clean and inviting. Too much stress cannot be laid on the first principle that should govern all libraries—their entire neatness. Let the bookseller-librarian see to this jealously, and not overlook the annual, or better still, the semi-annual overhauling. A good plan is to close the library, say three days once a year. As Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays will be generally found to be dull days, the library might therefore be closed on the evening of Monday and opened Friday morning. The books can then be dusted, freshly covered and labelled, and the shelves thoroughly cleaned, oiled, or painted and varnished. The slow-letting books and duplicate copies that have seen their best days may be weeded out, and either thrown into the waste-paper heap or put aside to give room for fresher stock.

Before a book, whether it is in a cloth jacket or in paper covers, is loaned, it should be provided with a library cover, on which is to be printed or attached a distinctive label and the rules of the library. A cover, though ignored by some circulating libraries, pays for the outlay in many ways. It keeps the books clean and saves wear, and advertises the bookseller's store as well. The best cover will always be found the cheapest—and this will be one of strong, heavy, dark paper, such as are furnished by P. F. Van Everen and W. B. Harison, both of New York. Possibly these may cost more than the ordinary light manilla, which gives no wear and soils easily; but experience will prove that the more expensive paper will be worth twice the difference in cost.

A light green, red, or yellow label will probably be found most striking on a dark cover. Whatever the color adopted it should be retained, that it may become a sort of trade-mark for the library. On the back, in a panel within an eighth of an inch from the top, should be written in a clear, legible hand, the title of the book, and in the middle, the "call number," that is, the number given to the book in the library catalogue and by which it may be called for. On the side should be affixed the label containing the printed rules and conditions under which the book is loaned. For such a label the following may serve as samples:

NOTES ON EARLY ENGLISH EDITIONS OF THE BIBLE.—II.*

THE first complete Bible printed in the English language was translated by Myles Coverdale from the German Bible of Luther and the Latin Vulgata, and was published October 4, 1535. Coverdale was born in 1488, at Coverham, Yorkshire. Unlike Tyndale, whose work was inspired solely by individual enthusiasm and self-devotion, Coverdale's translation was made by the order and with the encouragement of others, his chief supporters being Sir Thomas More and Lord Thomas Cromwell, the minister of Henry VIII. The first edition of Coverdale's Bible was printed abroad by Jacob Van Meeteren in Antwerp, in small folio, fifty-seven lines to a page, but the importation of bound books being prohibited, as already mentioned, the loose sheets were sent to the bookseller. James Nicolson, of Southwark, and bound there, The second edition, published and printed by Nicolson in 1537, also in folio, was the firs complete English Bible printed in England. There were many pirated reprints of Coverdale's translation; one was published in quarto form in the same year as the original second edition, and there was a reprint of his New Testament published in 16° in 1538, which, however, bears no printer's imprint. The so-called "Hollybushe edition," a Latin-English New Testament, printed by Nicolson in 1538, is really only a reprint of Coverdale's work, to which the printer gave a new name in order to make it appear as a new translation,

Like his predecessor Tyndale, Coverdale also had to suffer from the fierce opposition of the priesthood against the translators and publishers of the Bible, while the many changes in the policy of the government placed him in frequent peril. In 1540, when his patron Cromwell was executed, he fled to Bergzabern, in Bavaria, where—although formerly a Catholic priest—he married and established himself. On the accession of Edward VI. he returned to England, and was made one of the royal chaplains; at the opening of the reign of Mary Tudor, "the bloody," he was seized and imprisoned, but by the aid of powerful friends escaped the death penalty and was sentenced only to exile; finally, when Mary had been succeeded by Elizabeth, he returned again to London, where he remained until his death in 1569, at the age of eighty-one.

The next English translation of the Scriptures is known as "Matthew's Bible." It was printed in 1537, probably also by Jacob Van Meeteren, though the printer's name is not given, and bears on its title-page, as translator, the name of Thomas Matthew. This, however, was only a pseudonym for John Rogers, a friend of Tyndale's, who assumed it while in Antwerp to make his work appear as an original translation and to hide the fact that it was substantially a reprint of Tyndale's. But it was not even an exact reprint, being rather a compilation made up from parts of Tyndale's and Coverdale's translations, and from a French Bible printed at Neufchâtel in 1835, by Pierre de Wingle. This edition, as well as its reprints, made in 1549 by Thomas Raynolde, William Hyll, John Daye, and William Seres, is known as the "Bugge Bible," from the fact that one of the verses of the 101st psalm was translated to read "So that thou shalt not neede be afrayd for any bugges (instead of ghosts or terrors) by night." Rogers was one of the many victims of the fierce persecution that distinguished Mary's reign, and in 1555 was put to death "as a seditious preacher."

Rogers' work was succeeded in 1539 by a Bible printed in London by John Bydell for Thomas Bartlett; though it bore the name of Richard Taverne as translator, it was little more than a reprint of previous translations.

More important and interesting than any of these was the "Great" Bible, or "Cromwell" Bible, of which Lord Thomas Cromwell was the originator and patron. Of this no less than seven editions were printed from April, 1539, to December, 1541. The first edition was printed by the famous London printers Grafton & Whitchurch; on the title-page the translators are given as "dyuerse excellent learned men, expert in the forsayde (Hebrew and Greek) tongues." Who these were is not known; but the editor and perhaps the only translator was Myles Coverdale. Cromwell made strenuous efforts to popularize this edition, as the people in general were hostile to a vernacular Bible, and several penal laws were enacted to force it into general use. Henry VIII. issued a proclamation in its behalf; the archbishops urged the clergy to buy and use it;

[* Rewritten and condensed from the original MSS. of an exhaustive essay by Ed. Ackermann, under the same general—commanded "that one book of the whole Bible of the largest volume should be set up within the church that ye have the care of, whereat your parishioners may most commodiously resort to the same and read it." In order to prevent competition and make a monopoly of this edition, Cromwell induced the king to prohibit the printing and publication of any English Bibles for the term of five years, and to bestow the privilege to Grafton & Whitchurch for this period. Cromwell mentions this Bible as "the largest volume," and it might well be called so, as its pages are fifteen inches high and more than nine inches wide. It had been his pride to make the book a typographical wonder, as, indeed, it proved to be. Therefore, when in 1538 the translation was finished and ready for the press, he sent Grafton and Coverdale to Paris, to have the typographical work done by the famous French printer François Regnault, as the art of printing was then further advanced in France than in England. Although Henry VIII. entered into direct communication with the king of France and procured a special license to have the work done in Paris, it nevertheless met with serious opposition, and the authorities of the French douane would have prevented the exportation of the printed sheets to England, but for the prompt action of Dr. Bonner, archbishop of Leicester, at that time English ambassador at the French court. In this capacity he was privileged to have his personal effects passed through the customs without inspection, and the printed sheets as they left the press were in this way sent to England as part of the ambassador's baggage. Before the work was done, however, Francis I. prohibited the printing and commanded that the completed sheets be confiscated. Fortunately his officers, instead of destroying these sheets sold them as waste paper to a dealer, by whom they were sold to Grafton, and finally by him smuggled successfully to London. By Cromwell's orders the press and type were bought from Regnault and also conveyed to London, where the whole work was at last completed by Grafton & Whitchurch. This first edition of 1539 sold at ten shillings unbound, and twelve shillings bound. It has many marked characteristics, which distinguish it from the subsequent reprints. The numerous wood-cuts have borders which are missing in the later editions; the index-hands in the margins and text have ruffles about the wrist, instead of cuffs; the stars are all six-pointed, while in later editions some are five-pointed; the Apocrypha title-page (there called Hagiographa) has the same border as the first title-page, and the New Testament title-page has a border of six wood-cuts, which is not found in any other edition. Of the six subsequent editions, that appeared from 1539 to the end of 1541, only the fourth. of 1540, is noticeable, as bearing Cromwell's coat-of-arms on the title-page. From 1541 to 1549 no new edition appeared, the stock being probably sufficient to supply the demand, but many reprints were made by various printers.

Cromwell's supremacy was not of long duration. The story of his disgrace and fall is a familiar one, and in July, 1540, the haughty earl met his death on the scaffold. Naturally his fate affected the fortunes of his friends; Grafton was imprisoned for a time, but soon released, and later, with his partner Whitchurch, was appointed printer to the king by Edward VI., with special

A UNIVERSAL INDEX OF SCIENTIFIC LITERATURE.

A "UNIVERSAL Index to the World's Technical and Scientific Literature" is announced for publication in Vienna. It is to be published in that city by Henry Wien, and F. A. Brockhaus of Leipzig will be general agent. The work as contemplated is intended to furnish a comprehensive index to the literature of scientific subjects. It will include periodicals as well as books, and is meant to represent all the known literature that has appeared in any part of the world on technical or scientific topics. It will be published in weekly parts, and the plan of arrangement comprises: 1, a classified list of all technical and scientific periodicals arranged according to place of publication, giving title, terms of subscription and full lists of contents; 2, a list of books and other publications dealing with scientific or technical subjects. It is hoped that each weekly part may be devoted to one special subject or to several affiliated subjects. Five parts are already projected, covering the chief mechanic arts, mining, chemistry and medicine; further parts are in preparation.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

DECISION IN THE SUIT OF MAYNARD, MERRILL & CO. vs. W. B. HARISON.

JUDGE SHIPMAN, in rendering a decision reversing the preliminary injunction obtained by the plaintiffs in their suit to restrain the defendant from selling certain of their books bought at a fire sale, remarked that the conclusion of the court was "that upon the facts stated in the bill and in the affidavits, the complainant has no remedy under the copyright statutes of the United States, and as both parties are deemed to be citizens of the State of New York, the complainant is without remedy in the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, and that therefore the order of the Circuit Court for a preliminary injunction is reversed

COMMUNICATIONS.

A PLEA FOR FREE TRADE IN BOOKS.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

WHILE taxes are to be removed from works of art, the duty of 25 % on new English books is allowed to remain—an unjust discrimination in favor of the wealthy classes, who can afford to buy statuary and paintings, against our intelligent but poor scholars. Knowledge was assessed prior to 1846 at the rate of 20 to 30 cents per pound, according to its style of binding; from 1846 to 1862 the duty has varied between 8 % and 20 %; since then the war tax of 25 % has remained unchanged. In Europe books are taxed only by Spain, Italy, and Turkey; in almost every other civilized country they are free. We imported last year the value of $2,050,306, while we exported of American books $2,341,023 worth, both figures including "engravings . . . and other printed matter." A large portion of imported books come through the mail, causing more trouble and annoyance, in proportion to the revenue, than almost any other imported article; besides, these duties cannot be collected on terms of equality, because they are assessed without the assistance of invoices by appraisers, who seldom know the real value.

There exists no excuse for this barbarous tax, since the right to this copy has been secured to the author by solemn international agreement. I do not believe that reputable American writers have ever asked for the protection by taxes of the product of their brains. We do not prohibit foreign men of letters from writing books in our country, nor do we ask them to pay a royalty on what they may publish here. The question remains if it is expedient to abolish duties on articles from which books are made. I believe we can. Common printing paper used by the daily press is made in the United States at so low a cost that it can be, and is sold at about two cents per pound, which is so much cheaper than the product of other countries that we export large quantities of it.

An English manufacturer, who recently visited us and inspected the Hudson River Paper-Mills, found that, while we pay workmen more per diem, the cost of labor in a ton of our printing paper was only one-half of what it costs him.

Of fine qualities, small quantities of writing, marbleized and tissue papers are still imported. The aggregate value of all kinds, including manufactures of paper, amounted last year to $3,383,479—a mere trifle when compared with the value of our home product. William Bradford, the printer, established the first paper-mill near Philadelphia, as early as 1690, so that this can hardly be called an infant industry requiring continued protection.

No important interest would suffer if paper were made free.

If the duty should not be abolished it is said a trust may be formed to control the paper-mills of the country for the purpose of enhancing the price.

We make printers' ink from the black of natural gas and naphtha cheaper than it can be made in other countries, the material being superabundant. The duty, reduced from 30 % to 20 %, should be entirely abrogated.

The duties on leather have practically been left untouched at 20 %; our present census shows to what proportion this industry has grown. The value of the product amounts to about $170,000,000 annually, against an importation of about $6,000,000, chiefly consisting of calfskins for shoes, and colored morocco for binding books. Bark, sumac, and other materials for making leather are among the most prolific products of our own soil. Growers of wheat may as well ask for protection as curriers of leather; if duties were abolished I doubt if more would be imported. The abrogation would only stimulate our tanners to finish better grades in competition with the foreign article.

The duty on binders' cloth is fixed at 35 %. It is made by a "trust," which controls every known factory, and now produces about 75 % in this country and 25 % in Europe of the quantity we use; it could all be made here, and probably will be, irrespective of the tariff. We have now binders whose work is almost equal to work made in England; if books were free, they would learn in time to compete with Rivière in Paris.

While not much used for the quality of books which we import, there is another article which may have caused hesitation about abolishing this duty. I refer to paper pulp made chiefly from spruce logs, which are cut into chips or blocks and ground by machinery driven by water-power. We have a large supply of the timber, and there is no lack of water-power. That pulp needs no protection is evidenced by the fact to which I have referred, that we export the printing paper which is made from it. The value of the annual production here of pulp is estimated at $33,000,000, against an annual import of about $2,000,000. If the abolishment of a duty on this article should curtail our home production—I do not believe it would—it would be a blessing in disguise, because we would thereby save the spoilation of our forests, an argument which may be applied with the same force to the free admission of lumber generally.

While, on account of their anxiety to reconcile protected manufacturers, the framers of a new tariff find it difficult to cheapen the necessities of the life of our laborers, some feeble efforts are at least being made in that direction; but no spokesman worthy of the name comes forward to espouse the cause of our poor student; his books must continue to be taxed to enrich the manufacturer of paper pulp, printers' ink, and binders' cloth. LOUIS WINDMÜLLER.

OBITUARY.

THOMAS NILES.

THOMAS NILES, one of the oldest members of the American publishing trade, and long an associate of the firm of Roberts Brothers, of Boston, died on the 18th ult., in Perugia, an Italian town about 86 miles north of Rome. He was about seventy years old, having been born in Boston in 1825. After passing through the Latin school, young Niles became a clerk in the "Old Corner Book-Store," and under the direction of Ticknor & Fields obtained during the sixteen years of his apprenticeship the training as bookseller and publisher that he subsequently turned to such excellent use in the shaping of the policy of the house with which he was connected during the better part of his life, and which distinguished the character of its publications from the very start. For a part of the time that he was with Ticknor & Fields he had the entire charge of their publishing business a position in which he was succeeded by James R. Osgood when he became a member of the publishing house of Whittemore, Niles & Hall. On the dissolution of the latter firm he joined his fortunes to that of the new publishing house of Roberts Brothers, of which, after a few years' service, he became a partner in 1872. Mr. Niles was one of the first to import English editions which it would not pay to reprint. His excellent discrimination and judgment, backed by skilful handling of books, made the reputation of several American authors, notably that of Louisa M. Alcott, and he introduced Jean Ingelow, Philip Gilbert Hamerton, Edwin Arnold, George Meredith, Balzac, and the author of "Ecce Homo" to the American public. Mr. Niles was exceedingly diffident and sensitive as to notoriety of any kind, and it is therefore impossible to give at this writing more than the above meagre account of his business life.

BRYAN H. HODGSON, the English Orientalist, died in London on May 23, in his ninety-fourth year.

KURD VON SCHLOEZER, the great German diplomatist, historian, and philologist, died Sunday, May 13, at Berlin.

ANDREW J. GRAHAM, author of the "Graham System of Phonography," died in Orange, N. J., on May 19, aged sixty-four years.

MISS ALICE KING, the blind authoress, has just died at the age of fifty-five. Miss King contributed for many years to The Argosy, Home Chimes, and other magazines.

WILLIAM MCCULLAGH TORRENS, author of "Industrial History of Free Nations," etc., died in London April 26, of injuries received in a street accident.

EDWARD JACKSON LOWELL, a distant cousin of James Russell Lowell, who has done some fine historical work, died in Boston May 11, at the age of forty-nine.

REV. DR. EDWARD BRIGHT, editor of The Examiner, the leading Baptist newspaper in the United States, died at his home in New York City on May 17, aged eighty-six years. For almost half a century he had been prominently identified with Baptist interests in America.

THOMAS C. LATTO, the best-known Scottish poet in this country, died at his residence in Brooklyn, on Saturday, March 12. He was born in 1818, and early in life became one of the group of writers that contributed to Blackwood's Magazine in its palmy days, and helped make it famous.

RABBI A. KOHUT, pastor of the synagogue of the congregation Ahawath Chesed in New York City, died on Friday, May 25. Rabbi Kohut was a native of Hungary, and had only been in this country since 1885. He was the author of several important works, of which the most notable is the "Aruch Completum," a Talmudic dictionary, into which he put twenty-three years of labor.

PROF. GEORGE JOHN ROMANES, a leading English scientist, died suddenly at Oxford on May 23. He was born in Canada May 20, 1848 and was a graduate of Cambridge University. He was an active contributor to scientific journals, and published several important books. Perhaps his most notable works are: "Christian Prayer and General Laws," 1874; "Animal Intelligence," 1882; "Charles Darwin, His Character and Life," 1882; "Jelly-fish, Star-fish, and Sea-urchins," 1885; and "Mental Evolution in Man," 1888.

THE Scotsman announces the death of Mr. Thomas G. Stevenson, one of the last links between the publishing trade in Edinburgh of today and that of the earlier decades of the present century. Mr. Stevenson's father, who served his apprenticeship with Ballantyne, was brought a good deal into contact with Sir Walter Scott, and figured as "Dear Jock" in the letters of the author of "Waverley;" and Mr. Stevenson himself was fond of relating his own personal experiences of Sir Walter.

EDMUND YATES, the well-known journalist, critic, and novelist, died suddenly of apoplexy in London on May 19. He was the son of the actor, Frederick Yates, was born in London July, 1831, and began business life in the London post-office, but soon devoted himself entirely to newspaper work and general literary pursuits. He was dramatic critic of the London Daily News, was editor of Tinsley's Magazine, and a leading contributor to All the Year Round. In 1874 he founded his famous London society journal, The World, which he edited to the end of his life. He also contributed to leading New York dailies. He was the author of several plays and numerous successful books. The first of the latter was "My Haunts and Their Freqenters," published in 1854. Among his most popular novels were "Broken to Harness," 1864; "Business of Pleasure" and "Running the Gauntlet," 1865; "Kissing the Rod," 1866; "Wrecked in Port," 1869, and "The Yellow Flag," 1874.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

STONE & KIMBALL have published the first number of The Chap-Book (May 15), which is planned to have, semi-monthly, at least one signed review in every number, besides several short notices and literary essays. In addition there will be poems and occasional short stories by both well-known and unknown writers. Among the authors whose work is arranged for are Gilbert Parker, Eugene Field, Bliss Carmen, Hamlin Garland, Archibald Lampman, George Santayana, and many others. The next issue will contain a review of Gilbert Parker's "A Lover's Diary," by Richard Henry Stoddard.

THE bound volume of The Century Magazine, (vol. XLVII), comprising the numbers from November, 1893, to April, 1894, once more gives an idea of the broad field covered by this magazine. It contains about 350 illustrations, including Timothy Cole's exquisite engravings of the masterpieces of Rembrandt, Jan Steen, Frans Hals, and other "Old Dutch Masters"; full-page reproductions of paintings by well-known American artists, portraits of Alma Tadema, George Michel, Jean François Millet, etc. In this half year the magazine has made rich and entertaining contributions to biography, and fiction, always one of the strong features of The Century, is ably represented by Mark Twain, Mary Hallock Foote, Joel Chandler Harris, Charles Egbert Craddock, Kate Douglas Wiggin, Sara Orne Jewett, Howard Pyle, and many other prominent American writers.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THOMAS NAST, the cartoonist, it is reported, has gone to England to make political cartoons for the Pall Mall Gazette, of London.

M. JEAN AICARD, who has been elected president of the French Société des Gens de Lettres, is a successful poet, dramatist, and story-writer. Several of his works have been crowned by the Academy.

H. T. FINCK is said to be at work upon a book devoted to Japan. It takes some courage to write something that shall be new about this land, which has proved such a mine of material to authors. Lafcadio Hearn is also thus engaged.

EDWARD DICEY has been staying for the last three months in Bulgaria, with a view to obtaining materials for a work on the social and economic conditions of this very curious and interesting community. He is expected to return shortly.

PIERRE LOTI has gone to accumulate literary material in Egypt and the Holy Land. His plan includes a caravan journey through the desert; and he will end his travels by a visit to the Crimea and Moscow. He has six months' leave from his ship.

ARCHIBALD CLAVERING GUNTER seems to take the rejection of his name by the Authors' Club with placid good-humor. From the heights of successful authorship he throws a few hints to some of the authors who, while received in the Authors' Club, are seldom heard of outside of it.

A BRONZE tablet to the memory of E. P. Roe, the novelist, was unveiled at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson May 29. The tablet was procured by public subscription and is placed in a natural wall of rock in the E. P. Roe Memorial Park. The Roe family was represented by two of the novelist's sons, Eltinge and Murray Roe. The orator of the day was the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, of Brooklyn. The other speakers were Hamilton Gibson, the Rev. Dr. Teal, of Elizabeth, N. J., and Mr. Frank Dodd, of Dodd, Mead & Co.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

GINN & Co. will have ready early this month "The Philosophy of Teaching," by Arnold Thompkins.

JOHN D. WATTLES & Co., Philadelphia, have just ready "Studies in Oriental Social Life," by H. Clay Trumbull.

HENRY JAMES is about to issue two comedies, "The Album" and "The Reprobate," in a volume entitled "Theatricals."

THE first English-Jewish dictionary that has ever been compiled, a work of 800 pages, has just been published by Jacob Saphirstein. Its editor is Alexander Harkavy.

HENRY ALTEMUS, Philadelphia, announces that by arrangement with Ward, Lock & Bowden he will bring out in this country an edition of "A Book of Strange Sins," by Coulston Kernahan.

C. B. LICHTENSTEIN, 36 Columbus Ave., Boston, is prepared to do all kinds of engraving and plate printing for the trade. He has special facilities for printing etchings, photogravures, and large plates.

THE largest collection in existence of the smallest books in the world is said to be that owned by M. Georges Salomon, a Parisian amateur, of whose seven hundred little volumes none is larger than one inch wide by two high.

FRANK VINCENT DU MOND is now on a tour in Europe in the interest of Harper & Brothers, making illustrations for a series of papers on "Literary Landmarks," by Mr. Laurence Hutton, which will appear in their magazine.

THE BLOCH PUBLISHING AND PRINTING CO. will have ready in June "Introduction to the Talmud," by Rev. Dr. M. Mielziner, intended to facilitate the study of this most remarkable literary production of antiquity. It will be published by subscription.

MACMILLAN & Co. have made arrangements with George Allen for the publication of Ruskin's "Verona and other Lectures" in America, and the work will be issued simultaneously early this month. The special edition on large paper is already subscribed for.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD's paper on "Association: the dominating need of man and the keynote of social science," read before the American Philosophical Society, Philadelphia, March 16, 1894, has been issued in pamphlet form. It covers eight pages.

THE TREMONT PUBLISHING CO., Tremont, Ohio, have issued a little book called "Small Talk About Business," originally intended for bankers, but full of suggestions that may be read with profit by every man and woman engaged in mercantile pursuits.

THE title of Mrs. Burton Harrison's story, "A Bachelor Girl," has been changed to "A Bachelor Maid," some one else having already used the former. If, as Mr. Spofford says, there is no copyright in a title, why should not Mrs. Harrison keep the first and better name? The story will be begun in the July Century, and will be published in book form by the Century Company next fall.

WALTER BLACKBURN HARTE, who made many friends with his "In a Corner at Dodsley's" papers, in the New England Magazine, is writing a series of amusing papers in The Literary Weekly on "The Jacobites in Boston," which will be of interest in all social circles. The articles deal with the principles, purposes, and progress of this interestingly fantastic Boston society in a most humorous fashion.

WITHIN a few years a mass of documents and other material has been published in France that throws new light on the inside history of the Maximilian episode in Mexico. John Heard, Jr., has made a study of this episode, and has written for the June Scribner the first accessible account of it which has appeared in an American periodical. Marchetti and Gilbert Gaul illustrate it with a series of historical pictures.

D. C. HEATH & Co., Boston, have in press for immediate issue in their Heath's Modern Language Series Halévy's "L'Abbé Constantin," edited with introduction and notes by Professor Thomas Logie, of Rutgers College. No one can fail to admire the charm of this easy tale, which is one of the best in modern French literature. A few sentences, that might be regarded as objectionable in a text for schools, have been omitted.

THE fashion of binding books in cloth was, according to a writer in Notes and Queries, the invention of Mr. R. E. Lawson, of London, and the first book bound in cloth was a manuscript volume of music, which was subsequently purchased by Mr. Alfred Herbert, the marine artist. On this volume being shown to the late Mr. Pickering, who was at that time (1823), printing a diamond edition of the classics, he thought the material would be admirably adapted for the covers of the work. The cloth was purchased, and 500 copies of the diamond classics were covered by Mr. Lawson with glue.

MERRILL & BAKER, New York City, are making a two-volume edition of George Eliot's "Mill on the Floss," with twelve original photogravures; also an edition of "Anacreon" on hand-made paper with eleven photogravures; a four-volume octavo subscription edition of McCarthy's "History of Our Own Times," with twenty-four photogravure portraits of leading English statesmen, and a twelvemo trade edition of the same; a new edition of twelve of Ruskin's most popular books; an edition of More's "Utopia," with four rare old portraits; and an edition of Judge Tourgee's "An Outing with the Queen of Hearts."

W. B. SAUNDERS, Philadelphia, calls special attention to the works of Dr. William Pepper, which are among the most valuable in his long list of medical literature. Dr. Pepper has recently resigned his position as provost in the University of Pennsylvania in order to devote himself even more exclusively to his literary labors. The "American Text-Book of Practice," "American Text-Book of Gynecology," "American Text-Book of Surgery," and "American Text-Book on Diseases of Children," are acknowledged as authorities by all the leading physicians. Mr. Saunders also announces a New Aid Series of "Manuals for Students and Practitioners," which are to be written by leading specialists to put desired information within the means of struggling students.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. will publish in the late autumn "A Victorian Anthology," by Edmund C. Stedman, who is making an inclusive but choice selection from the entire field of British poetry since the beginning, in 1837, of the present reign—the field surveyed and criticised in his "Victorian Poets." This anthology has long been called for, and is really needed. Not a few collections have been made by amateurs availing themselves of the aid given in Mr. Stedman's critical survey, but none of them satisfactory from his point of view. The many volumes of Miles' "Poets and Poetry of the Century" are encyclopædic, but there is no one-volume anthology compiled with taste and knowledge. The work will be of the same size and style with the Houghton "Cambridge Longfellow," a book justly pronounced a model of its kind.

THE Russian government has recently granted a concession for the establishment in St. Petersburg of an "International Central Bureau for newspapers and journals and the accepting of subscriptions and advertisements." It is proposed to make this a general agency for the handling of foreign periodicals, including the taking of subscriptions and advertisements at publishers' prices. Efforts will also be made to pass the publications through the censor's office as speedily as possible, as the delays in the censorship form one of the most serious obstacles to the circulation of foreign publications in Russia. The concession was granted to Councillor Cyrillus von Berg, of St. Petersburg, but the organizer and manager of the proposed bureau is N. Mattison, of 20 Nevsky Prospect, proprietor of the "first international central advertisement and subscription office and translating bureau" established in Russia, dating from 1870.

THE Loubat prizes at Columbia College for 1893 have been awarded as follows: First prize to Henry Adams for his "History of the United States of America During the Administrations of Madison and Jefferson," in nine volumes; second prize to A. F. Bandelier for his "Report of Investigations Among Indians of the Southwestern States," in two volumes. The Loubat prizes of $1000 and $400 were established at Columbia College by Joseph F. Loubat for the best works published in the English language upon the history, geography, archæology, ethnology, philology or numismatics of North America. The prizes are awarded every five years, and the competition is open to all persons whether connected with the college or not, and whether citizens of the United States or of any other country. All works entered in the competition must rest on original research and constitute a distinct contribution to science.

The Best Key to Educational Books.

THE

American Educational Catalogue

For 1894,

whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its twenty-fifth year, and that upwards of claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school-books.

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most convenient order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue is made entirely new each year, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and all new books (ready or to be ready for the Fall) are added in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

NOTES IN SEASON.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have in press "An Easter Vacation," a story by Moira O'Neill; also "Everybody's Fairy Godmother," by Dorothy Quigley.

THOMAS W. DURSTON & SON, Syracuse, N. Y., will publish on the 20th "The American Musical Directory," containing a list of all the manufacturers of musical instruments, including piano manufacturers, music dealers, and music publishers of the United States and Canada.

HARPER & BROS.' latest books include "Perlycross," by R. D. Blackmore; "A Traveller from Altruria," by W. D. Howells; "From the Easy Chair," third series, by George William Curtis; "Pastime Stories," by Thomas Nelson Page; and "A Likely Story," a farce, by Mr. Howells.

LEE & SHEPARD will publish a new edition of Baron Nils Posse's "Educational Gymnastics," under the title of "Special Kinesiology of Educational Gymnastics." They also announce a book on mushrooms, by Captain Julius A. Palmer; "The Boy's Own Guide to Fishing, Tackle-Making and Fish-Breeding," by John Harrington Keene; "A Modern Magdalene," another novel on the social evil, by Virna Woods; and new editions of Prof. Dolbeare's "Matter, Ether, and Motion," and Sam Walter Foss' "Back Country Poems."

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY have just ready the first and second volumes of the new Present-Day Primers, namely, "Early Church History: a sketch of the first four centuries," by J. V. Bartlet, lecturer on church history in Oxford; and "The Printed English Bible," by Richard Lovett. The latter is illustrated by reproductions of title-pages and other portions of Tindale's, Coverdale's, and other sixteenth-century Bibles. Each volume will be complete in itself, and will be the work of a writer specially competent to deal with the subject treated.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS add to their announcements for the summer season as follows: In the Autonym Library, No. 2, "Mad Sir Uchtred," by S. R. Crockett, author of "The Raiders," etc.; in the Incognito Library, No. 2, "The Honorable Stanbury and Others," by Two; No. 3, "Helen," by Vocs. They will begin in July the publication, under the title of The Hudson Library, of a new series of fiction. The volumes will be issued bi-monthly, and the series will be registered as second-class matter. The July volume will be "Love and Shawl-Straps," by Annette L. Noble, whose "Uncle Jack's Executors," issued some years back, made for itself a distinctive success. "Eyes Like the Sea," which they also have in press, is the latest work of the veteran Hungarian author, Maurice Jókai, who is regarded by his countrymen as the first of Hungarian writers. The story is largely autobiographical, but is none the less a most stirring and dramatic romance. "No Enemy: the story of a gentleman tramp," by Elbert G. Hubbard, has a certain timeliness in connection with the attempts now being made on the part of organized tramps to constitute themselves a political power. The volume will contain twenty-eight full-page illustrations. "On and Off the Saddle: characteristic sights and scenes from the great northwest to the Antilles," is a series of graceful travel sketches by a well-known New Yorker, who uses for his volume the pseudonym of Lispenard Rutgers. In the Story of the Nations Series the next volume will be "The Story of South Africa," comprising the Cape Colony, Natal, the Orange Free State, the South African Republic, and all other territory south of the Zambesi, by George M. Theal, of the Cape Colony Civil Service. "The Story of Africa" will form a companion volume to "The Story of Australasia," recently issued, and will make an important addition to the varied history of the British colonies.

Baylor, Frances Courtenay. Claudia Hyde: a novel. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1894. c. 2+442 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1734

The London Times in the early eighties contained an advertisement of farming land in Virginia, which tempted the hero to leave home and country. The advertisement proved a fraud, but the young Englishman remained in Virginia and in time met success in love and fortune. The description of Virginia life shows the knowledge of conditions and the happy way of putting things of the author of "On both sides."

The three women are taught in three different ways that God asks justice, mercy, and humility of his children. They all show "the calm beauty of an ordered life." This author is always specially suitable for young girls. All her stories teach self-abnegation and inculcate a love of culture and a living interest in our neighbors.

The few remaining events in the lives of these royal lovers, Antony's tragic death, the coming of the Roman conqueror, and Cleopatra's dramatic exit from life are related with many details. The author shows a strong admiration for the Egyptian queen, and depicts her as a tenderly loving mother and faithful friend. The passionate attachment of her women and others near to her are offered as proofs of the fine qualities claimed for her. A second romance, with political intrigues and vivid description of the life of the period, fill out the volumes.

The concluding volumes of Lord Augustus Loftus' autobiographical memoirs. In 1862 he was recalled from Berlin, and sent as English embassador to Munich; in 1865 he returned again to the court of Prussia, where he remained representing England until the close of the Franco-Prussian War and the formation of the German Empire. Shortly afterward he was sent to Russia, where he completed his diplomatic career with the experiences of the war between Russia and Turkey in 1877 and 1878, and the subsequent negotiations for peace. The volume finishes with an account of his return to England in 1879. The light thrown upon the many political events of which he was a witness through the secret history his position made known to him, and the interesting details of the personalities of the famous men of the period, make the volumes of unusual value to historical students.

Long, Frank Carleton. The Duke of Arcanum: a novel. Chic., Laird & Lee, [1894.] c. 3-452 p. il. D. (Library of choice fiction, no. 74.) pap., 50 c. [1778

Stanley Edgcumb, full of noble purposes and philanthropic philosophy, comes into contact with those oppressed with the bitter afflictions of a dire and relentless poverty. The scene is laid in Chicago in 1870. In describing the temptations of poverty and the sins which the author claims should be judged with charity, the details are hardly fitting for fiction. The great Chicago fire of 1871 plays an important part in the story.

This is used against him, and leads to many skilfully managed complications and many interesting discussions on questions of right and wrong, opinions, motives, etc.

Moore, G: Esther Waters: a novel. Chic., E. A. Weeks & Co., [1894.] 350 p. D. (The Melbourne ser., no. 23.) pap., 25 c. [1790

Esther Waters is a servant-girl who, while kitchen-maid in the family of a philanthropic woman, is seduced by one of the grooms having care of betting and race-horses. Her subsequent life, her devotion to her child, and suffering on his account, and her final reunion with the man who had betrayed her, make the story. Life among turfmen and their servants, and the different phases of life below stairs, of charitable institutions, and all the various positions into which an unlettered servant-girl can drift, are described with almost too much frankness for general reading.

The Buddhistic chronicle here translated fills the gap left by the Gospels in their narration of the life of Christ, from the time he left Judea at the age of twelve until his return at the age of thirty. It tells of his study of the Vedas with the Brahmins, his eloquent denunciation of idol worship which caused him to leave the Buddhists, his missionary preaching among the Zoroastrians, and of his final return to Judea. The original manuscript is in Lhasse, and there are various copies in Buddhist monasteries.

By the author of "Contemporary socialism." Mr. Rae's inquiry is based upon English statistics; the result of his investigation as to the probable consequences of a general adoption of an eight-hour working day throughout England is that "no real advantage is gained by long hours, and if we are once persuaded that as much work can be done in a working day of eight hours as in a working day of any longer limit, we can shorten our own day without caring in the least what other nations do."

"There are a very great number of persons who are no longer content to take their religious creeds upon authority, but who are demanding a reason for what they have been taught, and who want a faith which shall harmonize with what in other ways they are beginning to learn about the universe." In this spirit the author deals with the sources of the gospels and their credibility, and reviews the life and teachings of Jesus. The appendix furnishes an attempt to reconstruct the common source used by the writers of the gospels. There is also a full index to passages quoted from the gospels.

These forty-three brief sermons to children were preached by Dr. Stall, the author of the well-known "Methods of church-work," while pastor of the Second English Lutheran Church at Baltimore. With some object of every-day life presented to the eye, the author, after the manner of the parables, presents the important truths of the gospel to the comprehension of both old and young.

Straus, Oscar S. Roger Williams, the pioneer of religious liberty. N. Y., The Century Co., 1894. c. 9+257 p. fac-simile, D. cl., $1.25. [1808

Several biographies of Roger Williams have been written, most of which are now out of print. Since the publication of these earlier works much valuable additional information concerning the pioneer of religious liberty in America has come to light. Mr. Straus, the author of the present biography, has given careful study to the subject of Roger Williams and his work. He has searched anew the records of the Charter House, where Williams attended school as a pensioner, and also the records of Pembroke College. Among other things he has succeeded in determining the year of Williams' birth, a matter which has long been the subject of controversy among genealogists and historians of New England. Roger Williams is one of the most picturesque characters in our history. His life was one long battle for religious liberty.

Truly poetic and intensely sad is the story told first in letters, then in journal form, of the devotion of two woman friends. The writer is an English girl who has inherited great wealth and beautiful estates, and with them the care of two conventional old English gentlewomen. Her love-story, in which her friend is the innocent cause of tragedy, is told with exquisite pathos. Her hopes and dreams and aspirations are "the wings of Icarus," which melted in her fatal love and left her hopeless and despairing after one last effort to save from suicide her husband and her friend.

THE BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION.

THE fifteenth annual meeting of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association of the United States was held at the sales-room of Messrs. Bangs & Co., 739 Broadway, New York, on the evening of the 6th inst. Owing to the bad weather the meeting was not as well attended as usual, though the few present made up in earnestness and enthusiasm for the lack of numbers.

There being no business which took precedence, the secretary, Mr. Wilbur B. Ketcham, proceeded to read the following report in behalf of the Board of Trustees:

To the members of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association:

We present to you this, our fifteenth annual report, and it is with pleasure and pride that we take this opportunity to congratulate you on our success in the past and the prospect of still greater success in the future.

The past year has been a most unfavorable one to all insurance associations and companies. It has been hard work to secure members, and still more difficult for members to pay their assessments. During the year a number of our members have been obliged to relinquish their membership, not of their own desire, but because of business reverses.

We, however, can report, notwithstanding the unfavorable business year, that we are on a more substantial basis than for any year of the past.

Every claim has been paid and the following report will show that our finances are in a most excellent condition.

It will not be out of place to state here that our association has been examined by the Insurance Department of this State during the year, and it is with pleasure we state that our affairs were found satisfactory to them.

The time of office of five of your trustees will expire to-day, and it is your duty to elect at this meeting five men to serve for three years in their places. The work connected with the association constantly increases. Your board have met regularly during the year and have endeavored to give their best thought to your interests.

The future depends upon every member of this association and the efforts they may make to increase our membership.

We should be glad to have suggestions offered at this meeting how this can best be brought about.

Our death rate has not increased and our expenses are low for the reason that no one receives any compensation and only the actual expenses incurred are paid by the association.

We are under obligations to Messrs. Burkhardt, Holden, Vogelius, and Kelly for their managemont of an Authors' Reading, the proceeds of which made a substantial increase in our funds.

In closing this report we can do no better than to repeat the following which was taken from our report of last year:

"The superiority of the assessment system lies in the fact that while it furnishes insurance at about one-half the rates which old-system companies are compelled to charge, it also provides absolute security for the payment of its death losses. Every policy holder, so long as he continues to profit by the protection furnished, must contribute his proportion of the amount required for its death losses and expenses. Consequently, the greater the amount of insurance in force the greater the security. If the assessment is not paid when due the policy lapses and the liability ceases. The reserve of companies conducted upon this system is therefore practically unlimited. It entails no expense for management and can never be squandered in the payment of high salaries or lost in unprofitable investments.

"In many respects the reserve of the assessment system is like the reserve force of a nation —such as the United States—where there is practically no standing army, but where the State has power, in case it is required, to call out every man who is over eighteen and under forty-five years of age. That such a reserve is amply sufficient for the protection of the American people, history has most satisfactorily demonstrated. An assessment company has this reserve, and furnishes security for the payment of its death losses unsurpassed by any other system of insurance in existence."

The reports of the various insurance companies show that for old-line companies the expenses were forty-six per cent. of the amount paid for death claims and dividends and of the mutual companies only nineteen per cent.

Our record justifies us in saying that for prompt payment of death claims, careful management, a judicial selection of its risks, our association stands second to none. It gives you life insurance of the best quality and furnishes it at actual cost.

The report was adopted unanimously. Then followed the election of five trustees for the three years—1894-1896, which resulted in the choice of Charles T. Dillingham, A. Growoll, Joseph F. Vogelius, Wilbur B. Ketcham, and John H. Ammon.

Before adjournment Mr. Dillingham delivered a brief address, in which he pointed out the necessity of unceasing work to keep up the membership of the association by new and, if possible, younger recruits. He also called attention to the fact, not generally understood, that the membership is not restricted to those connected with the book and stationery trades, but that all persons properly accredited are eligible. He further announced that it was under consideration to modify the Constitution so that women (both married and unmarried), also in other professions and work than the book and stationery trade, might be entitled to membership.

Mr. Dillingham then alluded to a plan that had been suggested to extend the membership and usefulness of the association. This is, in short, a project to establish a new society whose purpose it shall be to draw the members of the book, stationery, and kindred trades and their friends closer together, to provide social entertainment at least once a month, and to further generally the interests of the trades with which the membership is connected, and that of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association in particular.

Mr. J. N. Wing read the following prospectus of the proposed association, and spoke warmly in its favor:

We, the undersigned, agree to organize an association to be known as THE BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' SOCIAL LEAGUE, its object being to bring together, monthly, members of the book and stationery trades and associate branches, for their mutual benefit, and to further the interest of The Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association, by giving entertainments for its benefit, and securing new members.

Membership will not be limited to members of The Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association; only its members, however, will be eligible to hold office of any kind in this association.

Dues will be twenty-five (25) cents monthly, payable on the first of every month.

Officers to consist of fifteen members as a board of managers, and they will elect from these a president, first and second vice-president, secretary, and treasurer.

By-laws. As soon as a sufficient number of subscribers have been obtained a meeting will be called, when proper by-laws will be submitted and the board of managers elected.

About fifty persons have already signed the foregoing, though it has not yet been circulated for signatures. The project met with great favor at the annual meeting, and promises of support were not lacking. It is the intention of the movers of this plan to "count noses" during the summer and in the fall to call a meeting, and then to complete the organization of a long-needed booksellers' association. It is certainly to be hoped that the efforts of the gentlemen who have taken this initiative will meet with success, and that by the end of the year such a league as that proposed shall have become an accomplished fact.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' REMOVAL.

THE new building of Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons, at 153, 155 and 157 Fifth Avenue, between 21st and 22d Streets, is now completed, and the firm has been occupying it since May 23. The importance of this removal is equalled by the celerity with which the mechanical part of moving has been accomplished. The first announcement of the firm's intention to move up-town was made on October 13 last, and it was not until some time after that the ground was opened and the foundations laid. Only a little more than six months, therefore, has been required to erect this handsome six-story building and complete all the details of removal. There were over 300,000 books to be packed in trays and boxes, besides manuscripts, letters, and the accounts of business for fifty years. These have been removed within the space of a month, and without any interruption of business or damage to the stock. The wholesale department was reduced in the old building to the estimated proportion of books which it might be necessary to deliver for two or three weeks, the old manuscripts were placed in separate safes, and gradually the retail department was limited to the demands of a day, until the old building was like a desert and the new one was as well filled as if it had been gradually furnished for a decade. All of the departments are now in good running order.

The new building is a fine structure of white limestone, graceful, with classic simplicity, and has been erected by the Scribners exclusively for their own use. The first floor is given up entirely to retail stock, and impresses one at once by its roomy proportions, its liberal supply of light and air, and its handsome fittings. The bookcases, extending from the floor to the high ceiling, are made of polished oak, and fitted with shelves of smooth glass, which offer no friction to the handsome bindings, and are easily cleaned. Now that the shelves are filled with books the effect upon the observer is more that of a handsome library than a book-store. A broad flight of marble steps leads up to the second floor, on which are the publication offices of the firm, and the manufacturing, advertising, and wholesale departments. Here also the fittings are of polished oak, while a feature of special interest to all booksellers is the very neat and attractive trade-room, carpeted, furnished, and fitted with shelves containing a complete library of the firm's publications. In this room all members of the trade visiting the city will be made welcome, and will be invited to make their headquarters during their stay. The third floor is given up to the magazine department, the fourth floor to the subscription-book department, while the fifth and sixth floors, as well as the basement, contain the stock. Two electric elevators facilitate access to all these various departments. The building is also lighted by electricity.

This removal places the Scribners in the very centre of the bookselling section of the city. One by one the various publishers have been gathering on Fifth Avenue and 23d Street. Only a few are now left in the neighborhood of Astor Place, the former publishing centre. This is the fifth removal of the firm of Scribners during their long career of forty-eight years. The steady increase of the business is effectively illustrated in the statement of these removals. In its first quarters, in the rear of Rev. Dr. Gardner Spring's old Brick Church, between Park Row and Nassau Street, on the site now occupied by the Times building, the firm of Baker & Scribner in 1846 was paying a rent of four hundred dollars per annum. The present building has been erected by the firm of Charles Scribner's Sons at an expense of little less than five hundred thousand dollars. The firm of Baker & Scribner occupied its first quarters from 1846 until 1856, and it was during these ten years that the famous J. T. Headley books, and Ik Marvel's "Reveries" and "Dream Life" were published. In 1856 the firm, which had some time before become that of Charles Scribner, moved to more convenient quarters at 377 and 379 Broadway, corner of White Street. Later Mr. Scribner moved to Grand Street, then to the building at 654 Broadway, where Hours at Home and Scribner's Monthly (now The Century) were founded, and from there, in 1875, to the quarters at 743 and 745 Broadway, which it has just vacated. There it was that Scribner's Magazine was called into life.

Throughout its career the firm has done no printing, but confined itself exclusively to book publishing. Its publications represent in almost every case the works of living authors. In this way the Scribners' list of publications is, in part, an index to what has been deemed the best of current literature for the past half century, while a notable feature of their business has always been a line of standard theological works. A large importing trade has also been an important part of their business, conducted for a long time under the name of Scribner & Welford, but now included under the name of Charles Scribner's Sons. Scribner's Monthly, published first in 1870, and sold to the Century Co. in 1882, and the new Scribner's Magazine started in 1887, are other notable features of their career.

THOMAS NILES—IN MEMORIAM.

There is but little to add to the few facts given last week regarding the life and labors of Mr. Thomas Niles, of Roberts Brothers. During the sixty-nine years of his busy life Mr. Niles kept his own personality almost wholly out of the knowledge of those with whom he came in contact. He was very modest and retiring, and almost dreaded public appreciation and all statements about him that were not solely connected with his career as a publisher. He was unusually courteous and approachable for business purposes, but kept almost every one outside his private life. He carried this peculiar dislike to publicity so far that he had not even had a picture made of himself, so that it is impossible to follow our usual practice and add his portrait to our collection of the influential American publishers who have passed away. We briefly run through the meagre details of his business career once more.

Mr. Niles was born in Boston in 1825, and at the early age of fourteen entered the store of W. D. Ticknor & Co. at the "old corner," where he worked side by side with the late James T. Fields until 1855, when the latter became a partner in the firm, and Mr. Niles entered into the firm of Whittemore, Niles & Hall, dealers in stationery and blank-books. This firm did not specially prosper. While Mr. Niles was connected with its fortunes, Mr. Lewis A. Roberts, then bookbinder and manufacturer of stationery, had taken his two brothers into partnership and organized the jobbing business of Roberts Brothers. In 1859 this business was sold out, and Mr. Lewis A. Roberts went to London, where he first saw photograph albums. He immediately arranged for their manufacture in America, and introduced those once so profitable articles of trade in this country. In 1862 Mr. Lewis A. Roberts organized a publishing business with his brothers. Mr. Hall, of the firm of Whittemore, Niles & Hall, entered into their employ and he subsequently induced Mr. Niles to do the same. This he did in 1863, and shortly after the publication of books was entrusted to his charge. The first books issued by Roberts Brothers were printed from the stereotype plates of C. S. Francis & Co., of New York, and the first volume with their imprint was entitled "Fairy Tales." Mr. Niles proved so competent a help in this branch of the business that in 1872 he was taken into partnership on most favorable terms, though he could furnish but little capital except his talents and business capacity. The firm of Ticknor & Fields in the immediate neighborhood of the new house were already the successful publishers of the choicest belles-lettres authors of America, and under the direction of Mr. James T. Fields had begun to reprint the best literary works of the hour that were appearing in England.

Mr. Niles had the same ambition and trained literary taste as the older firm, but he was obliged to begin competition on very small margins. His first discovery was Jean Ingelow, who had just published her first volume in England. It had an immense sale as brought out with the imprint of Roberts Brothers, and there followed a series of works which met with remarkable success in this country. Just as it was coming into fame Mr. Niles also captured the anonymous work, "Ecce Homo," which was launched into fabulous popularity by the reviews of W. E. Gladstone and Cardinal Newman. The success of Oliver

Optic's books suggested to Mr. Niles the thought of similar books for girls, and having been much pleased by "Hospital Sketches," by Louisa M. Alcott, published in 1867 by Ticknor & Fields, he sent for Miss Alcott and engaged her for this work. "Little Women" made the fortunes of the publishing house and of the author, and the long list of books that followed added steadily to their prosperity. Among the authors who are now identified with the Roberts Brothers Mr. Niles secured E. C. Stedman, T. B. Aldrich, "Susan Coolidge," Mrs. Helen Hunt Jackson, whose "Ramona" was one of the big successes, Dr. E. E. Hale, Mrs. Caroline Dall, Mrs. L. C. Moulton, Gilbert Hamerton, Sir Edwin Arnold, and Joaquin Miller. Mr. Niles' correspondence with these writers was rich and confidential, and perhaps no publisher has left a richer collection of literary correspondence. He magnified his office by making it a truly literary function, and he had no stronger desire than to add good names to his very choice catalogue, to publish the best books, and to see that the authors of them received their due reward. His warmest friends were among authors, and in their mutual relations all traditions of distrust were set aside. Mr. Niles suffered for years with some painful affection of the stomach, and was travelling for his health when death overtook him at Perugia.

THE MAKING OF MAGAZINES.

In an address recently made before the Quill Club of New York, Mr. Frank H. Scott, president of the Century Company, made the following interesting remarks concerning the cost of producing a modern illustrated magazine. We quote from Mr. Scott's remarks as printed in The Critic:

"It is a mistaken idea that the cost of the best magazines has been lessened of late. Cheap publications, those in which the principal expense is for paper and printing, can be made, for these two items of cost were never so low as now. But the cost of everything else connected with the production of a magazine has steadily increased. The prices paid authors and artists are more than double what they were twenty years ago. Every number of The Century Magazine costs more than $10,000 for contributions and pictures before it goes to press, and if we add to this the salaries of editors and managers, the rent and expense of maintenance of a great establishment, you will see that only immense editions can make it possible to supply the present magazine, containing, as it does, as much matter and as well printed as the average four or five dollar book, for 35 cents.

"I know there has been of late a movement toward cheap magazines. These are possible, they may be desirable, but they will not be the same. You cannot get 25 cents' worth for 12½ cents, nor the value of 35 cents for a quarter. In the long run a 15-cent magazine will be but a 15-cent magazine—no more, no less. On the present basis of cost The Century and Harper's would not be self-sustaining at these rates. But some say the advertisements will make up the difference. Will they? Waiving the question as to whether more advertising is desirable, it is yet to be proved that more wages or higher rates can be secured. The larger magazines have secured their patronage because of their excellence, insuring the character and extent of their circulation. Cheapen or change the character of the contents or circulation and you change the value of the advertising pages. Even if a 10-cent magazine has twice the circulation of a 35-cent one, it does not follow that its advertising space is doubly or even equally valuable,

"It may be less so; indeed, for many articles it probably is. But for the present, bear in mind that the cheap magazines are largely in the experimental stage; they have not yet equalled the older magazines in that combination of acceptable contents, circulation, and advertising patronage which have given the older ones their reputation and success, and until they have done so and proved themselves not only equally acceptable to the public, but profitable to their owners on the new basis, we can but await with interest the result of the experiment."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

Paul Bourget, the novelist, and Albert Sorel, the historian, were elected members of the French Academy to fill the vacancies caused by the deaths of Messrs. Taine and Ducamp.

Mrs. Emma Gottheil, wife of Prof. J. H. Gottheil, of Columbia College, has had conferred upon her the title of "Officier de l'Académie Française," in recognition of her services rendered to the French language and literature.

Walter Besant, though he writes a great deal about love and talks even more on that interesting topic, does not look like a man of sentimental inclinations. His high forehead and his full beard suggest a scientist, and he is sedate and middle-aged. Mr. Besant is broad enough to have a keen admiration for some of his fellow-craftsmen—particularly for Kipling, Stevenson, and George Meredith.

A Chicago newspaper man, Stanley Waterloo, broke the record lately in writing a book. A Chicago publisher sent for Mr. Waterloo and asked him whether he could have a book on the Coxey movement ready for the press in four days. Mr. Waterloo, being a well-equiped journalist, full of resources and knowing not the word "fail," said he could. This was on Monday morning. The publisher said "Go ahead," and gave him carte blanche as to expenses. A staff of writers was organized, specialists were engaged for the historical part of the work, photographers took the field, typewriters clicked day and night, and Mr. Waterloo himself hardly ate or slept. The result was that on Thursday night the "copy" for a book of over one hundred thousand words, with forty illustrations, was in the hands of printers.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The first number of Direct Legislation Record, a new monthly journal, has just been published by James W. Sullivan, author of "Direct Legislation"—a little book which has done much to inform American readers about the Swiss initiative and referendum. New Jersey's agitation for Swiss methods in law-making occupy the chief part of the first issue of the Record—which is founded as the organ of direct legislation for America. The Record is published at 104 Elm Street, New York, at fifty cents a year.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE FRANKLIN PUBLISHING CO., of Boston, will shortly publish a new novel by Robert Appleton, entitled "After the Manner of Men."

THE NATIONAL CITATION CO., Dublin, Tex., have succeeded King & Leonard in the publication of "King and Leonard's U. S. Supreme Court Citations."

MR. J. B. FERGUSON. of the firm of Ferguson & Co., booksellers of Winnipeg, was married on the 8th ult. to Miss Walsh, granddaughter of the poet Charles Heavysege, author of "Saul," "Jepthah's Daughter," etc. The happy couple have our sincere wishes for a bright and prosperous future.

THE BOW-KNOT PUB. CO., Chicago, will publish at once a volume entitled "Sophos, or, the kidnapping of the kings," by Albert Albery, a London journalist, who suggests the wholesale capture and transportation of all the monarchs of Europe as the likeliest plan by which the Socialists can effect the aims for which they are striving.

THE publication committee of the general committee on the centennial celebration of Washington's inaugural, who prepared a memorial volume of the celebration. of which an edition of 938 copies were printed, report that all of them have been disposed of and the plates destroyed. The cost of the publication has been $28,656.88. The balance of $23.44 has been turned over to the memorial arch committee.

MR. PAUL MEYER, who has just returned from Europe, reports that he has made special arrangements with foreign publishers for the publication and translation in this country of new works. His firm at an early day will make an exhibition of the original designs of Myrbach, Lynch, Rossi, and Jeanniot, which have been used for the illustration of such works as "La Dame aux Camélias," "Cosmopolis," Mensonges, etc.; and also of the choice bindings of Marius Michel, David, Kaufmann, and others.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS issue this week an interesting contribution to the literature of the Protectorate, entitled "Oliver Cromwell: a history comprising a narrative of his life, with extracts from his letters and speeches, and an account of the political, religious, and military affairs of England during his time," by Samuel Harden Church, who has made the subject a study for many years. They have also just ready a life of Newton Booth, war governor of California, together with his speeches and addresses, edited, with introduction and notes, by Lauren E. Crane.

IT was recently announced that D. L. Moody, the Evangelist, had received $1,250,000 in royalties from the publishers of "Gospel Hymns" that are published under his name. This, it seems, is an error, and the statement is made upon reliable authority that neither Mr. Moody nor his faithful co-worker, Mr. Sankey, have ever received a cent from this royalty. They have refused to accept any part of it. At first it was placed in the hands of trustees, who distributed it to religious and charitable enterprises according to their judgment. Afterward, at the request of these trustees, the moderate amount of royalty has been turned over to the trustees of the Northfield and Mount Hermon seminaries.

The Annual Literary Index,

EDITED BY W. I. FLETCHER and R. R. BOWKER,

with the co-operation of members of the American Library Association and of the Library Journal staff.

The Annual Literary Index for 1893 complements the "Annual American Catalogue" of books published in 1893 by indexing (1) articles in periodicals published in 1893; (2) essays and book-chapters in composite books of 1893; (3) authors of periodical articles and essays; (4) special bibliographies of 1893; (5) authors deceased in 1893. The two volumes together make a complete record of the literary product of the year.

The volume includes also the features of the "Co-operative Index to Periodicals," originally a monthly supplement to the Library Journal, then extended into a quarterly in an enlarged form, and later issued as an annual volume.

COPYRIGHT AGREEMENT BETWEEN GERMANY AND THE UNITED STATES.

DURING the last session of the German Reichstag, the bookseller, Julius Oskar Galler, offered the report of the committee appointed in 1893, which had come to the conclusion to petition to annul the copyright treaty existing between the German Empire and the United States, and to enter into no new agreement except upon the basis of complete reciprocity.

The petitioners base their claim upon the "unfairness of the existing treaty, which concedes all right to the Americans and offers the Germans very moderate reciprocal advantages."

Now, as formerly, it is claimed that it is impossible to prevent the reprinting in the United States of German scientific and literary periodicals, because it is impracticable to have such matter appear simultaneously in both countries so long as the law demands that it shall be printed from type set in America.

The periodical press therefore remains a source of plunder for American reprinters, and the great bulk of German literary production is thereby left totally unprotected in the United States.

The protection of literature appearing in book form is also complicated by the manufacturing clause in the American Copyright Act, and while the Germans gain but little their treaty forces them to grant full rights to American authors, thus giving far more than they get in return.

Mr. Galler endorsed these objections, and said that the book trade was also fully aware of the small value attaching to the treaty, but that it did not favor an immediate annulment of the same, as in the case of musical publications and art works it reaped some benefit, even from this most unsatisfactory agreement between the two nations. Since the treaty was entered into only one book has been properly copyrighted,* because American typesetting is so expensive, and the demand of books in the German language so limited in the United States, that the German publisher feels hardly justified in legally protecting his books on both sides of the ocean.

Considered from all sides, the treaty unreservedly allows American authors and publishers full rights in Germany while depriving the German publisher of the privilege of reprinting valuable American literary productions. The rights of German publishers have been retrenched, while American publishers can copyright their publications for a longer period of years, according to German law, than is legal in their own land.

The Royal Commissioner, Dr. Lehmann, then explained that the German government had not at any time considered that the copyright agreement with the United States was satisfactory, but it had hoped to secure for its authors and publishers at least the measure of protection, which by the Copyright Act of March, 1891, the United States agreed to grant to foreigners. As above stated the treaty had been found to work well as regards art works, maps, and musical works, because it is not required that two copies of such manufactured in America should be copyrighted simultaneously with the German work. The book trade had at first not feared to grant American authors more rights than Germans could receive in America, because they thought that the literary production of America would hardly offer more works deemed worthy of German copyright than would be offset by the German works wanted for America.

Dr. Lehmann advised strongly against annulling the treaty, however, as by so doing the branches now fully protected (music, art works, maps, etc.) would again fall into the hands of ruthless plunderers without anything being gained for authors or publishers of books. He hoped that little by little the terms of contract could be modified, and felt sure that Americans themselves would realize more and more the weaknesses of the Copyright Act, for which so many had made so brave a struggle, submitting to the restriction of the unsatisfactory clause only because without it the whole copyright question would again have dropped for years. After a short debate, in which all the speakers showed a remarkably full knowledge of the situation, it was decided to refer the proceedings and further action to the Reichskanzler.

* Since Mr. Galler's report was made this statement has been questioned. The facts seem to be that only one book has been regularly copyrighted through the agency of the Börsenverein, though others seem to have been arranged for through foreign agencies.

NOTES ON EARLY ENGLISH EDITIONS OF THE BIBLE.—III.*

IN 1557 a new translation of the New Testament was made by William Whittingham, a brother-in-law of Calvin. It was printed in twelvemo by Conrad Badius, at Geneva, and is interesting as giving for the first time the division of chapters into verses, using italics to distinguish words not in the Greek, and especially as employing Roman type in place of the Old English or "black-letter."

One of the most popular Bibles of this period was the "Geneva version," of which about 200 different editions are known; its popularity was chiefly due to the good print in Roman type and to the division of chapters into verses as introduced in the Whittingham version of the New Testament, already mentioned. The first edition, printed in 1560 by Rowland Holl, in Geneva, in large folio, is known as the "Breeches Bible," as in Genesis iii. 7, it reads that Adam and Eve made for themselves "breeches," instead of "aprons." The second edition, published in 1562 in folio, with no printer's name, was called the "Whig Bible" from another printer's error, the beatitude "Blessed are the peace-makers," reading "Blessed are the place-makers." The so-called "new" edition, of 1569, was really nothing but the remainder of the third edition of 1568 with a new title-page—a proof that even in those days the publisher's trick of issuing an old book with a new title, in order to make new sales, was not unknown. All these and many later editions were printed abroad. The first edition of the Geneva version printed in England, was published in 1576, in folio, by Christopher Barker, holder of an exclusive privilege for printing Bibles granted by Queen Elizabeth. This privilege was held by the Barkers for one hundred and thirty years, was then transferred to the Basketts,† who kept the right for sixty years, and was finally conferred upon John Eyre, founder of the present London publishing firm of Eyre & Spottiswoode, which still makes a specially of religious and devotional books.

Under Edward VI. (1547–1553), and even during the reign of Mary Tudor (1553–1558) no special edicts against the reading or circulation of the Bible were enacted, but no new translations appeared during this period. In 1543 Parliament passed an act, prohibiting the reading of the Bible save by certain classes; Tyndale's New Testament was specially stigmatized as "crafty, false and untrue," its chief adversary being Archbishop Cranmer, who seems to have transferred his animosity toward Tyndale even to the latter's work. This act was revoked by Edward VI., and during his reign many editions of the different translations were circulated. Of the fifty-seven printers then established, fully thirty-one were engaged in bringing out editions of the whole Bible or of different portions of it. Although no laws definitely suppressing the Bible were enacted, yet, under both Edward VI. and Mary Tudor, various edicts prohibiting the publication, circulation or possession of "revolutionary" books were promulgated, which indirectly restricted its use. In 1536 Mary granted to the Stationers' Company a privilege, which acknowledged its organization and conferred upon it the right to establish regulations for the ordering and guidance of printers, restricting the privilege of printing or selling books to members of the company, and making it the duty of the association to enforce strict execution of the laws relating to the craft.*

Although the Geneva version had attained a wide popularity and was in general use, its omissions, misprints, and many defects made a new translation of the Bible very necessary. This need was especially felt after the accession of Elizabeth, and Archbishop Parker was foremost in urging the necessity of a new and accurate translation which should be free from party spirit and should represent the best Biblical knowledge of the day. He first intended to entrust the work entirely to laymen, but this effort was unsuccessful, and the translation was made by a number of clergymen, whose initials are given at the end of their contributions in the folio edition of the work—known as the "Bishops' Bible." The first edition of the "Bishops' Bible," which after completion was formally sanctioned by the convocation, appeared in folio in 1568, and was printed by Richard Jugge. A copy was solemnly presented to Queen Elizabeth on October 5, 1568. Of this version nineteen different editions were published, all more or less revised; of these the greater number were in folio and quarto, one only being in octavo. The second edition, printed by Jugge in 1569, is in small quarto, being intended for large circulation and family use, while the first edition was chiefly intended to be read in churches. In the second edition the printers, to save space, abridged the headings of chapters and omitted the numerous wood-cuts that adorned the first. The third edition, which appeared in 1572, was printed on better paper than the first and second editions, and was illustrated; but several of the thirty illustrations were taken from an illustrated edition of—horribile dictu—Ovid's Metamorphoses! The head-piece to the Epistle to the Hebrews represents Leda with the swan—which has given to the edition the name of "The Leda Bible." Several corrections and improvements in the former editions were neglected in this, and several misprints that had been corrected in the second edition were repeated in this third edition. One error that, strange to say, is found in all the succeeding editions containing the "Prayer-book Psalms," occurred in psalm 37, where verse 39 reads "The righteous shall be punished," instead

† The first English edition of the Bible issued in America was brought out surreptitiously by Kneeland & Green, two Boston printers, in 1752, with the London imprint of "Mark Baskett, Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty." See article entitled "The Aitkin Bible" in P. W., June 10, 1893. Vol. xliii., p. 883.

* The powerful corporation known as the Stationers' Company comprised at that time the entire book trade—printers, publishers, booksellers, news-vendors, and stationers in the modern sense of the term. The name was derived from the scriveners or MSS. vendors of the fourteenth century, who were known as stationarii from their practice of establishing themselves permanently near universities or monasteries, in contrast to the practice of the itinerant peddlers. The stationarii, as such, were first known in Paris in 1275. In London the headquarters of the stationarii were in the neighborhood of St. Paul's—which is still the booksellers' quarter. Queen Mary's "privilege" first recognized them as a corporate body, and the organization increased in strength and numbers through succeeding years. They established a fund, to which all members were forced to contribute, and they were made by legal enactment the censors of the press and strict guardians of the printing laws. The growth of the company, its restrictions and its regulations, are most interesting.

of "The *un*righteous." The fifth (folio) edition, of 1574, contains a large map printed from the same cut as that in the first English Bible of 1535, and bears on its title-page the legend "set forth by aucthoritee." The ninth edition, of 1577 (4°), is the last printed by Jugge. This eminent printer, who had been educated at the university and was himself actively engaged in revising the Bible, was one of the first members of the Stationers' Company after its incorporation, and held in it for successive years the positions of warden and worshipful master. His editions of the "Bishops' Bible" are admirable witnesses to his typographical skill. In May, 1560, he was appointed printer to Queen Elizabeth, with a yearly salary of £6 13*s.* 4*d.*

THE IDENTITY OF "G. S." REVEALED.

A TRIBUTE TO DR. JOHN DUNLAP OSBORNE.

We have only recently been enabled to discover the identity of "G. S.," the Paris correspondent of the American Literary Gazette and Publishers' Circular, concerning whom we had an inquiry about a year ago, that for want of information had to be left unanswered at that time. "G. S.," who for over a decade furnished substantial instruction and literary gossip of the most delightful kind to the American book trade in his letters from Paris to Childs' Publishers' Circular, was Dr. John Dunlap Osborne, who was born in Petersburg, Va., in 1827. He studied law in the Harvard Law School, Cambridge, Mass., and went to Paris early in the fifties, where he remained until his death on February 12, 1884.

Dr. Osborne was a deep student, and in every sense a bookworm. Exceedingly reserved, modest to a degree bordering on timidity, he absolutely shunned all social intercourse. When not burrowing in the archives of the Bibliothèque Nationale (where it is supposed he contracted his illness, of a consumptive tendency), he shut himself up in his room, which for many years was in the Rue d'Assis, No. 132, and was inaccessible to even his most intimate friends.

Though deeply learned and at work almost continuously, it cannot be learned that he ever made practical application of his knowledge, or that after years of preparation ever a single work of his was published. His very modest income was derived from correspondence for sundry newspapers in the United States. For a long number of years, and up to the time of his death, he wrote for the New Orleans Picayune under the pseudonym of "Gamma." Under the signature of "Leoni Leone" he was the Paris correspondent of the New York World for a time. He also contributed as "Spiridion" to the columns of the Boston Atlas, Boston Traveller, and for nearly ten years contributed to the Saturday Evening Gazette. During the War of the Rebellion the latter was his only American newspaper, as communication with New Orleans was then so irregular that he was obliged to suspend his correspondence with the Picayune of that city. After the war he resumed his work on the latter. About three years before his death he contributed a number of letters to The Publishers' Weekly, but rigidly preserved his incognito. In time he lost many of his appointments as correspondent, as his letters lacked the sprightliness of novelty and bore the stamp of mere recitals from the French daily journals, of which he was an omniverous reader.

Of signed articles that were published by him in American periodicals the following bibliography, prepared by Mr. Wm. Van Sittert, of the Burrows Brothers Co., Cleveland, O., to whom we are also under obligations for some biographical data, may prove of interest:

In Scribner's Magazine.

Feb., 1876, vol. XI., p. 546—French Duels.

April, 1876, vol. XI., p. 823—The History of a Critic (Jules Janin). (Illustrated.)

Dec., 1879, vol. XIX., p. 296—Oddities of Paris.

Dec., 1879, vol. XIX., p. 318—American Books on the Paris Quays, being a postscript to Oddities of Paris.

April, 1880, vol. XIX—Jules Michelet. (Illustrated.)

In Century Magazine.

Nov., 1883, vol. V., p. 74—Glimpses of Paris. (Illustrated.)

Dr. Osborne was a man of sterling qualities, in short a gentleman, and one to whom the term "F. F. V." might have been applied with entire propriety and in the best sense of the meaning of that phrase. Though he spent the greater part of his life abroad, he never for a moment waived allegiance to his native land, and stipulated with his friends that at his death his body should be buried at home.

We are glad even at this late day to be able to pay a tribute to the memory of one who stood in such close relationship to our trade, and who for ten years or more helped to educate and edify the generation of booksellers preceding our own, without recognition and in entire self effacement.

BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION.

The regular monthly meeting of the abovenamed association was held on June 11, 1894. This being the first meeting after the annual one, election of officers for the ensuing year was in order. Mr. Chas. T. Dillingham, to whom the success of the association from its organization is largely due, was again elected president for the seventeenth time.

John A. Holden was elected first vice-president, Robert Morris second vice-president, Wilbur B. Ketcham, secretary, and the founder of the association, Joseph F. Vogelius was again elected treasurer. Several new members were elected.

It is the purpose of the board of trustees, with the assistance of the members of the association, to make a determined effort to increase the membership to the full limit—fifteen hundred.

The association is one of the strongest of the organizations of its kind, has paid over $87,000 to the heirs of its deceased members, and the highest cost during any financial year to its members has been $11, while the average cost since organization has been $7. The amount paid beneficiary is $1000.

The secretary, Wilbur B. Ketcham, No. 2 Cooper Union, New York, will gladly send application blanks, constitution, etc., on application.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

A TEST CASE UNDER THE LAW OF FORFEITURE.

THE case of H. B. Stranahan against John W. Taylor & Co., brought in the United States Circuit Court in Cleveland, O., on the 11th inst., under the law of forfeiture, is one of the few of the kind ever brought in the United States. The suit is based on the new feature of the copyright law, which prohibits publishers not only from copying and publishing other publishers' property, but taking a part of the publication and publishing it as their own. Stranahan claims that Taylor & Co. have taken out a piece of his map of the United States and published it as their own.

IN RE THE DECISION IN THE SUIT OF MAYNARD, MERRILL & CO. vs. W. B. HARISON.

THE United States Circuit Court of Appeals, as already reported, reversed recently an order which was granted to Maynard, Merrill & Co., restraining William Beverley Harison from selling an educational work copyrighted by the complainants. In addition to the information already printed the court held that the right to restrain the sale of particular copies of a book by virtue of the copyright statutes is gone "when the owner of the copyright and of that copy has conferred an absolute title to the copy upon a purchaser, although with an agreement for a restricted use. The exclusive right to vend the particular copy no longer remains in the owner of the copyright by the copyright statute. The new purchaser cannot reprint the copy, he cannot print or publish a new edition of the book; but the copy having been absolutely sold to him, the ordinary incidents of ownership in personal property, among which is the right of alienation, attach to it. If he has agreed that he will not sell it for certain purposes or to certain persons, and violates his agreement and sells to an innocent purchaser, he can be punished for a violation of his agreement, but neither is guilty, under the copyright statutes, of an infringement."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

A STATUE of Whittier was unveiled in Haverhill, Mass., on the 6th inst., by the Haverhill Whittier Club.

THE Rev. Dr. E. A. Dunning, the editor of The Congregationalist, is to write a history of Congregationalism.

RICHARD WATSON GILDER, the editor of the Century, is preparing for publication a complete edition of his poems, which will soon be brought out.

THE Pope has sent to press a work describing all the acts of his papal reign. In high ecclesiastical quarters it is considered to be Leo's politico-religious testament.

WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR is at work on a new novel embodying his theories of the social system, and expounding that form of humane socialism, of which it is reported, unknown to many, he approves.

C. S. REINHART, the artist, is about to make his appearance as a writer of fiction. His story, "Un Mauvais Quart d'Heure," is to be published with his own illustrations in the next number of Harper's.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE was nominally 82 years of age on the 14th inst.; but according to The Hartford (Conn.) Times she was really 83. It explains the matter thus: "The Times has once before stated that the biographies and cyclopædias are all in error as to the year of her birth, and also concerning the natal year of Henry Ward Beecher. Both are published as having been born one year later than they actually were. A consultation of 'the old family Bible' settles it; Mrs. Stowe was born in 1811 and Henry Ward in 1813."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Pall Mall Gazette has secured Robert Louis Stevenson's next novel for $15,000.

F. MARION CRAWFORD will begin in the July number of The Century a novelette entitled "Love in Idleness," which will run through the summer.

Books and Authors is the title of a neatly printed monthly review of religious, economic, and ethical literature published by Fleming H. Revell Co. Each issue contains besides notices of the more prominent religious books and general literary notes a sketch of some leading Evangelical pastor with his portrait.

"AN interesting literary find" is announced, in the discovery of a number of unpublished letters by Edgar Allan Poe. These were found among the papers of Poe's biographer, Dr. Rufus W. Griswold, by his son, W. M. Griswold, of Cambridge. The correspondence has been placed for editing in the hands of Prof. George E. Woodberry, the author of the standard life of Poe, and it will appear in The Century in three parts, dealing, respectively, with Poe's life in Richmond, Philadelphia, and New York. The correspondence includes many letters to Poe by the leading literary men of his time, and the whole is said to throw much new light on Poe's life and character.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

WHO publishes "Little Women of India," by Dr. Ryder? CENTRAL.

JAMES O'NEILL, 521 Seventh Street, Washington, D. C., has recently come into possession of a seemingly scarce book concerning the market value of which he should be pleased to have some information. The full title of his "find" is: "A Selection, from the Ancient Music of Ireland, arranged for the Flute or Violin, some of the most admired Melodies, adapted to American Poetry, chiefly composed by John McCreery, to which is prefixed historical and critical observations on Ancient Irish Music. Petersburg: Printed by Yancey & Burton, Intelligencer Press, Bank Street, 1824." This collection was highly prized during the years prior to the War of the Rebellion. It was also supposed to have suggested to the poet Moore the idea of his Irish melodies, Moore having been a fellow-student at Trinity College, Dublin, with Dr. Thos. Robinson, who furnished the preface to McCreery's book. Mr. O'Neill has made general inquiries, but cannot learn that any of the larger libraries either have the work or are acquainted with it. An imperfect copy was sold at a London auction about twenty-five years ago for $8.75. Can any of our readers throw any light on the subject?

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE original manuscript of Hawthorne's "Snow Image" was sold privately in New York City a few weeks since.

THE A. R. KELLER CO., Philadelphia, have just issued the first part of the third edition of "The History of the Supreme Court."

MACMILLAN & CO. have just ready the long-expected volume of Ruskin's "Verona, and other lectures." The work is copyrighted here.

STANLEY J. WEYMAN'S novel, "The Man in Black," is announced by Hurst & Co. and the J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Co., both of New York, and by F. T. Neely, of Chicago.

GEORGE ALLEN, London, will publish at once Ruskin's "Letters to a College Friend," which promises to be of exceptional interest, having been written when Mr. Ruskin was full of his plans for "Modern Painters."

BLISS, of London, has just issued an important contribution to the Shelley literature under the title "An Account of Shelley's Visits to France, Switzerland, and Savoy." The author is Mr. Charles I. Elton.

HENRY N. STEVENS, of London, will shortly issue the posthumous works of his father, Henry Stevens, of Vermont. These writings, which should prove of interest to American and English bibliographers, will be brought out in eleven volumes.

FROUDE'S Oxford lectures on Erasmus are to be published soon by Longmans, Green & Co. There are complaints at the university that ladies have attended these lectures in such numbers that neither undergraduates nor graduates have found room.

THE SCHULTE PUBLISHING CO. have just ready the "Memoirs of the International Congress of Anthropology," which embraces the important papers read before the Congress held in Chicago during the World's Fair, edited by C. Staniland Wake.

MATHEWS & LANE, London, promise a translation of the plays of the Spanish dramatist Echegeray. Although probably known to but few English readers this writer, who has been called "the Spanish Ibsen," is one of the very first of living dramatists in southern Europe. The plays are being translated by Miss Hannah Lynch.

JOHN B. PIET, Baltimore, Md., has just ready "The Principles of the Religious Life: being an explanation and amplification of the Catechism of the Vows," by Rev. Pierre Cotel, S.J., author of the "Catechism of the Vows," translated from the third Paris edition, by L. W. Reilly.

A COPY of the exceedingly rare George Scott's "Model of the Government of the Province of East New Jersey," Edinburgh, 1685, was sold at Bangs the other day for $122 to a Mr. Ely. The copy was in fine condition but lacked a preliminary leaf. The Murphy copy, in poor state, sold for $105.

THE English papers are mentioning as a marvel the large price paid by the Pall Mall Magazine for George Meredith's novel, "Lord Ormond and His Aminta." This is fifty dollars a thousand words—which is not so very large a price, taking American standards. "Lord Ormond," by the way, will be published in book form this month.

THE St. James' Gazette in its issue for May 25 caused a sensation by announcing the approaching publication of a book, giving a full inside history of the Irish revolutionary movement. Its author is P. J. Tynan, the notorious "No. 1," whose name came so prominently before the public at the time of the Phœnix Park murders on May 6, 1882. The publication, it is announced, will give the entire story of the murders and of the whole movement with which the Irish revolutionary and parliamentary parties have been connected since 1861.

A CABLE despatch from London says that the second volume of Meneval's "Memoirs of Napoleon" extends to a more important period of his career, and has the same admiring, defensive survey which marked its predecessor. The volume contains much new and extremely interesting personal matter, particularly relating to Josephine and the divorce. It closes with an explanation of the causes that precipitated the invasion of Russia. Its intense anti-English tone naturally raises criticism and rebuttal in England, just as it has helped the popularity of the work in France.

THE first alleged violation of the new Maryland law, which prohibits the sale or exhibition to a minor of newspapers or literary or pictorial sheets, devoted exclusively to the publication of police news, or containing obscene matter, has led to the arrest of Schaefer & Harold, newsdealers, of 700 North Fremont Avenue, in Baltimore. The dealers are charged with selling two copies of a local paper, which is, so the charge entered in the police record says, "made up of criminal news," to a minor, Benjamin Harris, a colored boy. Examination was waived, and they were released on bail for the action of the Criminal Court. The penalty for conviction is a fine of not more than $100 or imprisonment for one year in jail, or both, at the discretion of the court.

THE National Educational Association of the United States has published a valuable volume of the "Proceedings of the International Congress of Education" at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago, held on July 25 to 28, 1893. The subjects discussed were relative to grave problems of higher, secondary, and elementary education, kindergarten instruction, school supervision, the professional training of teachers, art instruction, instruction in vocal music, technological instruction, industrial and manual instruction, business education, physical education, rational psychology in education, experimental psychology in education, and educational publications. The addresses were made by representative professors of all nations, and the entire work was inspired by the most commendable spirit of earnest study, and was admirably aided by unanimity of desire to arrive at practical conclusions.

ARTHUR YOUNG, the clever Chicago cartoonist, whose "Hell up to Date" is in its seventh edition, is engaged on a new art work on entirely different lines. He is interpreting pictorially selected short stories by Eugene Field, Hamlin Garland, Opie Read, James Whitcomb Riley, and others, and is also drawing portraits of the authors whose works will appear in the book. Mr. Young's success in depicting the grotesque and horrible, after the style of Doré, has led some people to believe that his talent with the pencil is confined to that branch of the caricaturist's art. But he is capable of drawing pictures that appeal to the heart and awaken the finer emotions, and the new book which will be issued by the Schulte Publishing Company is to make evident this fact. It will undoubtedly be as well received as the work which pictures the infernal regions in accordance with modern ideas.

D. APPLETON & CO. have made arrangements for an interesting lot of fiction. Among them is S. R. Crockett's next volume, "The Lilac Sunbonnet," and Dr. Conan Doyle's coming novels. They will publish Hall Caine's "The Manxman" in the fall. In their Town and Country Library will soon appear "Outlaw and Lawmaker," by Mrs. Campbell Praed; "A Mild Barbarian," by Edgar Fawcett; and "Dr. Janet of Harley Street," by Arabella Kenealy. They will also publish Miss Kate Sanborn's "Abandoning an Adopted Farm," which recounts her amusing failure in adopting a farm previously abandoned by some one else, forming a sequel to her former book on the same subject. This will appear in their Handy Volume Series, in which they will reissue "Mrs. Limber's Raffle," a novel by William Allen Butler, published anonymously some ten years ago and now first acknowledged by the author of "Nothing to Wear."

IN an addenda to the sale of the late Hon. P. H. Watson's library at Bangs & Co.'s rooms on the 20th inst., there was a particularly interesting item, i.e., the original MS. of Robert Fulton's plan for the destruction of the British, and was thus described:

FULTON'S PLAN FOR THE DESTRUCTION OF THE BRITISH.

FULTON, ROBERT, Inventor of the Steamboat. An original autograph document of four large and closely written quarto pages, entirely in Fulton's legible hand and signed in full, addressed to the First Consul (Napoleon Bonaparte), being his original draft of a scheme by which British ports could be blockaded and their shipping destoyed by means of "plunging boats and carcasses," i. e., submarine vessels and torpedos, dated "Brest the 19th of fructidore An 9."

In beautiful condition. This unique and most interesting historical document was obtained direct from a lineal descendant of Robert Fulton's, and is probably the most valuable piece relating to him extant. It has been stated by historians that Napoleon was heard to have in later years expressed regrets that he had not taken Fulton's proffered aid. Had the desires expressed in this document been carried out, there is little doubt the termination of the wars between France and England would have been materially different.

In the same sale were a number of American first editions, a copy of Prynne's "Histrio-Mastix," for the writing of which Prynne had his nose and ears split and cropped, to say nothing of the pleasing addition of having the letters S. S. (sower of sedition) branded on each cheek with a red-hot iron; a Greek lexicon that was taken among General Burgoyne's effects at Saratoga; a set of rare tracts by William Morris, and a number of other interesting items.

THE representatives in England of R. L. Stevenson have made arrangements to issue a collected edition of his works, which have hitherto been produced by different publishers and in various forms. The total number of volumes will amount to twenty, subdivided into sections, such as Travels and Excursions, Tales and Fantasies, etc.; and the volumes in each section will be numbered separately, so as to allow of the addition of any future works. It is proposed to include articles and papers not hitherto published in a collected form, such as: "The Pentland Rising' (1866); "The Philosophy of an Umbrella," written in college days; the suppressed "Amateur Emigrant" (1880), giving the author's experiences in the steerage of an American liner; and many unsigned contributions to the Portfolio. Mr. Stevenson is himself revising and rearranging these miscellaneous papers, though the actual publication will be under the supervision of his friend, Mr. Sidney Colvin. With the exception of some frontispieces, including an etched portrait of the author by W. Hole, it is intended that the book shall be printed without embellishment, but with the best materials and workmanship that modern resources can supply. A special paper is being made, with R. L. S. for water-mark on each page; and it may be that an entirely new type will be cut. The size will be a moderately large octavo, about 6 by 9 inches; and the binding will be in plain cloth (with paper back-titles). The public subscription will be limited to one thousand copies, each guaranteed by the signature of Charles Baxter, of Edinburgh, to whom "Kidnapped" was dedicated. The printers chosen for the work are T. & A. Constable; the London agents are Chatto & Windus, and the agents for the United States are Charles Scribner's Sons. It is hoped that the first volume will be ready for issue by October.

BUSINESS NOTES.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Hennessey & Hawley, booksellers, have been closed up by the sheriff.

CHICAGO, ILL.—The co-partnership heretofore existing between Fred. C. Laird and W. H. Lee, under the firm-name of Laird & Lee, was dissolved on the 19th inst. by mutual consent, Fred. C. Laird retiring. The business will be continued by W. H. Lee under the name of Laird & Lee.

NEW YORK CITY.—The H. W. Hagemann Publishing Co. has recently been formed, with H. W. Hagemann as president. Mr. Hagemann is well known to the book trade at large through his connection with it for over twenty years, first with D. Appleton & Co., later with Charles Scribner's Sons, and more recently with the Worthington Company. The new firm announces that it is its intention to publish books of sterling quality only, and to make a special feature of works of fiction and children's books. They will shortly issue new editions of the novels of such well-known authors as Marlitt, Heimburg, François Coppée, R. M. Manley, Anne Reeve Aldrich, Florence Marryat, Nataly von Eschstruth, Katherine King, and others, concerning which their new catalogue, now in press, will afford full information. They have also in preparation a line of juveniles.

PORTLAND, ORE.—The J. K. Gill Company has made an assignment to W. B. Ayer.

NOTES IN SEASON.

EDWIN W. DAYTON, 641 Madison Ave., N. Y., has just ready a work on "The History, Manufacture, and Religious Symbolism of the Scarabeus in Ancient Egypt, Sardinia, Etruria, etc., also, remarks on the learning, philosophy, arts, etc., of these people," by Dr. Isaac Myer.

W. H. LOWDERMILK & Co. have just put upon the market "The Missing Link in Shorthand: a treatise on legibility and the acquirel C. Durham. The book, which is controlled by Lowdermilk & Co., is published by the author. It contains numerous photo-lithographed facsimiles of the original typewritten manuscript, and is a compact octavo of about one hundred and fifty pages.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish at once the first volume of the eagerly-awaited "Memoirs of the Baron de Meneval," private secretary of Napoleon I., in which the author describes his first meeting with Napoleon, and pictures the latter's personal habits and daily life. They will also publish shortly "The Purple Light of Love," a story of New York and Newport, by Henry Goelet McVickar. The latest issue in their Town and Country Library is "A Daughter of Music," by G. Colmore (Mrs. Colmore Dunn), which is attracting a remarkable degree of attention in England at present. Mrs. Dunn is the author of "A Conspiracy of Silence," which title for the past six years has been recognized as a political phrase in and out of England.

P. BLAKISTON, SON & Co. have just issued an important work in Dr. George M. Gould's "Illustrated Dictionary of Medicine, Biology, and Allied Sciences." Dr. Gould is already well known as a dictionary-maker, two of his earlier works having become quite popular. His purpose in the present work has been to make a standard medical dictionary, complete and exact. He has been aided by a large corps of assistants, and one of the chief aims has been to incorporate all the new words in recent medical literature; to do this the new medical books together with a large amount of periodical literature have been carefully gone over. A unique feature of the work is the incorporation of a large number of illustrations. Another very important feature is the number of important tables, wherein large arrays of facts are brought together and classified, giving to the book an encyclopædic character. Among these we may point out tables of acids, arteries, bacteria, electric batteries, breath sounds, analysis of milk, ducts, fetometry, foods, hernias, hydro-carbons, lines, murmurs, paralyses, parasites, pigments, planes, points, postures, rales, soaps, stains, triangles, tumors, and a large number of others.

HARPER & BROTHERS have nearly ready "Portraits in Plaster," from the collection of Lawrence Hutton. This volume has the initial attractiveness of novelty of topic, which indeed is almost startlingly interesting. Mr. Hutton's large collection of casts of the faces of eminent men and women, of all types and epochs, has long been famous in the circle of his private acquaintance, and can be catalogued as unique in its scope and dignity. A brief history and survey of it is here afforded the public, the profuse illustrations adding a most essential aid to the reader's study of them. The text is pleasant reading—reminiscences and biographic notes and comments furnishing forth part of it—and is illustrated with 72 reproductions of the faces described. They also announce "The Scarlet Poppy, and other stories," by Harriet Prescott Spofford. This volume displays all of Mrs. Spofford's wealth of vocabulary, ability in the arrangement of situation, and charming individuality. It contains the following stories: "The Scarlet Poppy," "Best Laid Schemes," "An Ideal," "Mrs. Claxton's Skeleton," "The Tragic Story of Binns," "The Composite Wife," and

The picturesque scenery about Monte Carlo is admirably described. The story enacted in its midst illustrates the growth of the gambling spirit in a young American, who, from a brief visit to the tables at Monte Carlo made in a spirit of fun, becomes a desperate gambler, and is led to the verge of suicide; the hero is an illustrator of American books, and is the possessor of a charming home, and a wife and child whom he dearly loves.

In a beautiful villa of Florence a young French widow spends a season surrounded by four or five lovers, whose characters are dissected with the old skill of Bourget, who is an expert in psychology. The young widow encourages and discourages them all, and her final choice is a surprise almost to herself. Maurice Olivier is her young cousin, which accounts for the sub-title of the romance.

Girls become calculating, and learn to trifle with temptation and vice while selfishly sacrificing lovers and friends to their low ambitions.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 30, 1894.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE WEBSTER SETTLEMENT PLAN.

IT was a surprise to the trade when Charles L. Webster & Company assigned, because it was supposed that any enterprise undertaken by "everybody's friend," Mr. Clemens — who seemed to have a business mascot at hand in all his pecuniary affairs — could not be otherwise than successful. It was still more a surprise, and an unpleasant one, to find that on the eve of the assignment all the copyrights of Mark Twain's works had been transferred to Mrs. Clemens as the largest creditor, leaving other creditors of the firm or of its partners to divide what might be left. It is a final surprise that the assets of the firm, which were at first reputed to be worth one hundred cents on the liabilities, should prove to be in such shape that the creditors are asked to co-operate in continuing the business lest they should realize but a small percentage on their claims.

The plan of continuing the business proposes that creditors should unite in authorizing three trustees—Mr. Wm. H. Payne, president of the Mount Morris Bank; Mr. Bainbridge Colby, lawyer, the assignee; and Mr. Charles Barrow, recently connected with the Webster firm—to continue the business, at the risk of the creditors, up to July 1, 1895. At the close of this period, should a majority in interest of the creditors so decide, the business is still further to be continued by the same three trustees.

The plan is very simple. It practically makes all the creditors liable for obligations incurred by the trustees, which do not seem to be limited by the conditions of the instrument but only by the credits which the trustees may be able to obtain. It is fairly questionable whether in case any one creditor were not in a position to pay his share of any such obligation the other creditors might not be additionally liable to that extent, even if any one creditor under the conditions of the peculiar trust might not be held liable for the entire debt. This is the more important, because among the creditors are the Mount Morris Bank and other incorporated institutions, and in case the officers of these had not been duly authorized to pledge the capital of their respective institutions to this plan, their liability might not be recognized by courts and increased burdens might thus be thrown upon the unincorporated creditors. Moreover, as three or four of the large creditors, one of which is the bank and another of which is represented by the second of the trustees, constitute a majority in interest of the creditors, they might, at the end of the period, compel all the other creditors to unite willy nilly in continuing a business which may have been unprofitable the first year. As a matter of fact, the control of the business would doubtless be left by the other trustees practically in the hands of the only one of the three who has any working knowledge of the book business.

The circumstances are, of course, somewhat different from those of the ordinary receivership, because here the creditors are asked to join, without the intervention of a court, in proceedings to protect their interests. On the other hand, the scheme has not the benefit of court protection, which is theoretically if not practically an advantage in the case of receiverships. But it involves very seriously the old question, whether it is well to throw good money after bad by continuing a business which has been unsuccessful, and thus continuing also a competition which is scarcely on even terms with the business of houses which have not failed.

We give this analysis of the plan, not because it is of large importance in itself but because it may become a suggestion for solving other difficulties of the kind, and it seems to us that it might be very disastrous in the long run, if a plan were to become general by which those who had lost money were to be expected either as a matter of good nature or as a matter of business adjustment to furnish capital to continue a business already proved by the fact of its failure to have been unsuccessful. The general adoption of such a plan would certainly not improve the business morale of the book trade.

THE LIMITATIONS OF THE "EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE."

THE preparation and publication of the EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE always bring to us numerous complaints of the sins of omission and commission which that difficult enterprise involves. THE AMERICAN EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE is intended to be a list of school books in general use in American schools, particularly of new publications of the year, intended for that purpose, which are made prominent by the asterisk mark. It is not planned to include books of the higher education, such as are in use in colleges or technical schools, or the numerous books for supplementary reading, or teachers' aids, or works on education, or books of reference. It has been our desire to prepare and publish a list of this class of books as supplementary to the EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE proper, but we have never been able to obtain adequate trade support for a publication which is costly and not justifiable without distinct support. There are large classes of books such as American, English, and other foreign authors, annotated for schools, whose number has become legion, which are undoubtedly of wide use and which might fairly be included in the educational list but for the physical limits of manufacture. The EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE is used for circulation by jobbers and retailers, and therefore cannot be extended to the limits of a large work, such as the "Annual Catalogue." There are other works issued by publishers abroad which are imported by the American branch houses or other agents in small editions or in a fair number of copies, which also would have a claim to place in the EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE, were it possible to publish such a catalogue in extenso.

It is the desire of this office always to furnish the best cataloguing facilities that the trade will pay for. Within these limits the EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE has to be made. It does not pretend to absolute completeness; it does, however, endeavor to fulfil the practical need of most booksellers and most teachers, dealing with subjects and grades connected with the great body of common school education. We regret exceedingly that we cannot honor the request of many of our friends to include this or that work, admirable in itself and suited to more or less use in schools, in this catalogue; but we have endeavored to state frankly and fairly the limitations under which this catalogue is constituted.

FURTHER inquiry satisfies us that the report made to the German Reichstag, referred to in our last issue, is very far from the truth in claiming that only a single German book has been entered under our International Copyright law. On the contrary, a single Berlin publisher has made entry of seven books, all works of fiction, and every year witnesses the entry of some hundreds of books printed in German, and brought out in the United States, in almost every field of education, science, and literature. It is true that most of these are produced by German-Americans. There has been under International Copyright a very large protection of German musical compositions in this country, and their preponderance over books may be set down to the fact that the manufacturing clause was not extended to embrace music.

ANTHONY COMSTOCK OVERRULED.

JUSTICE O'BRIEN, of the Supreme Court, to whom Mr. J. J. Little as receiver for the Worthington Co. made application for instructions concerning the final disposition of certain books which were found among the assets of the company, and which are now in his custody, and respecting which it is alleged by Anthony Comstock of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, that they are unfit for circulation, that they come under the designation of immoral literature, and as such should be excluded from sale, handed down the following decision:

"After consultation with some of my brethren, we have concluded that the following views should be expressed concerning the merits of this motion: that these books constitute valuable assets of this receivership cannot be doubted, and the question before the court for decision on this motion is whether or not they are of such a character that they should be condemned and their sale prohibited. The books in question are Payne's edition of 'The Arabian Nights,' Fielding's novel 'Tom Jones;' the works of Rabelais, Ovid's 'Art of Love,' the 'Decameron' of Boccaccio, the 'Heptameron' of Queen Margaret of Navarre, the 'Confessions' of J. J. Rousseau, 'Tales from the Arabic,' and 'Aladdin.'

"Most of the volumes that have been submitted to the inspection of the court are of choice editions, both as to the letter-press and the bindings, and are such, both as to their commercial value and subject-matter, as to prevent their being generally sold or purchased, except by those who would desire them for literary merit or for their worth as specimens of fine bookmaking. It is very difficult to see upon what theory these world-renowned classics can be regarded as specimens of that pornographic literature which it is the office of the Society for the Suppression of Vice to suppress; or that they can come under any stronger condemnation than that high standard literature which consists of the works of Shakespeare, of Chaucer, of Laurence Sterne, and of other great English writers, without making references to many parts of the Old Testament scriptures, which are to be found in almost every household in the land. The very artistic character, the high qualities of style, the absence of those glaring and crude pictures, scenes, and descriptions which affect the common and vulgar mind, make a place for books of the character in question entirely apart from such gross and obscene writings as it is the duty of the public authorities to suppress. It would be quite as unjustifiable to condemn the writings of Shakespeare and Chaucer and Laurence Sterne, the early English novelists, the playwrights of the Restoration and the dramatic literature which has so much enriched the English language as to place an interdict upon these volumes which have received the admiration of literary men for so many years. What has become standard literature of the English language —has been wrought into the very structure of our splendid English literature—is not to be pronounced at this late day unfit for publication or circulation, and stamped with judicial disapprobation as hurtful to the community. The works under consideration are the product of the greatest literary genius.

"Payne's 'Arabian Nights' is a wonderful exhibition of Oriental scholarship, and the other volumes have so long held a supreme rank in literature that it would be absurd to call them now foul and unclean. A seeker after the sensual and degrading parts of a narrative may find in all these works, as in those of other great authors, something to satisfy his pruriency. But to condemn a standard literary work because of a few of its episodes would compel the exclusion from circulation of a very large proportion of the works of fiction of the most famous writers of the English language. There is no such evil to be feared from the sale of these rare and costly books as the imagination of many even well-disposed people might apprehend. They rank with the higher literature, and would not be bought nor appreciated by the class of people from whom unclean publications ought to be withheld. They are not corrupting in their influence upon the young, for they are not likely to reach them. I am satisfied that it would be a wanton destruction of property to prohibit the sale by the receiver of these works, for if their sale ought to be prohibited, the books should be burned, but I find no reason in law, morals, or expediency why they should not be sold for the benefit of the creditors of the receivership. The receiver is therefore allowed to sell these volumes."

BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATIONS.

NORTHWESTERN BOOKSELLERS' AND NEWSDEALERS' ASSOCIATION.

[Official.]

ALEX. MCNIR, Winona, Minn., Pres.
GEO W. SAYRE, Minneapolis, Minn., Treas.
CHAS. D. RAYMER, " " Sec.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 24, 1894.

To the Book Trade of the United States:

THE third annual meeting of the Northwestern Booksellers' and Newsdealers' Association will be held in the spacious and handsome ladies' ordinary of the West Hotel, Minneapolis, Minn., July 10, 11, and 12. A cordial invitation is not only extended to the book and news trade of all the States in the Northwest, but to those all over the United States; publishers, importers, and wholesale dealers generally, are also requested to send representatives to meet the trade during the week of July 10 to 14.

The secretary has just finished the "Handbook" for 1894, which contains a history of the Association, proceedings for the last two years, constitution, by-laws, proceedings of other book and newsdealers' associations, and many valuable hints to the trade. It contains nearly 100 8vo pages, and is the first book of the kind ever printed. It is safe to say while it contains, perhaps, some errors, it will be a handy book, especially for the trade in the Northwest. It will be sent free to all members and special dealers throughout the Northwest. To those who have not already received one, the secretary will forward a copy on receipt of a two-cent stamp to pay postage.

In the coming convention many subjects of vital importance will come up for consideration, and we believe that any book or newsdealer in the Northwest who neglects to attend the same will lose, not only financially, but otherwise.

Dealers who have a lot of slow books—school or miscellaneous—would do well to bring lists of same, giving dates, condition, and other information. Perhaps some exchange might be made with other dealers.

CHAS. D. RAYMER, Secretary.

NATIONAL ASS'N OF NEWSDEALERS, BOOKSELLERS, AND STATIONERS OF U. S.

THE National Association has issued the following circular to the trade:

Twelve years ago the above Association was organized for social intercourse and protection, hoping that business benefits would follow, believing that by thorough organization and united efforts only can we expect to influence publishers and manufacturers to regulate discounts, establish uniform retail prices, and correct the many abuses now so sadly affecting the interests of the book and newsdealer.

North Carolina, Alabama, Minnesota, and Virginia, besides New York and several other cities, have local associations working with more or less satisfactory results, and we hope to organize at least six more States, and strengthen those already organized.

Won't you help? It is as much to your interest as ours. Can't you get a meeting of the book and newsdealers in your immediate vicinity and organize an association, taking in only reliable dealers that you can count on to stand by any agreement entered into, then call a State meeting at some accessible point and organize a State Book and Newsdealers' Association? . . .

We shall be pleased to have dealers from other States meet with us in New York City, August 15, 1894, our annual meeting, when we will be working under general business, and can show more of the practical workings of our Association than we care to give in a circular letter. Start now, and keep it up until you succeed in organizing a State Association.

VIRGINIA BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE annual meeting of the Virginia Booksellers' Association will be held at Princess Anne Hotel, Virginia Beach, on Tuesday and Wednesday, July 17–18, 1894. President T. S. Beckwith, in sending out the invitations to the meeting, remarks that while the Association has not accomplished all that had been hoped for, it has nevertheless done much good work. Its present condition regarding the question of text-books, to which special attention has been given, is more satisfactory than that of dealers in any other State, so far as can be ascertained. The president urges all members to attend this meeting and to take active part in the discussion of trade matters, specially emphasizing "the absolute necessity of our sticking together as an association, for through such organization is the only hope of improving our business and making it more profitable."

The first day of the meeting will be given up to the transaction of special and routine business and to election of officers. The second day will be devoted to the presentation and discussion of trade issues. These comprise: "International copyright—is it an advantage to the book trade?" which will be opened for discussion by John H. Hume, of Portsmouth; "Trade relations—are they improving between retailers and publishers? How can these two be brought into closer relations?" opened by Chas. W. Hunter, of Richmond; and "Booksellers' Associations—what have they accomplished? Are they worth keeping up?" opened by T. S. Beckwith, of Petersburg. The annual dinner will bring the meeting to a conclusion.

The Association specially urges attendance at this meeting on all publishers or booksellers who are in favor of State or international booksellers' associations, believing that in such movements lies the only hope of a successful following of bookselling as a profession.

Arrangements for special rates at the hotel have been made for all attending the meeting, and special rates for the round trip via Richmond have been secured for July 17.

IN RE THE WORTHINGTON CO.

J. J. Little, receiver for the Worthington Company, has succeeded in recovering the 62 cases of books stored by Mr. Worthington, first in Chicago, and subsequently in the Tower Storage Warehouse in New York, and 26 cases in the Fifth Avenue Storage Warehouse, also in New York, both consignments in the name of Margaret Worthington. These books, together with those released through the decision of Judge O'Brien, of which we make note elsewhere in this issue, and some other property recovered, especially the Bulkley, Dunton & Co.'s claim, which has been decided in Mr. Little's favor by Referee Sandford, represent a value of upwards of $12,000, the proceeds from which will accrue to the profit of the creditors of the defunct concern. Mr. Little intends in a few days to ask the court for permission to pay a dividend of 33⅓ % to the creditors.

In the afternoon of the 28th inst. Mr. Worthington was arrested in front of the Post building on Broadway, New York, on an order signed by Justice Barrett. Mr. Little is suing Worthington to recover $19,085.71, alleged to have been fraudulently appropriated to his own use. According to Worthington's private accounts, not a little of this money went for "pew rent" and "church."

Mrs. Worthington and Miss Elizabeth Sproule, who were also stockholders in the company, are now in the Catskills. It is alleged that they also obtained from the company, through Worthington, more money than they were entitled to, and a suit has been begun against them also. Mr. Little alleges that altogether Worthington and his wife and Miss Sproule obtained $60,000 more from the company than was due them.

Mr. Little claims that during the existence of the company Worthington, as general manager and treasurer, was entitled to a gross salary of $14,541. He began at less than $3000 a year, and then he and his wife and Miss Sproule voted to increase his salary until he was drawing $3500 a year. During these years, it is alleged, he appropriated from the company's money $19,085.71. James C. Arnold, who was for many years Worthington's book-keeper, says that Worthington signed all the commercial paper of the company and directed the payment of all checks. As soon as the company was organized he began to use company funds to pay his individual debts. Worthington's accounts show a $25 or $50 payment every month or two to the church, the payments made to his tailor, and for the rent of his flat and all individual expenses, including large payments to four life insurance companies. It is alleged that Worthington made no accounting to the company for this money. Miss Sproule and Mrs. Worthington seem to have taken turns acting as president of the company, and as such drawing $1000 a year salary.

When Worthington was arrested he was taken to the Sheriff's office, where he remained until 4 o'clock waiting for a bondsman. His bail was fixed at $5000, and, as he didn't get it, he was sent to Ludlow Street Jail.

Mr. James M. Fisk, the receiver's attorney, says: "We think that Worthington has money that rightfully belongs to his creditors. We are suing Mrs. Worthington and Miss Sproule to recover about $40,000, which they have obtained from the company without warrant."

Worthington says that his arrest is an outrage, and that when he can get hold of the books he can prove that the company still owes him money.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A PROTEST FROM THE AUTHOR OF "SHIPS THAT PASS IN THE NIGHT."

El Cajon, San Diego Co., Cal., June 9, 1894.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

My Dear Sir: A volume has recently been issued by The J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Company, of New York, which is being advertised and sold as if it were my work, although but thirty-eight pages out of the one hundred and sixty pages contained in the book were written by me.

The cover page is worded as follows: "The Umbrella Mender," by Beatrice Harraden, author of "Ships that Pass in the Night," and other stories, New York, J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Company.

The story which has been used to give a title to the volume, having been first published in an English periodical, can unfortunately not secure the protection of American copyright. It seems to me, however, that the publishers of this volume are doing me a personal injury, and are giving both to myself and to the reading public just ground for complaint in selling under my name material for which I am in no way responsible, and in giving to the reader as far as it is practicable to do so, by the wording of the cover, the impression that the entire contents of this volume are the work of my pen.

I trouble you with this protest, as I understand that your journal is the recognized organ of the publishers and booksellers of the United States, and because I want to ask American booksellers to aid me, as far as it is in their power, to prevent a volume which is being offered to the public under false pretences from securing for itself any continued sale.

I remain, with much respect,

Your obedient servant,

Beatrice Harraden.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE PENN PUBLISHING CO., of Philadelphia, tendered a reception to the National Association of Elocutionists on the evening of the 26th inst., at the Aldine Hotel.

RIVINGTON, PERCIVAL & CO. have just issued "The Publishing House of Rivington from 1711," reprinted from various sources, and edited by Septimus Rivington, illustrated with fac-similes of title-pages, etc., of the earliest publications of the firm, in 1715 and 1720, and with portraits of some of the former members.

THE well-known and popular Union Series of "Physiology and Health" has been recently purchased by E. H. Butler & Co., Philadelphia, and is now included in their extensive list of approved school and college text-books. These "Physiologies" are among those recommended by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

HURST & CO., 135 Grand St., New York, announce that their stock-room has been badly damaged by fire, but that their entire press-room and pamphlet-bindery are intact and will be started again at once. Orders for their various paper-covered books can be filled without delay, and they are prepared to handle all orders as usual.

W. FINLEY & CO., 113 Market Street, Philadelphia, have published the first two volumes of a "Library of Historic Characters and Famous Events," a reference work, giving descriptive sketches of persons and events selected from the writings of authoritative biographers and historians, edited by A. R. Spofford, Librarian of Congress, Frank Weitenkampff, of the Astor Library, and Prof. J. B. Lamberton. The work is to be in ten volumes, and is sold by subscription only.

J. M. DENT & CO., London, have in active preparation a new edition of Madame de Staël's "Corinne." The edition of Sterne, which Mr. Saintsbury is editing for the same firm, will begin with "Tristram Shandy," will include also the "Sentimental Journey," and a selection of the letters and sermons. They have also in preparation, under R. Brimley Johnson's editorship, a collection of ballads in two volumes, to include all the best-known English, Scotch, and Irish ballads known.

MR. ALBERT TURNER, for thirty years connected with the house of Fowler & Wells Co., and well known in some departments of the publishing trade, is announced as the business manager of a new journalistic venture, to be called Health, a Journal of Practical Hygiene, issued by the Health Publishing Co., 84 Reade St., New York. This company will take up the publication and sale of health literature. The New Methods Co., under the same management, and at the same address, is the successor to the Health Supplies Co., of this city, the publishers of Dr. Forest's "New Method in the Treatment of Chronic Diseases," and is also manufacturing and introducing a variety of appliances for the restoration and the preservation of health.

J. SELWIN TAIT & SONS, in response to a considerable demand for a better edition, have just published a neat impression, bound in cloth, of that clever novel, "The Green Bay Tree," by W. H. Wilkins and Herbert Vivian. The book, which is especially valuable for the curious side-light it throws upon school life at Harrow and college life at Cambridge University, as well as on certain phases of political life in Great Britain, has been attracting considerable attention in England, largely from the fact that nearly all the characters in the book are drawn from life. From the key issued by the publishers it appears that Lord Randolph Churchill, Sir Ashmead Bartlett, Admiral Maxse, Prof. J. Seeley, Lady Dorothy Nevill, Vicomtesse Labrosse, and others equally well known in English politics and society are represented by the characters in the book.

JOHN WILEY & SONS will publish in the fall an authorized American edition of "The Principles of Modern Dairy Practice from a Bacteriological Point of View," by Gösta Grotenfelt, president Mustiala Agricultural College, Finland, translated by F. W. Woll, assistant professor of agricultural chemistry, University of Wisconsin. The Swedish original of Dr. Grotenfelt's work has been received with great favor by European dairymen and scientists, and has been translated into several European languages. The American translation has been revised and made thoroughly applicable to our conditions of dairying; the fundamental principles of the production of pure milk and the manufacture and handling of high-grade dairy products are fully treated in this book. It will no doubt prove very helpful to American dairymen and to students of the bacteriology of the dairy.

H. LE SOUDIER, Paris, has just issued Gaston Routier's "Guillaume II. à Londres et l'Union Franco-Russe" (William II. in London and the Franco-Russian Union), which describes the visit of William II. to the Queen of England, made in July, 1891. The author shows intimate acquaintance with the intricacies of European politics, and his remarks are full of common sense and insight into future complications. He describes the theatrical pageant of the emperor's journey, and gives also a telling picture of the enthusiasm displayed by the two great allies, France and Russia, first at Cronstadt and then at Toulon. M. Le Soudier has also issued an excellent wall-map of Brazil, revised to 1892, by Dr. Innocencio S. Corrêa, assisted by a corps of civil and naval engineers. The map designates railroads, telegraphic and cable communication, steamship lines to and from Brazil, and other necessary information.

THE CENTURY COMPANY will publish in the fall "The Century Cyclopædia of Names," a companion volume (uniform in size and typography) to the "Century Dictionary," edited by Benjamin E. Smith, managing editor of the "Century Dictionary," assisted by a number of eminent specialists. This work, although essentially an independent book, forms an important part of the original plan of the great "Century Dictionary." That work was properly limited, with few exceptions, to the common words of the English language. To relate the proper names to appendixes, where only the briefest treatment of them is possible, was not in accordance with the liberal spirit by which the dictionary was controlled. Accordingly this companion volume was planned, in which the encyclopædic methods of The Century are extended into that great field of names which it could not cover, and its scheme as an "encyclopædic dictionary" is made complete.

The Best Key to Educational Books.

THE

American Educational Catalogue

For 1894,

whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its twenty-fifth year, and that upwards of claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school-books.

50,000 Copies Were Sold Last Season,

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most convenient order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue is made entirely new each year, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and all new books (ready or to be ready for the Fall) are added in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS:

Imprint edition—without publishers' advertisements:

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that page, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5.00, or for $1.00 if plate is sent.

Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.
